Carolina and California Meat Recipes which Satisfy

MISS ROSA MICHAELIS

"Almost everyone enjoys meat," says Miss Rosa Michaelis, the New Orleans cooking authority. "It's highly nutritious, because of its high protein content. It contains valuable fats, mineral salts, and important vitamines.

Carolina Broiled Steak

"Steak is especially good when prepared 'Carolina broiled.' Be sure to select a tender steak, preferably 1½ inches thick.

"Have the skillet piping hot, and salted. Put in the steak, searing it quickly. Turn often. Use two forks, and try not to puncture the steak. Keep all the juices in.

"Steak should be cooked rare in 10 minutes. Well done in 15. When done as you prefer it, place on a heated platter. Season with pepper and butter, and serve piping hot."

For frying steak you need a very hot fire. If you use an oil stove with long chimney burners, you will get most satisfactory results by turning the flame until yellow tips appear, about 1½ inches high above the blue area.

California Peppers

Mrs. Belle DeGraf, San Francisco home economics counsellor, is very fond of California stuffed peppers and West Coast pot roast.

For the former, select short, plump peppers; cut off tops and remove seeds. Put in a saucepan and cover with boiling water to which has been added a bit of soda the size of a pea. Let peppers stand in water about 10 minutes. Drain and place each pepper in a greased muffin pan. Then fill with the following mixture:

Mix 1¼ cups boiled rice with 1 cup of minced ham and 1 cup of savory sauce. Add 2 tablespoons of melted butter to ½ cup of dry fine bread crumbs and place on top of filling. Serve with sauce.

West Coast Pot Roast

Select not less than 4 pounds of beef from the round. With a sharp-pointed knife make deep incisions and force in stuffed olives. Make about 15 incisions. Sprinkle meat with salt and pepper then dredge with flour.

Heat 2 or 3 tablespoons of beef drippings and brown meat on all sides. Then add 3 cups of boiling water, ½ teaspoon salt and one onion for each person. Stick 2 whole cloves in each onion and add to meat.

Cover closely and cook over a low flame under boiling point until meat is tender, about ¾ hour for each pound of meat. Keep about the same amount of water in the kettle, adding more as it cooks away. When cooked, remove meat and onions and thicken gravy.

They had corresponded during the past few years. The father Captain Hollis Taylor died in Kentucky while in the service of the United States army. Taylor is a building contractor in Dayton Ohio.

NEW STADIUM IS BEING BUILT AT MUSKEGON

Charles W. Marsh, successful Muskegon manufacturer, has a hobby—high school athletics. So it was only natural. when it was decided that a new stadium should replace the wooden bleachers at Hackley Field, Muskegon, that the city turned to Mr. Marsh. That was last April. Mr. Marsh brought forward his plan for constructing a new stadium at Hackley Field and today concrete is being poured. By the time the first football game of the season is at hand the first section of the new standium seating six thousand will be ready.

ALLEE SAMEE HAIRCUT RIGHT IN THE STREET!

They just go thru the streets apprising their customers of their presence. When a patron approaches, the barber sets down his stool and begins work---perfecting a haircut and shave in a very few minutes.

COYOTES AND RAIN HARRASSING MOOSE

The excessive rainfall this spring and summer, following a winter of unusually heavy snow is seriously affecting the moose herd on Isle Royale according to Robert MacDonald, of Calumet, chairman of the fish and fisheries committee of the Michigan State Legislature, who has returned from an inspection trip of the island. In the party were Leigh J. Young. state director of conservation. and members of the State Conservation Commission

The visitors observed also that coyotes are becoming more numerous on the island as well as on the mainland of Keweenaw Point. Whether coyotes are responsible for a scarcity of rabbits and deer is not explained but sportsmen believe small game as well as deer are prey of these animals.

In past years the area immediately adjacent to McCargoe's Cove on the Windego trail, and in Hay Bay was the favorite wallowing ground for moose but the high waters have destroyed forsage there and moose now graze at Tobin's arbor on the main island, near the largest summer resort on the island. Destruction of the wallows has forced moose to seek higher ground where they are deprived of certain elements that are more plantiful in the lowlands and if there is no decline in the water level, conservationists are fearful that moose will be driven from Isle Royale.

The woman is never the silent partner in the matrimonial firm.

HERE IS THE ANSWER TO GREAT CHINESE CONFLICT

The Chinese tangle is clarified by this report from the front which appeared recently in a London daily;

The report that Gen. Chang Chong Chung has broken off relations with Gen. Chong Chung Chang is now found to be incorrect. Gen. Cheng Chong Chung is still fighting for Gen. Chung Ching Chang. and the general who has broken off relations with Gen. Chong Chung Chang is Gen. Ching Chung Chong not Gen. Chang Chong Chung Chong not Gen. Chag Chong Chung, Gen. Ching Chung Chong has issued a public statement erplaining that the reason he has broken off relations with Gen. Chong Chung Chang is because Gen. Chong Chang Ching has betrayed Gen. Cheng Chang Ching whereas Gen. Chong Cheng Chang is still paying Gen. Chong Ching Chung a subsidy to prevent any fighting in Gen. Chong Cheng Ching's territory. Gen. Ching Chung Chung has therefore decided to throw in his lot with Gen. Chang Chong Ching and support Gen. Chong Chung Chong in his alliance with Gen. Chung Chong Ching.

ALMA'S HOPES RUNNING HIGH

Hopes are held that at least ten letter men from the Michi[illegible] Intercollegiate foot ball ch[illegible]ions of nineteen twenty six will return to Alma College. A number of last year's freshmen are expected to make a strong bid for the outfit this fall.

The men expected back are Leslie Hawthorne; Edgar Karpp; Ellsworth Simmons and Haurant Aroxion, of Detroit; Jack Bauer of Saginaw; Clifford Erickson of Newberry; Kent MacGregor of Pontiac Gordon Lamb, of Alma; Merrill Holdship of Ubly. Russel Riley of Detroit a member of an Alma team a few years ago and Lankton, another Detroiter, who is expected to return to Alma again this year to complete his college course, will also be in uniform. This will insure at least eleven letter men back at the beginning of the season with the possibility that the list may be increased by one or two other old men, among them Veeder from the Western Normal and Wagner from Central Normal, who returned to Alma last year, but were not eligible.

Among the freshmen of last year available this season will be Harry Tiderington, Coplin, Kippert, Jack Leiphan and Alfred Seng of Detroit. Golden of Highland Park; Francis Angell of Hastings, and Paul Brend of Sellersville, Pa.

Negotiations are under way at the present time between Western Normal winner of the title in the Michigan Collegiate Athletic Association and Alma College winner of the M. I. A. A. title, for a game at Kalamazoo, probably, Saturday October first.

WOLVERINE MIDGETS AS COMPARED TO 'OLD DAYS'

J[illegible]ed by the standards in vogue when Fielding H. Yost first coached a University of Michigan foot ball team, the Wolverines this year will be a band of Lilliputians. But one possible member of the squad tips the scales about the two hundred pound mark, twenty five of the sixty candidates are under the one hundred seventy pound mark with the lightest scaling down to one hundred pounds.

In spite of the lack of weight of the squad as a whole the team that the "railbirds" are picking to start the season with four first year men in the lineup will have ends that average one hundred eighty three; tackles at one hunderd ninety two; guards at one hundred seventy eight and center at one hundred seventy four.

Back of the line the quarter will tip the beam at one hundred seventy, the halfbacks at one hundred sixty and the fullback at one hundred ninety.

However, based on the standards of Germany Schultz, Babe Carter, Octy Graham and some of the other heavyweights of a quarter of a century ago, this year's squad is made up of pygmies, hardly to be considered as possible foot ball players.

A fundamentalist in education is one who believes that the President of the Institution should receive as large a salary as the Third Assistant Coach.

FAILURE TO PERMIT CUT ON COAL STIRS POTTER

Failure of the Interstate Commerce Commission to permit railroads to reduce the rates voluntarily at once on coal shipments from the Kentucky and Virginia fields to lake ports indicates the territory dependent upon lake shipment is not adequately represented on the commission, W. W. Potter, attorney-general, charged.

Representatives of this territory would appreciate the seriousness the situation and would take steps to protect the consumer, Potter declared.

He insisted that Michigan, and some other states in this territory have been getting unfair treatment in the matter of freight rates

TRUCKS GAINING IN FRUIT REGION

The motor truck is becoming of increasing importance in the marketing of Michigan's fruit crop, H. H. Shoemaker, representative of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics reports in his summary of the nineteen twenty eight fruit deals in this state.

While accurate data on the amount of apples, peachs, pears and grapes moved by motor trucks is lacking, Mr. Shoemaker said it is conservatively estimated that fully as many carloads of fruit were moved to market last year by motor vehicles as were hauled by rail and boat.

Peach shipments formed a big share of the truck business. Michigan's nineteen twenty six peach crop filled approximately one thousand five hundred sixty four thousand bushels, yet only six hundred seventy five cars were shipped by rail and boat. In the days before the commercial development of the motor truck a one thousand five hundred thousand bushel crop would yield from one thousand two hundred to two thousand cars for shipment by rail and boat.

Michigan fruit growers can safely plant more Bartlett and Seckel pears, the Federal markert specialist says. He believes there will be a strong demand for these varieties if the fruit is well graded and packed.

Canners, he said have opened a new markets for Kieffer pears.

Nature makes few mistakes; if she puts a generous amount of bone in the head it's because there is no other material available.

SQUARER DEAL IS ASKED FOR SOIL

A farmer can not rob the soil and be a good Christian in the opinion of M. L. Noon, of Jackson, president of the Michigan State Farm Bureau.

It is the farmer's first duty to be a producer," said Mr. Noon recently in addressing a group of farmers on the subject, 'Christian motives in agricultural practice.

"People must be fed and clothed The materials for these prime necessities of human life can come only from the soil. The farmer, as best he may, fulfills his destiny in bringing this about.

'How about the Christian motive here. Whose is the land in the last analysis. Whence come the sunshine and the rain. What about the stored-up fertility of generations past. Whose responsibility is it to see that a little more fertility is left than when the present generation took the land. What about the sincerity of a man's prayer for the blessing of God when he persistently and in the face of common knowledge robs the soil and thus robs prosperity."

Mr. Noon pointed out that a second phase of farm life in which the Christian motive may figure is in the distribution of farm products and in the buying of farm supplies.

'Until comparatively recent times, the farmer was not even conceded the right to say anything at all as to the distribution of his products," he declared. "The general understanding was that the farmer produced crops, brought them to the buyer who paid whatever he wished. With this sort of regime there was little or no incentive for quality production and unfortunately, the state of mind in which many farmers found themselves was that of getting even with the other fellow.

URGES FARMS MADE ATTRACTIVE TO KEEP FAMILY LIFE INTACT

To prevent family life from breaking down in all parts of the world, the farm must be made on attractive place to live, in the opinion of Dr. Frank De Vuyst, director-general of agriculture for Belgium, who visited the Michigan State College in connection with the International Country Life Conference recently.

"The public mind is not sufficiently in favor of the farmer," said Dr. De Vuyst, "Govermental policies do not consider the farmer. The people of the cities forget the farmer.

"Many men have tried to change this situation but I am afraid it is up to the farmer to change it himself.

"The world can not exist without the farmer. Suppose all the people of the world should be locked up in cities and factories.. Six months later all would be dead. But if all went to the country, six months later they would be very healthy.

'We can not fail by making farm life better, Humanity started with farming, and so long as humanity exists, farming will be necessary But the farm should pay.

'All over the world, except in Denmark, the average farmer is working very hard and is not earning his money as easily as other people. In Denmark, the farmer lives in a fine cottage and is as comfortable as the man in the city But the farmers of other countries are not so well off."

FENNVILLE GROWER MAKES PEACH BLUSH TO PLEASE BUYERS

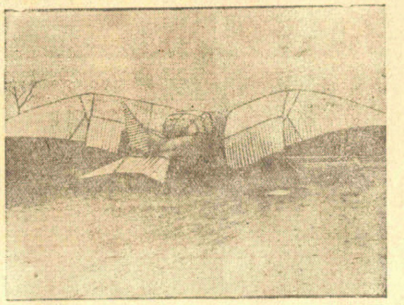
Just to please the eye of the fickle consumer George DuVall of Fennville fruit grower, is experimenting this year in an effore to put color in the cheek of an otherwise colorless peach.

Mr. DuVall has observed in the past that consumers are willing to pay fancy prices for peaches with rosy cheeks. regardless of the qualities of the fruit. To supply what the consumers want, he is attempting by artificial means to put color where no color exists.

Half of his large peach orchard west of Fennville has been sprayed with arsenical dusts. The other half has been treated with sulphur dust.

Mr. DuVall is working on the theory that the arsenical sprays will burn the cheeks of the peaches thereby causing them to take on color where otherwise they would be colorless or would have only a trace of pink.

SEA GULL INSPIRED IN VENTION OF THIS AEROPLANE



NEW YORK aeranautic circles were recently startled by the appearance of this aerial newcomer-a plane, with wings working on the principle of a sea gull's and designed, primarily, to land on so restricted a space as the ordinary roof or yard. Its veneer fuselage is twenty feet long---its duralumin wings are each twenty one feet in length and its four hundred fifty lbs. motor is capable of doing one hundred forty miles an hour.

ALFALFA IS KEY TO FARM WEALTH

Alfalfa. Is there a funnier word in the English language.

"Al-fal-fy", chuckles the town man.

To him the word stands for every thing rustic. He thinks of the rude unlettered countrymen so often pictured in the movie cartoon—but so seldom found in real life.

"Al-fal-fy", laughs the farmer, too.

But the farmer has another and more important reason for his mirth. Alfalfa, like the genie that appeared when Aladdin rubbed his lamp, is a magic plant that goes down into the earth and brings up wealth for him.

Consider its accomplishments;

It conserves and builds up the soil, as no other plant can.

It gives the heaviest yields of hay.

It is the most healthful food known for livestock.

It helps keep the boy on the farm.

Once thought a difficult crop to grow except in the West's alkaline soil, alfalfa has increased in acreage from seventy four thousand to four houndred ninety six thousand in Michigan in the last seven years

Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the farm crops department of the Michigan State College who has lead the Michigan alfalfa movement says it has increased the annual income of Michigan farmers by fifteen million dollars or seventy five dollars for every farm.

The Arabs knew alfalfa as 'alfalfacah,' 'which to them meant "best forage'. Xerxes, the Persian warrior, carried it into Greece in four hundred eighty B. C.. Later Alexander the Great of Macedonia took it into Italy. He grew it in the vicinty of his permanent camp as food for men, to prevent scurvy and for his horses.

To the Romans the plant became known as "lucern". Columella, the first agricultural writer wrote declared it was the "best forage crop for any kind of famished beast.", that it gave five crops a year and that is fertilized the land.

Through Roman aggression the plant spread to France and Spain and the gold seeking conquistadors of Spain carried it to Mexico and Peru and Chile.

Geroge Washington who knew it as "lucern' brought it to the United States and tried to grow it on his Virginia farm, but gave up when it turned yellow and died. The reason which he could not then know, was that his land was acid.

But the plant got a foothold in the alkaline soils of the West. It was introduced from two sources--by the Spanish monks of Mexico and by the gold-seekers of eighteen forty nine, who brought it to California from Chile, having procured it on the long trip around the Horn.

By the early sixties it had spread to Utah, where the Mormons settled. From there it went to Colorado, Idaho, Montana and neighboring states. Now, thanks to modern science, it can be grown almost any where in the United States. Its value is recognized universally by agricultural experts.

STATE SENDS BLUEGILLS TO CALHOUN COUNTY LAKE

At the request of R. H. Scott, president of the Reo Motor company, the department of conservation has ordered a shipment of thirty five hundred bluegills sent to Gull lage in Calhoun county.

A carload of large and small mouth black bass arrived recently at Watersfeet in the upper peninsula for distribution in lakes of that section. A second carload will be shipped next month. These are all from the Grand Rapids Comstock Park Hatchery.

GANDER IS ON ROAD TO VENERABLE OLD AGE

"Old Boy" is approaching his eightieth birthday, a veritable Methuselah among geese To one who sees him honking his way through the sunset of an unusually long life, it is apparant that "Old Boy" carries his age well and he looks at a stranger so wisely that he seems on the verge of imparting his secret on how to live longer that those more common birds about him.

Chauncey DePue like 'Old Boy' might say with truth that he always goes to bed at sundown and has cut out entirely of late on strong cigars.

"Old Boy" is a gander of course, and has been a member of the family of Mrs. Tryphina Stark of Nunica, Mich., ever since the early married life of Mrs. Stark, who is now seventy four years of age. Her husband, Henry Stark, who died a few months ago, traced 'Old Boy's lineage through the old who sold him "Old Boy."

TELLS HOW TO AVOID ORCHARD WINTER LOSS

Fruit growers can reduce their losses from winter injury if they will practice sowing cover crops in their orchards on or before Aug. first, H D. Hootman of East Lansing secretary of the Michigan Horticultural Society, advised orchardists.

Cover crops check tree growth and harden the wood preparatory for cold weather. Hootman explained. Any crop making a vigorous upright growth to hold the leaves and snow next winter is suitable for use in the orchards he added.

81 YEARS FAIL TO KEEP HIM FROM MOUNTAIN TOP

The latest score against Father Time was made by Eber Snow, eighty one years old, who recently scaled the four hundred foot sand dune at Saugatuck.

What makes the ascent of Mt. Baldhead particularly difficult is the inability of the climber to take a step anywhere on its steep sides without slipping back almost the length of the step. Scaling it is, therefore, the equivalent of climbing a mountain three or four times its height.

There is no easy path to the top of the shifting sand. What appears to be shrubbery clinging to its sides are the tops of tall trees almost buried under the mass of sand.

Lured by glowing descriptions of the panorama that unfolds itself from the top of the dune Mr. Snow, at a recent family picnic in Saugatuck, announced he would climb Baldhead. Within three-quarters of an hour he was at the top.

$1,000 IN REWARDS for Poultry Thieves!
The Michigan Business Farmer

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

If You Are a Poultry Raiser

you need this protection and this paper is cooperating in this campaign by offering three signs, (size 6x8 inches like the above) to be posted on your farm buildings, a certificate of membership in the Michigan Business Farmer Service and Protective Bureau, a one year new or renewal subscription to

Can The Church Teach Morality And Citizenship?

Fortunately the church does not have to rest its whole case upon the formal curricula it offers its children. It is beginning to heed the word of educators that children learn citizenship, not by talking about it, but by practicing being good citizens. Moral character seems to be formed not so much by exhortation as by activity which results in the formation of habits of ethical choice.

In its gymnasiums, clubs, Boy Scout troops, groups of Campfire Girls, Pioneers, Girl Reserves, Knights of King Arthur, and in the more progressive forms of week day religious education, the church shows signs of really teaching morality and citizenship. It was in a staid and conservative church in a large city that a gang of boys about fifteen years of age had become famous for their misdeeds. They climbed up in the tower and shook down plaster into the room where dignified ladies were meeting in peaceful missionary societies. They piled garbage cans on the steps to annoy the sexton and broke into the building at night to disarrange the furniture. For some years one Sunday school teacher after another had labored to implant ideals of citizenship. The boys studied Bible history, biography, and morality. They took for one text book Christian Life and Conduct. Meanwhile their habits of citizenship grew less and less desirable.

Finally a young man came to lead their club, and coach their basketball team. There was a slight evidence of improvement in conduct after some weeks. Then this leader took the boys to a basement room, and persuaded them that it had the "makings" of a carpenter shop. The boys carried out old furniture, cleaned walls and windows, built a bench out of old planks, brought in tools from home and second hand stores, and were ready for business. After building some articles for their own use, the boys ran out of a job. The sexton asked for their help on a broken bench. The boys fixed it.

"Got anything more for us to do?" From out of a storeroom the sexton produced all the chairs, tables and benches which should have been mended years before. Fully sixty were repaired during this streak of energy. Then the boys were told that the Beginner's department needed a combination sand-table and work table. They drew plans, and made an article so commendable that the officials of the church recognized their work with praise.

Meanwhile, the shift in attitude had been most noticeable. Somehow, thinking "what 'twere good to do" had never reached them. But the activity did. The boys had become, in an unbelievably short time, trustworthy citizens of the church community.

Within that same church there were other groups of children forming habits of morality and citizenship in other connections. Some were learning the meaning of democracy for the first time. On the streets and in the school they had known only anarchy or tyranny. To run a club by themselves was an undertaking so foreign to their previous training that their mistakes tried sorely the patience and physical resources of the church. But how much of noise in the halls and loosened plaster and wild rough house ought a church to be willing to stand, to have a crowd off the street saying at the close of the year, as they dispatched their club business with unusual peace and alarcity, "Gee, guys 'member how we was last fall?"

Some other groups were studying the needs of the poor in the neighborhood, getting acquainted with Charity Organization Societies and, in contrast, with harmful giving on the part of some well-intentioned but poorly trained citizens. Other groups were making the adjustments of self-sacrifice required in the production of club plays, and club parties in which some did the quiet, unnoticed work which made the whole enterprise successful. One group of young men after studying the problems of inter-racial and inter-denominational friction raised by the Ku Klux Klan started an investigation of the moral conditions in the neighborhood. Their leader was more than a little surprised to find that after all their years in a better-than-ordinary Sunday school, they had never considered the problem of prostitution from a Christian viewpoint. Most of them took the view of the police captain that it was a necessary affair and, on the whole, beneficial rather than otherwise.

With the impetus of such activities behind them, several groups of older boys decided that it was time something was done about a few so-called "soft drink" places in the neighborhood, out of which men staggered drunkenly at late hours of the night. They put up their proposals to the men of the church. The men hemmed and hawed. Finally they said to them:

"You boys have the right idea, but the thing can't be done. The boot-legging interests are too powerfully entrenched here. It would be as much as our lives (and incidentally our businesses) are worth, to start such a thing. We advise you to keep out of it. We will not support you in it."

It would be only fair to parallel such a discouraging instance of the church's actions in teaching citizenship with one of the many instances in which adults with children have joined in activities for the good of the community. Sometimes these have been law enforcement campaigns. Sometimes they have been endeavors toward cleaner politics. Sometimes they have resulted in new playgrounds, libraries, parks or community houses. To the extent that children have been permitted to share in such experiences with their elders, there have been undoubted gains in citizenship and character.

Can the church teach morality and citizenship? Yes, provided it is willing to pay the price. The price is heavy, for the gain is great The church which would teach morality and citizenship must be willing to provide a plant for activities seven days a week. It must provide trained leaders for these activities. It must be willing to set aside about two-thirds of the material now comprising its curriculum of religious education, in the interests of material which will deal with life here and now. It must be willing to lose a considerable portion of confidence and financial support on the part of the people who do not want the questions of sex ethics, economic justice, racial and international relations raised in a vital fashion with children and young people. It must be willing to say good-bye to the concept of the church member as a passive receiver of elegantly decorated good advice, and welcome the concept of the church member as engaged in the active social task of building a kingdom of God out of drunkards and harlots, tenements, factories, and preparations for war. It must be willing to forget the unadulterated selfishness of the old saying about children being seen and not heard replacing it by a willingness to take children with adults in the major enterprises of life, giving more than lip sanction to manifold teachings about placing the child in the midst, becoming as a little child, and following the leadership of a child. The church which would teach morality and citizenship must evidently venture upon dangerous and unfrequented ways. Will the church dare to teach the Kingdom of God and his righteousness at such a price?

Let us fervently hope so. No other institution, save the home, makes any pretence of teaching so high a citizenship. It ill prepares the citizens of a world society to learn his ethic in an isolated segment of that society, taught by a partisan schoolmaster, under the sanction of a tribal diety. There will be no morality deep rooted enough to permit whole-hearted living in a stressful age, unless that morality be religious in its very nature. There will be no citizenship high enough or broad minded living in an expanding society, unless that citizenship be based upon membership in a brotherhood which transcends class or sect or nation. Indeed, it hardly seems possible that worthwhile morality and citizenship can be taught apart from religion. Let us hope that the church will find in this opportunity a pearl of so great price that all that it has is little enough to sacrifice, if necessary, to obtain it.—The Adult Bible Class Magazine,

The End

Racing across Saginaw Bay in a hired speedboat, the wife of a Bayport physician brought one of her husband's patients to the clinic of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association then being held at Tawas City. The physician's wife explained that her husband was unable to come himself and since he desired the patient to be examined, she had volunteered to act as attendant, and she and the patient had taken the quickest route to the clinic. The examination and diagnosis was made and patient and acting attendant returned to Bayport in the speedboat.

Exhibits of septic tanks for the disposal of the household wastes, and economical methods of installing water systems were also magnets that assisted in bringing 4032 people to the 116 meetings held during the tour. The truck visited thirteen counties during the summer.

Through the cooperation of the State Board of Health, 635 samples of well water were collected for analysis in the State laboratories. Reports of the results of the analysis of each sample will be sent to the person interested.

The economy of space used in placing the exhibit of bath room fixtures in the truck convinced many people that they could install these fixtures in their homes without expensive alterations of rooms in their houses.

"The plan is simple. It provides, briefly, for the following: Regular and frequent Masses and other services in all sections of the district; regular hours for confession in all the missions; catechism classes, of one hour each, in each church on Saturday afternoon; catechetical instructions for children and adults in farm houses and other centers where it is difficult or impossible to reach the church for Saturday classes; correspondence courses of instruction for widely-scattered families; pastoral visits to every family in the district at least three times annually; complete and constantly-revised census; weekly and monthly reports from each priest, and weekly meetings of the priests to discuss the work.

"Each priest has his own room in the mission house at Lapeer, at his disposal at all times. However, the three who administer the outlying missions find that distances are too great for a trip home each night, so they occupy rooms in Catholic homes, or hotels. Likewise, meals are taken wherever it is possible to obtain them while the priest is at work in his district.

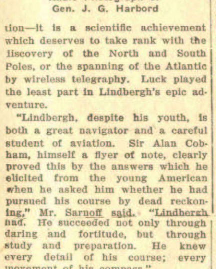
Compares Lindbergh to Marconi

Memorable Flight Was As Great Scientific Achievement As Discovery of North and South Poles.

David Sarnoff, Vice-President and General Manager of the Radio Corporation of America, referring to Lindbergh's flight in a recent address before the Chicago Association of Commerce, said:

"Lindbergh's 3,000 - mile flight across the Atlantic Ocean is more than the most romantic adventure in the lifetime of the present generation—it is a scientific achievement which deserves to take rank with the discovery of the North and South Poles, or the spanning of the Atlantic by wireless telegraphy. Luck played the least part in Lindbergh's epic adventure.



Radio Photograph of Gen. J. G. Harbord

"Lindbergh, despite his youth, is both a great navigator and a careful student of aviation. Sir Alan Cobham, himself a flyer of note, clearly proved this by the answers which he elicited from the young American when he asked him whether he had pursued his course by dead reckoning," Mr. Sarnoff said. "Lindbergh had. He succeeded not only through daring and fortitude, but through study and preparation. He knew every detail of his course; every movement of his compass."

The subject of Mr. Sarnoff's address was, "Joining Sight to Sound in Radio." The latest phase of radio development, he asserted, was in the transmission of sight as well as sound.

"We are just entering upon an era of communication by the square inch," Mr. Sarnoff continued. He predicted that the dot and dash system of transmission now universally in use, would eventually give way to facsimile, or visual transmission, when the complete message or picture would be flashed across oceans or continents in photographic form.

"It is an interesting reflection," he pointed out, "that after thousands of years of communication experience, mankind will probably go back, not in the too far future, to picture transmission—pictures of words as well as of photographic reproductions of images—for the basis of his written communication system. We are just entering upon the era of communication by the square inch.

"The problem of a practical system of fascimile transmission is the problem of obtaining high speed transmission. The basis already has been laid by the photo-radiogram service now in commercial operation by the Radio Corporation of America. During the past year we have transmitted hundreds of photographs, sketches and architect's drawings by radio between New York and Europe. In our laboratories sheets of typewriting containing over 1,500 ten-letter words have been perfectly transmitted and received in a few minutes, through improved transmitting and receiving apparatus with which we are now experimenting.

"From an average sending time of 40 minutes per photograph when the service was first established a little over a year ago, the commercial time of transmission has been reduced to 20 minutes. Under laboratory conditions recently photographs have been transmitted by our engineers in two minutes with satisfactory detail. Much greater speeds are expected in the future."

Recent developments in the great electrical laboratories of the country, Mr. Sarnoff said, would point to the possibility of a new motion picture technique, through the synchronization of sound with the moving picture on the screen.

"The motion picture art, its own critics admit, has much to gain from association with the electrical arts," he continued. "The really great advances made by the motion picture industry have been largely in the artistic field, in methods of distribution, in the development of palatial auditoriums for moving picture presentations. Considerable progress has been made, it is true, in the technique with reference to the actinic values of light, shutters, lenses, and the physical details of the photography. Nevertheless, the motion picture cannot afford to rest on its laurels, in these days of remarkable technical development. Insofar as the present tendency in radio communication is towards sight as well as sound, both radio and the moving picture industry are working in the same medium—light.

"Three distinct lines of progress are open to motion picture engineers. These are: (1) Authentic natural coloration; (2) Three-dimensional or stereoscopic projection; (3) The synchronization of sound and motion on the screen.

"Although it is clear that the silent drama of today has won a permanent place for itself, further development calls for a motion picture that has the color of life, perfect perspective and sound synchronized with sight.

"Since the synchronization of sound and sight on the motion picture screen adds exposition to demonstration, in the educational sense, a comparatively new field for motion picture development is opened up by this system. Educators for years have decried the fact that the motion picture has not played sufficient part in our educational system. But it is not difficult to understand the comparative lack of success of the present educational picture, cluttered with explanatory titles which necessarily delay the action, and are often obscure besides. Educational pictures might have a vastly greater entertainment value with the accompaniment of the human voice. Even the theory of relativity might be made interesting to a lay audience if we could both hear as well as see, Professor Einstein as he made diagrams on a blackboard, which should be far more enlightening than any abstract explanations through written titles. An astronomer could explain the inner workings of a giant telescope at a modern observatory, focus it on Mars and give an interesting lecture while the motion picture recorded its celestial observations through the telescope's eye."

Cleaning Crystals

A good method of cleaning a crystal, which apparently has lost some of its sensitiveness, is to place it in a small bottle containing some ether. Shake the bottle vigorously, after which remove the crystal with a pair of tweezers. It should be ready to use again after this cleaning, and if it doesn't, a second cleaning will bring it back to its normal strength.

When Buick improves upon Buick —the standard for the year is set

Buick for 1928 introduces a higher standard of beauty and luxury than the world has ever known. Buick interiors are as modish as exquisite drawing-rooms—as harmoniously colored —and as comfortable. Buick's new Fisher bodies are low-swung without any loss of head-room or road-clearance.

And so, down to the smallest detail of construction, wherever refinements could be made, Buick has made them. Again Buick has improved upon Buick. Again the standard for the year is set.

Promotion Of Good Agricultural Methods

Better farming is stabilizing the rural land values of the United States, and within the next few years, the prices will begin to improve, according to a comprehensive survey of the trend of land values just completed by the Blue Valley Creamery Institute of Chicago. The statistics show that in some sections, there has been virtually no decline in farm land values since 1922, while for the country as a whole, the downward movement, which started in 1921, has been less pronounced since 1924 than in the three preceding years. This indicates that a period of stability is at hand, according to the Institute.

The tendency of land prices to stabilize is credited to three major factors:

1. Prices of farm products and net farm incomes have followed an upward trend since the low point of the depression period of 1921.

2. Foreclosures and other forced liquidations have in a number of areas probably exerted most of their influence. Their depressing effect may be expected to decrease progressively as these forced sales are absorbed by the land market.

3. Reduction in mortgage rates of interest already have been announced in a number of areas. An easing of the credit situation elsewhere appears to be under way, with improvement in country banking conditions and an apparently increasing general supply of funds seeking investment.

The price of farm land is determined primarily by the profits in farming, and the Institute finds that the promotion of good farming methods has had a strong, steadying effect on farm land values. Good tillage, well fed soils, the planting of crops to feed the farm family and growing of a diversity of crops, especially legumes so as to furnish practically all the protein requirements of cattle, hogs, horses, sheep and poultry on the farm, are the factors that are influencing the earning capacity of the farms. Wherever this type of good farming has been practiced the drop in land values has not been nearly as severe as in sections where "chance profit" types of farming are practiced, the Institute has discovered.

The depression in the nineties caused a drop in land values statistics show, but they started upward again and doubled from 1900 to 1910. This rise continued until 1915. The war started a new situation by increasing farm profits and resulting in inflation, which extended to land values. The average acre price of land and buildings shown by the 1920 census was $69.38, or 86 percent more than in 1910. Then came deflation. The census of 1925 showed that farm land prices were down to $53.57 per acre, or more than halfway back to the 1910 level. The additional decline in the last two years probably has put the price down to about $50 an acre. The decline in wholesale prices of farm products, the maintenance of high wages, the transportation and marketing costs and of high prices of industrial products, the rise in taxes, all narrowed the margin of profit in farming and depressed land values.

An analysis by sections reveals the fact that in the last few years, the decline of farm land values has been checked or reversed in all parts of the country, except in the north central and mountain states. Even in these sections, the slopes of the price curves have become much less steep since 1924 than the three preceding years.

Kick Them Out

About the worst specimen of humanity that crawls around over the universe, is the smooth-tongued shark who makes a practice of selling worthless stock and bonds to women who have suddenly come into possession of a legacy through the death of a relative, usually the husband.

In most cases women have never been schooled in the matter of handling money. Always protected from the gruelling thrusts of the world, from its pitfalls and dishonest practices, it is no wonder they fall easily under the influence of the skunk who promises large returns and easy days from their investments.

In every city are scores of so-called investment houses where every morning is conducted a school of salesmanship for the purpose of training high-powered salesmen to go out and separate the unwary from their money. Country papers are carefully scanned for information that will enable them to call at the home of the widow shortly after the demise of her mate. The expression of a little hyprocritical sympathy and her confidence is soon gained, and once gained it is comparatively easy to unload shares in some worthless enterprise that promises to bring rich returns. In nine cases out of ten it means the loss of both principle and interest.

Many a bereft woman can testify in the midst of her grief to having trusted her entire fortune into the hands of one of these sharks, and instead of comfort and security in her declining days, she was forced to again become a bread winner. All this paper can do is to sound a solemn warning to beware of this merciless tribe. Consult your banker if you have money to invest and in every case where their advice is followed it will be found no mistake has been made.

Certified Seed Proves Superior

Certified seed has again demonstrated its superiority. Members of the Michigan Crop Improvement Association, according to the farm crops department at M. S. C. have produced this year from certified seed, 10,140 bushels of American Banner wheat on 309 and three quarters acres—an average yield of 32.7 bushels per acre as compared to the state average of 17.4 It is expected, however, that the state average this year will be somewhat higher than usual.

According to the farm crops department, certified seed wheat affords the grower valuable protection. It assures genuine variety, quality, germination and freedom from weeds and disease. The first inspection is made in the field just before maturity to determine freedom from disease and weeds. The threshed grain is again inspected to determine quality. The inspector is employed by the crop improvement association and works under the supervision of the farm crops department of the college.

Of the three varieties certified by the crop improvement association, American Banner and Red Rock have produced the highest yields this year. Berkley Rock produced slightly lower yields but is said to be almost immune to smut. The highest yield turned in this year among the members of the crop improvement association was 50.8 bushels per acre of American Banner on five and one quarter acres grown by E. L. Stockwell, of St. Johns. The second highest was 50 bushel per acre of Red Rock on 11 acres grown by C. D. Finkbeiner, of Clinton.

Better Farming Is Fair Exhibit Theme

Better farm practices and their relation to European corn borer control will be the central theme of the M. S, C. exhibit at the State Fair at Detroit, September 5 to 10

Realizing the menace of the borer to the state's agriculture and that control methods are otherwise good farm practices, departments of the college are joining in preparing a unified exhibit. The display, which will occupy 90 feet of space, will be housed in the new agricultural building on the fair grounds.

Typical borer damage will be shown by means of specimens which have been prepared in their natural colors by the entomology department. Stalks containing live borers will afford an opportunity to see the pest in action. The life history and habits will also be porrayed with charts and photographs

Proper plow adjustment and the use of wires and chains as a means of covering corn refuse will be exhibited by the agricultural engineering department. As better and deeper plowing requires more power, the four horse tandem hitch will be demonstrated to show how this condition may best be met.

Maize Amargo, a borer resistant corn from South America, will be shown for the first time by the Farm Crops department. The value of silage in beef, sheep and hog rations will be emphasized by the livestock departments. Exhibits of the Soils department will show the value of fertilizer in speeding up the corn crop.

The exhibit is designed primarily to help farmers meet changing conditions which the borer menace imposes and to provide systems of farming which will enable farmers to live with the borer.

Giving A Trip To A Whole Legislature

WHEN the members of both houses of the legislature of Hawaii went recently as the guests of James D. Dole to Lanai, the sixth largest island in the group, they marveled at the change which has been brought about in four years—a cactus-covered, South Sea Island converted into fertile plantations which this year will produce approximately 25,000 tons of pineapples. In a few years, it is estimated, Lanai will produce one quarter of the entire pineapple output of Hawaii, the greatest pineapple - raising country in the world.

The legislative party arrived at Kaumalapau harbor, which is one of the first wonders that awaits visitors to Lanai. Kaumalapau harbor was literally blasted out of the sea at a cost of $750,000—one of the greatest engineering feats of modern times. The long wharf was constructed and a breakwater 300 feet long was made with 116,000 tons of rock to guard against the waves. It is down to this harbor that the big five-ton trucks bring their pineapples from the plantations to be shipped to all parts of the world.

Leaving the harbor, the visitors drove over seven and a half miles of concrete roads to Lanai City—a former cattle ranch. Today it is a spotless town of pink roofs and flower gardens, laid out in squares. The population, largely pineapple workers, is made up of Filipinos, Portuguese, Porto Ricans, Hawaiians, Japanese, Chinese, Koreans, Anglo Saxons and a Russian—all living together under ideal conditions. Schools and playgrounds, churches and clubs, a city hall and public parks mark Lanai as a progressive American town.

A trip to the pineapple fields revealed further wonders which have been achieved in four short years. Orderly rows of pineapple stretch in all directions in patterns so geometrically perfect that visitors wonder how it had been possible to convert straggling cactus into such perfect pineapple cultivation. Guides explained that the fields were dragged clean of the giant cactus growths by means of tractors and chains. The soil is deep and fertile, red and dusty. The fields are in every stage of cultivation from the plants newly set out to plants about to bear fruit. Windbreaks of eucalyptus protect the tender young plants, and dustbreaks of elephant grass are grown along the roadways.

James D. Dole, president of the Hawaiian Pineapple Company, explained to the legislative members what Lanai will mean financially to the Hawaiian territory.

"The pineapple industry, which 25 years ago amounted to nothing, is now producing annually about $35,000,000 worth of products." Mr. Dole said. "This export adds largely to the wealth, comfort and tax-paying ability of the Territory. In a few years this output will probably reach at least $50,000,000 per annum. The development of Lanai will doubtless mean an additional $10,000,000 annual business done by the Territory."

Since it became generally known that the sunshine and soil of the Hawaiian Islands produces the smooth Cayenne, the finest pineapple grown, the demand for Hawaiian pineapple has rapidly increased. The world has been supplied with this field-ripened fruit by means of canneries located near the plantations which put the pineapple into cans at the moment of maturity.

In 1922, however, it was foreseen that the enormous demand for Hawaiian pineapple would soon exceed the supply if more land were not acquired for cultivation. The islands, except Lanai, were good only for cattle raising, and pretty well filled up. Scouts investigated Mexico, Fiji, San Domingo, Malaya and even Australia. They came back again to Lanai, however, since the soil, climate, altitude, rainfall and natural drainage were about right for pineapple. But there were no harbors, no roads, no town, no food or water supply, no labor and the prickly pear cactus made it almost impossible. It was finally bought, however for $1,100,000. Today Lanai is assessed at more than $3,000,000.

The legislators proclaimed themselves delighted with the prospect which Lanai reveals. While Britain, Brazil and Cuba wrangle over the world's control of rubber, coffee and sugar, American business sense has secured the future of pineapple on Lanai—a territorial American estate.

COMPLETES 12 YEARS

Wm. E. ROBB
Secretary for Twelve Years

Wm. E. Robb of Howell has been secretary of the Citizens' Mutual Automobile Insurance Company for twelve years and has had the pleasure of seeing the company grow in business and assets each year until it now has more cars insured than any other company in the state.

Mr. Robb was born on a farm and spent his early life in attending district school, later finishing Normal and graduating from the Law Department of the University of Michigan. He taught school for six years and was Prosecuting Attorney of Livingston county for four years from nineteen hundred eight to nineteen twelve. This experience has fitted him to pass on the many complicated claims covered by automobile insurance. His experience as an attorney has qualified him to judge of the merits of personal injury cases and there are but very few claims, therefore that are litigated as the company aims to take care of just claims on a reasonable basis. Mr. Robb says that his twelve years of experience has proven that the majority of people desire to be fair.

Automobile owners realize as never before the necessity of automobile Insurance and it now appears that nineteen twenty seven will be the largest year in the history of the company.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowls and gently urges the souring taste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips". Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

BIKE RACER NOW MOTOR MAGNATE

Thirty seven years ago a slim little lad with wide open brown eyes and a checked cap pulled well down over his forehead, used to pump his tricycle with its hard rubber tires over the bumpy cobblestones of the streets of Paris at the breakneck speed of fifteen miles an hour.

This was all in the day's work for the messenger boy. His day began at six thirty a. m. when he opened the little bicycle factory over on the Rue Brunel where he worked fourteen out of every twenty four hours of the day. He wound the clock and tended the fires.

Every Saturday night six francs were doled out to him by his employer M. Clement, and these the boy promptly carried home to his widowded mother to eke out their small family income.

One day Albert came bumping down the Rue Brunel faster than usual.

"Why don't you try racing" said M. Clement, who stood in the door of his shop. "There is the middle distance championship coming soon. Try it. I've never seen any body could jump a wheel faster.'

That was the beginning of the boy's bicycle racing. Officials demurred about a youth of sixteen enterting their contest. But finally they agreed. Of course he won. He became famous over night, the toast of the Boulevards and cafes. And he won more money on his race than he had been earning in a year.

All this was thirty seven years ago.

The Rue Brunel still runs from the Avenue de la Grande Armes to the Boulevard Pereire and the little factory still stands. But the messenger boy is now forty nine years old a multimillionaire manufacturer in a new world a former bicycle and automobile racing champion an inventor, and a figure in the history of the automotive industry He is Albert Carpentier Champion. He has, besides his bg imanufacturing plant at Flint, Mich., branches in Birmingham, Eng., and Vichy, France. The man who used to pay him six francs a week is now M. Clement-Bayard, commander of the Legion of Honor and one of France's wealthiest citizens.

Those on the inside say Congress wants relief from the farmers quite as badly as the farmers want relief from Congress.

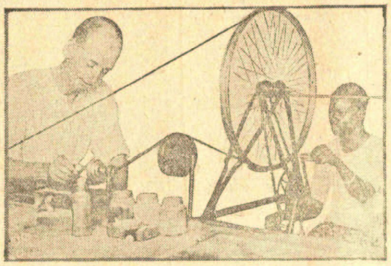
BICYCLE WHEEL MAKES NOVEL POWER PLANT



HERE'S picturing a new use for the familiar two-wheeled bike. The man at the left, for want of electricity or other motive power, struck on the idea of using the two-wheeler to turn his lathe. He hired a native to keep pushing the pedals which, in turn revolved the wheel connected with the lathe by means of a leather belt. And, we suppose, when not in use as a lathe-mover the bike's used for the customary transportation purposes. Novel, eh.

FAKE DOCTOR HAS FEARS FOR LIFE

Details of an adventurous life which he says, may still end in his death, as a spy, were revealed by the man whom the Detroit police arrested for practicing medicine under the name of Dr. Ernest 'Flemhe He has pleaded guilty to a charge of practicing without a license and admits that he has performed more than thirty major operations in Detroit in the last seven months.

"But I haven't had to sign a single death certificate', he asserted.

"Dr. Flemhe" said he really is Carl Otto Robert Elfes. He said he was born in Germany forty two years ago, became an enemy of German imperialism, served the French as a spy was captured by the Germans in nineteen eighteen was court martialed and sentenced to death. He said he escaped, fled to Austria, and later to Switzerland and Holland where he married. His wife and two children now live with him.

For a time after the war Elfes said he practiced medicine in Germany, using the name of a well-to do man he had met, Maximilian Schneller, who later adopted him and permitted him to continue using his name. He came to America in nineteen twenty three, he said, practiced in New York, North Dakota and Spokane, Wash., where he met the young doctor, Flemhe, whose name he has since been using.

Flattery may be just as false as slander but it doesn't have the backlash.

BOY HIKES 3.550 MILES BUT WALKS ONLY FIVE

On a hiking trip of three thousand five hundred fifty miles David Martin a senior at the College of the city of Detroit, has returned home with the boast that he only walked five miles.

'I started out with sixty three dollars and seven cents," he said, "and when I got back home after two hundred and fifteen hours of traveling I still had a few cents more than thirty five dollars. It was a great experience. I saw New York City and from there traveled to Tulsa, Okla., I didn't miss anything in Washington D. C., and there never was a time when I failed to find someone willing to pick me up on the road.

COLLEGE TRIES ADVISOR PLAN

Adoption of a freshman advisory system, which is expected to be extended to all the other classes by the opening of the fall term in nineteen twenty eight will be the principal innovation at Western State Teacher's College in the approaching academic year.

Under the system as worked out by John C. Hoeke, register, each of the school's one hundred 92 faculty members will be made advisor for his or her proportion of the freshmen students. Each of the students will remain under the guidance of the instructor during the entire collegiate life.

Several faculty changes have been made this summer. Among the most important was the appointment of Dr. Wm. McKinley Robinson of Columbia, to the position of director of rural education to succeed Dr. Ernest Burnham. The latter who has headed the department since the foundation of the school twenty three years ago, will devote his entire time to the department of sociology. Dr. Carl P. Schott, formerly director of physical education at Pomona, Calif., State Teachers' College, will occupy a similar position. Dr. Belmont M. Farley, of the faculty of the University of Minnesota, will join the local faculty as Professor of education and psychology. Miss Elizabeth Barbour will teach in the department of history in the place of Miss Nancy Scott, who is spending her sabbatical year at Charles University Prague Checko Slovakia. Miss Zelma Lamb will replace Prof. Harry Greenwall in the teaching of Spanish. Miss Marie Steckelberg will teach Latin in place of Miss Eunice Kratt. H. D. Corbus of St. Johns, will become the first head of the school's new department of agriculture. Miss Dorothy Vestal will teach in the department of physical education for women.

PORT HURON MAN HAS THREE RARE BANTAMS

Three blue spangled Dutch booted bantams, which he claims are the first in the United States, have been brought to Port Huron by A. F. Elliott, from the World Poultry congress at Ottawa, Ont.

VELVETEEN COATS FACTOR SPORTS

Velveteen coats have played a prominent part in the fashionable sports world this season. Blues, reds, violets yellows and tans have until now been deemed the smartest velveteen coat shades for wear over summer sportsdresses. Arrivals from Paris are introducing coats of taupe gray velveteen which are the latest things in Paris. Some of these models are trimmed with collars of taupe gray fox which adds to their attractiveness.

Like it or not, you probably will wear sleeves next winter, even in Bermuda, Nassau, Florida, or southern California. Only the sleeves for those warm climates will be short sleeves. In the north the long tight sleeve seems destined to remain, as well as the large full sleeve which is caught at the wrist. The sleeves will be the landing field of a multitude of embroideries.

Aware of what she already has in her wardrobe that would do for the coming season, aware of the colors that she would wear and those that she should avoid, aware also of the type of garments that are becoming to her figure and to her personality and those she must not wear, however modish they could be her wardrobe problem is fairly simple.

Following are a few of the 'knows necessary for correct purchases for the coming season.

It is quite certain that the large hat has returned to the mode, and that it is actually sponsored by smart women. Not, of course, the exaggerated, befeathered variety of yore. But large hat nevertheless, differing from the Gainsborough in the matter of simplicity of its trimming.

The large hat for this fall and winter is characterized by an extreme simplicity of trimming, fairly low small crown, or crown just the slightest bit draped or tucked. Scallops on either crown or brim are another definite fashion detail Fabric or velvet, or the combination of both, are used in every other soft and modish fall color.

The large hat, like the period frock, can only be worn successfully where it is appropriate. Nothing is more ridiculous when seen on a windy street nor more annoying when encountered on a crowded dance floor.

Every season or so one type of glove becomes particularly smart--although some fastidious women prefer to have, whenever possible a pair of gloves to match every costume, the style trend of gloves for the coming season is nevertheless important. The pinky beige and the rosy tints are giving way to enriched beige tones of a warmer cast, resulting in tones similar to a light coffee or chocolate tint. One of the many names given to certain of these shades is bamboo--but like most other shades it is apparent that the donor never saw a bamboo tree.

Slip-on gloves continue to be the most popular, althought one-clasp models are preferable for certain types of sleeves. Washable gloves have been so perfected that when the directions are really followed they are even more satisfactory after washing than after being cleaned.

The separate fur jacquette is always smart for jeunne fille, and might likewise be smart for smaller women and for sports wear. But when it is made into a smart ensemble or forms the jacquette of a tailored suit, then the Elegante will no longer spurn it.

Side by side with the slim elegant silhouette of several past seasons the normal waist line looks rather less elegant, although more girlish. Certainly it has a decidedly youthful effect, but this season particularly demands that this should be sponsored only for sports wear and occasionally with a tailleur and then only by the women who can stand such youthful lines without a loss of personality.

Practically the same applies to short skirts. It is no longer a question of whether the short skirt is modish, but instead a question of whether it is becoming and suitable to the type of gown.

For day time wear the length of skirt is entirely optional, depending only upon the taste of the wearer. For more formal afternoon ensembles the length is generally more than heretofore.

Luck seems to stick closest to the man who doesn't believe in it.

WOMAN TAKES AIR RIDE ON 75th BIRTHDAY LIKES AUTOS BETTER

Mrs. Bertha Klise, of Muskegon, celebrated her seventy-fifth birthday by taking a ride in an airplane. She likes flying, but was disappointed in that she did not get the thrill she expected. In fact Mrs. Klise believes that she obtained a greater thrill from her first automobile ride.

Mrs. Klise's transportation history has been one from ox-carts to airplane. As a little girl she used to go riding behind oxen.

Relatives and friends of Mrs. Klise planned to surprise her on her birthday, but it was Mrs. Klise who furnished the surprise. Arthur Billings acted as pilot for Mrs. Klise.

POTATO GROWERS BREAK WITH M. S. C.

Rather than join the Michigan Crop Inprovement Association against its wishes, the Michigan Potato Producers' Ass'n. pioneer of the certified seed potato industry has broken off relations with the inspection department of the Michigan State College and has set up its own inspection service Dr. John Bushnell, plant pathologist at Ohio State University, is supervising field inspections.

At a hearing in Grand Rapids a month ago, two members of the State Board of Agriculture assured the producers they would receive the college's inspection service if any organization did, yet the State board at its meeting failed to take any action on the work.

M. B. McPherson, of Lowell, chairman of the investigating committee, advised the producers to apply to Prof. J. F. Cox of the farm crops department, for inspection. Prof. Cox replied that the service was available to them through the Michigan Crop Improvement Association. His reply resulted in the producers severing relations with the college's inspection bureau and in setting up the new inspection service with Dr. Bushnell as its head.

MUSKEGON BEAUTIFIES OLD DUMPING GROUND

The old pond on one of Muskegon's scenic highways, has long been an eyesore to the city. For years it served as the pumping site for the city's water supply, but later Muskegon erected a pumping station on Lake Michigan and obtained its water supply from the lake. The old site was abandoned and soon became a dumping ground.

HUGE PLANT SOARING AT PONTIAC

A vast area of land in the southeastern part of Pontiac on South Boulevard is being excavated preparatory to laying the foundation of the plant of the Yellow Coach and Truck Manufacturing Company, a branch of the General Motors Corporation. With huge steam shovels, cranes, motor truck and trams an army of workingmen is converting what was pasture land a few days ago, into one of the greatest industrial plants in the automotive industry.

Representing with its subsidiaries a captilization of fifty million dollars the Yellow Coach Company is to be the longest manufacturing plant of its kind in the world. The frontage of the first unit now under construction, is to be two thousand one hundred feet, almost one-half mile. This unit already contracted for, is to be completed in about sixty days and will employ five thousand men according to the officials of the General Motors Corporation; but when all the others units have been added as it is expected and the departments and units now in Chicago and East Moline, Illinois, have been moved to Pontiac, the total employment is to exceed sixteen thousand, the same official said.

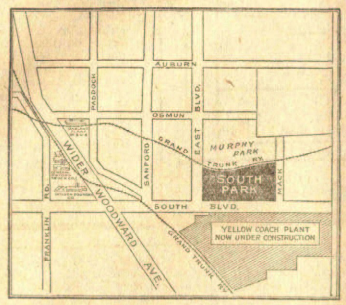
New Additions

The three-story administration building which is to house the offices and laboratories of the company is to be three hundred feet in length. It will front on South Boulevard, a hundred and twenty foot main thoroughfare which is to be paved immediately. With the building proper to be set well back from the Boulevard and with shrubbery and green lawns along its frontage, it will prove a spot of beauty as well as concentrated industrialism.

This enormous project which will in itself double the present population of Pontiac, is located directly across the street from South Park Subdivision sponsored by the LaSalle Land Company of Detroit, which subdivision was placed on the market a short while ago and there are still opportunities for investment in it.

Large Increase In Production

The Yellow Truck and Ccach Manufacturing Company, manufacturers of motor coaches and buses, had a daily production of twenty units in nineteen twenty six, Officials said. This production has grown to its present size of one hundred ten units a day, an increase of over five hundred per cent with seventy three thousand orders behind. Continual increase is expected in view of the popularity of the motor coach form of transportation and the constant organization of the new coach and bus lines.



Local Representative!

The La Salle Land Company offers the position of Local Representative to a man or woman who can provide references as to character, honesty and ability. Must prove high standing in community. Here is the opportunity of a decade to benefit by Pontiac's phenomenal prosperity and represent a company which has the property and resources to dominate the situation in Pontiac. This position has permanency.

Right Across From Yellow Coach Plant

In the heart of the new industrial center of Pontiac, and only 3 blocks from the world's greatest highway, wider Woodward, SOUTH PARK Subdivision is located. Directly across the street from the first unit of the huge $8,000,000 Yellow Coach and Cab plant. Certified activity is right back of an investment in SOUTH PARK Subdivision. 5,000 men will be employed in this first unit when completed. Many of these men will want to live in SOUTH PARK Subdivision. There is today a shortage of more than 1,000 homes in Pontiac. The city has outgrown itself in the last 4 years. The Pontiac Board of Commerce has recently sent out an S. O. S. stating that homes must be built to take care of the newcomers in Pontiac. Here is your chance to buy a lot in a first class subdivision. Lots in SOUTH PARK Subdivision are in the Preferred Class of Investments. A small down payment and a few dollars a month is all you need here. Now is the time to buy in SOUTH PARK Subdivision.

Huge Industry Now In Pontiac

It would be almost impossible to convey the immensity of the concentration plan of the General Motors Corporation Efficiency in the operation of its enormous factories is apparent as outlined by the manner in which the plants are interlocked, as it were. Planned with the idea of the least possible loss of time in operations necessary to build fine cars a few facts are presented which slightly explain the manner of operation. We present a short history of the Fisher Pontiac units, body manufacturing plants, in connection with other plants dependent upon Fisher bodies. Fisher body is owned by the General Motors.

The two Fisher body plants at Pontiac comprise fifty two acres, of which twelve hundred thousand square feet of manufacturing floor space has already been constructed. Employment exceeds four thousand seven hundred men and women. The monthly payroll is now in excess of eight hundred thousand dollars. From a production of more than 100 thousand completed motor car bodies in nineteen twenty six, expansion has continued so steadily that during the first five months of nineteen twenty seven Fisher built in excess of fifty nine thousand finished bodies at its division here

The division was originally planned for a production of two hundred completed autombile bodies a day. In less than four years its size has been practically doubled. This additional machinery and other plant facilities of the most modern type has made it possible, with Fisher craftsmanship to produce more than one thousand completely finished bodies in a single day.

It is interesting to note that in addition to the completed Fisher bodies, others are produced in a semi-finished condition for export to all quarters of the globe, to be completed at a point nearer, their actual market.

The Fisher Baldwin avenue plant at Pontiac, exemplifies the most modern features of body building, from the receipt and handling of raw materials straight through to the completion and "shipment" of the finished product. Finished bodies are 'shipped' from the plant directly to the Pontiac car division of the Oakland Motor Car Company plant nearby through an eighteen hundred foot conveyor, during which human hands handle them but twice—once to push them from the Fisher final assembly line to the outward conveyor, and a second time to push them from the end of this Fisher conveyor over to the beginning of the Pontiac car assembly. This carries them directly to the Pontiac chassis—in a plant nearly a third of a mile away.

In passing to the lumber receiving docks, attention is called to the fact that as the rough cut lumber is removed from freight cars it is loaded on trucks which slowly move across the storage yard toward the dry kilns. Human hands never handle the lumber, save to unload it from the freight cars until it has passed out of the dry kiln into the woodworking departments

This type of efficiency follows every operation in the plant. In the huge boiler department, for example coal is carried to each bin by a conveyor. An operator then notes the condition of the fire under each boiler, decides upon the amount of fuel that should be added, sets a measuring gauge at that figure and pulls a lever. That much and no more fuel enters the furnace. He then passes to the next furnace, notes its condition and repeats the operation.

One body assembly line is devoted to each model built. There is no fussing to find proper assembly material such as upholstery, cushions, tools or any detail necessary to the various operations.

So it continues in the cutting, stuffing, upholstering, glass, Duco final assembly, and all other divisions.

The work progresses. From the millworking, sheet metal, glass, body hardware, upholstery and other departments, the body material is gathered together swiftly and with amazing silence, for assembly. Every part has already been through inspection after inspection.

PONTIAC GROWTH ALMOST IN A DAY

By Harry B. Grevin
President LaSalle Land Co.

Pontiac Michigan is undergoing an experience which has never before happened to any city in the United States, with one possible exception, Gary, Indiana. When the United States Steel Corporation suddenly decided that Gary was to be the site of a large proportion of its activities that city was taken by surprise and realty values jumped to astounding figures almost over night. Fortunes were made.

One might say that Detroit went through the same experience when the automobile industry became the greatest single industry in this country. But such was not the case Small plants which supplied the newly born demand for automobile gradually increased in size and Detroit kept pace or tried hard to, with the demands of. people for homes and places of business. Detroit was successful in almost keeping up with the demand for homes because it was fairly gradual. And with the gradual pace maintained, with an occasional burst of speed caused by some single development like the Highland Park plant of the Ford Motor Co. enormous fortunes again were made.

But picture Pontiac Michigan. A town of only sixty thousand people overnight hears the announcement of a general concentration of the General Motors there and an addition at once of more than five thousand people coming mainly from Chicago to work in the new Yellow Coach plant in its first unit to cost eight million dollars.

Imagine this city which already has a shortage of more than five hundred homes under normal growing conditions, faced with the certainty of thousands more families coming to live there. No wonder, indeed, that the Pontiac Chamber of Commerce, after a general survey of the situation, is hurriedly appealing, thru heavy newspaper advertising, to outside builders and capital to come there. In one sense this appeal is for Pontiac's sake, to help them out of their dilemma. Figuratively speaking the appeal also says, 'there is harvest of profits to be reaped in Pontiac. Come on in make your fortunes in real estate and building. We need the homes and we need your capital." According to the statement of the Board of Commerce there is right now a shortage of five hundred homes. This figure does by no means include any provision for the future. It does not anticipate the need of five thousand Yellow Coach employees. Figuring on the census basis of Detroit which gives approximately four and one half people to every factory employe the Yellow Coach plant alone calls for an addition of twenty two thousand five hundred people to Pontiac with the thousands of homes necessary to house them. In South Park subdivision in the exact center of congestion directly across South Boulevard from the Yellow Coach plant, extreme care has been taken to properly care for the influx of new residents. Knowing that South park is the most convenient and logical place for the new Yellow Coach worker to live, broad streets and high class restrictions have been the order. Reasonable prices have been placed on South Park lots and lenient terms have been allowed. A private park within the property has been dedicated. Murphy Park Pontiac's beautiful playground adjoins South Park on the north. Undoubtedly South Park will undergo faster development than occurs in the ordinary subdivision. In fact South Park is almost an integral part of the Yellow Coach development and will play a very important part in the plans made by the General Motors for Pontiac.

Other Activities In Pontiac

Aside from the activities by the General Motors Corporation increased activities by the Grand Trunk R. R. Co. calls for thousands in improvements in yardage to take care of the increasing business in Pontiac. The Grand Trunk R. R. Company are building new terminal facilities, a belt line, round house and other equipment and has provided for largest single expansion program ever made by that company in the state of Michigan. To show the value of freight handled by this company, Pontiac is the third station in revenue of value in the United States, it is ahead of Chicago, ahead of Detroit which is first and Flint second. The Grand Trunk has twenty two new tracks under construction right now to care for the new business that General Motors has supplied.

The Bell Telephone Company has appropriated over a million and a half for extension purposes in Pontiac.

The Detroit Edison Company calls for an expenditure of a million of dollars this year.

The Wilson Foundry and Machine Company are employing more men in their plants than at any time in the history of their business.

Smaller plants are busy, as well, and to Pontiac's distress hundreds of men have to seek homes outside the city.

How to provide for the influx of men destined to reside in the city of Pontiac is the greatest problem that Pontiac has had to face in the history of that city. New subdivisions like that of South Park, adjacent and right across the street from the Yellow Cab plant, will supply hundreds of homes, but it will not be able to care for those who will immediately demand housing facilities when the Yellow Cob plant is completed and ready for operation.

Shrewd business men are now investing in Pontiac property. They are the successful men who are making money through the developments now going on. They can see the future possibilities in their purchases. And they will not be mistaken. More fortunes will be made in Pontiac property and more quickly than in any other city in the United States at the present time. And the person who does not, right now, see these opportunities will surely regret it.

It's the old story so often told 'I missed my chance". No one, who investigates the possibilities of the immense expenditures by the General Motors can fail to see, for himself, what Pontiac will do for him.

As Mr. Grevnin of the LaSalle Land Company says, "Our faith in the future of Pontiac property caused us to invest a million in that city. Our decision was reached simply through a logical reason which was carefully considered by us before placing our money there, and that reason became apparent later on when we learned that the General Motors had planned in concentrating their great interests in Pontiac. We were fortunate and our clients are now reaping the benefit of these developments.'

RAILS SPEND BIG SUM AT PONTIAC

The growth of Pontiac and the continued industrial expansion there has necessitated the expenditure of millions of dollars on the part of the Grand Trunk Western Railway to take care of requirements. Out of seven million dollars to be spent in the entire state soon more than two million will be spent in Pontiac. Of that amount approximately six hundred thousand is included in this year's budget.

Plans for the construction of the new storage yard adjacent to the new eight million dollar unit of the Yellow Coach plant in South Pontiac calls for a storage capacity of approximately two hundred fifty acres.

Sir Henry Thornton president of the Grand Trunk has pointed out that few people realize the immensity of Pontiac's growth and can see how soon this Pontiac development is being approached as integral part of the Detroit Terminal system.

By November first, there will be already constructed on South Boulevard in Pontiac one of the largest automotive plants in the world. The Yellow Coach and Truck Manufacturing Company. The first eight million dollar unit will be almost a half mile in length and will employ, by the first of the year, more than five thousand men. The enormity of this enterprise brings to view some very interesting facts. There will be one item of seven thousand tons of steel for the skeleton of the building There will be seventy thousand cubic yards of gravel and seventy thousand barrels of cement to be used for fleshing the skeleton with concrete. There will be about eight hundred tons of reinforcing steel to be used in that last process. There will be twelve thousand rolls of roofing which, stretched out, would extend a distance of three hundred fifty miles. Also there will be approximately two million concrete blocks for flooring, two million bricks, three million board feet of lumber, sixty thousand window lights, about forty miles of electric wires of various sizes, six miles of heating pipe and about thirty thousand sprinkler heads to prevent a conflagration in the plants.

The administration building will be located at the north end of the site fronting on South Boulevard. Today a good dirt road, tomorrow a one-hundred-twenty foot concrete highway.

SIXTY MILES OF PAVED ROADS NEAR OPENING IN WAYNE COUNTY

The Wayne County Road Commission is rounding out the biggest construction year in its history. The commission's fiscal year ended August thirty one and soon after that there will be opened to the public's use more than 60 miles of new pavement, the result of the commission's operations this spring and summer.

Up to August first, there had been built, this year, by the county either as strictly county roads, those built under the Covert Act with the cost borne by special assesment, or as inter-county roads, financed by the state, thirty three and nineteen hundredths miles of pavement, containing five hundred twenty three thousand, nine hundred square yards of concrete. In addition twenty seven and one hundredth miles of pavement were widened from eighteen and twenty foot strips to the forty foot ultimate minimum widths which the commission has set as standard for great trunk lines or "Super-Highways." During this month, the commission estimates, it will lay two hundred fifty thousand, additional square yards of concrete in widening or extension operations.

Home Precedes Self In Womens Thoughts

The inherent unselfishness of farm women seems to be proved by the questions that these women asked during the tour recently completed by the home convenience truck from M. S. C. according to an announcement by specialists from the agricultural engineering and home economics departments.

Farm women want to know first how to make their home more attractive for their families and second how to save themselves steps and effort in performing the household work. Questions on attractive floor and wall coverings were the most numerous of the queries answered by the specialists.

Obituary

Mary Westcott, daughter of James and Celestia Westcott was born at Casnovia Muskegon Co. Mich. April 15, 1858 and came to Wheatland Township, Hillsdale Co. with her parents when a child.

October 5th 1876 she was united in marriage to Eugene Culbert and came to Somerset Township, Hillsdale Co. where she has resided for the past 50 years. One son Earl of Phoenix Arizona was born to this union.

Mrs. Culbert suffered a severe shock of Paralysis April 16, 1927 and only partially regained posession of her former active mind, but patiently bore her affliction until Sunday September 4th. at 7 o'clock as the quiet shades of night were falling, passed quietly away.

She was a member of the O. E. S. at North Adams, an honored member of the Woman's Improvement Club of Somerset and Wheatland and had for many years been an active member of the Woman's Congress of Hillsdale Co. She did not affiliate with any particular church but was always ready to do her best in all social functions in the community. Will she be missed? Ans.— More than we can express. In the home, in the everyday walks of life, the wife, the mother and friend has gone.

Mr. and Mrs. Culbert celebrated their Golden Wedding day October 5th 1926. The bride of long ago aimed to make it a perfect day for the pleasure of their many friends and little did we think the next gathering at the home would be funeral services for our friend, which was held September 7, 1927 at 2:00 p. m. Rev. Gordon of Moline Mich. officiating and burial was in the Pease cemetery. The Eastern Star of North Adams in a body conducted impressive services at the burial.

Weary and worn she has ceased life's work but the memory of an earnest and useful life will ever remain to bless and comfort the mourning friends. We only say "God's will be done."

Card of Thanks

We sincerely thank neighbors and friends for silent expression of sympathy by way of the profusion of beautiful flowers sent in our recent bereavement, Rev. Gordon for words of comfort and the singers for music so kindly rendered.

Why the Sheetrock way is the quickest way

QUICK construction is one of the important advantages you get in using Sheetrock, the fireproof wallboard.

For Sheetrock comes all ready to use. You simply nail the wide, ceiling-high sheets to the supports. The trim and decoration can follow without waiting for the walls to dry.

Besides being ready for immediate decoration, Sheetrock walls are proof against cold and damp, fire and sound. They are non-warping, non-buckling and permanent.

STATE EXPLORERS MAKE RICH FINDS

Valuable information in anthropology and geology was obtained this summer by threeUniversity of Michigan expeditions in various parts of the country. Prof. E. C. Case of the university geology department conducted a scientific investigation in Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas; Dr. Emerson P. Greenman led a party of explorers in northern Michigan and Dr. Carl E. Guthe, associate director of anthropology at the university headed an excavating expedition into southern Kentucky.

More than five hundred specimens of vertebrate forms were brought back by Professor Case one most valuable of which was a large phytosaur skull, nearly five feet in length.

Professor Greenmen, of the museum of anthropology, directed activities on the east shore of Lake Michigan, and asserts he found traces of Indian inhabitation which date back to prehistoric times. Pottery and other specimens which once belonged to the Ottawa tribe of Indians, who dwelt there were unearthed and an attempt is being made to define by means of the relics, the exact territory occupied by these tribes in the lower peninsula of Michigan.

Relics found in southern Kentucky, the scene of Dr. Guthe's expedition indicate that the Indians of that territory were culturally inferior to those of Ohio.. 'These Indians lived in rock shelters, caves and in the river flats, and there is an abundant supply of arrow head in the vicinity although we did not not find much pottery," Dr. Guthe said.

Ten vertical feet of occupational deposit was found by the Michigan expedition in Hind's cave, indicating that the cave had been used as a dwelling for many generations.

OVERDOSE OF JUNE BUGS IS FATAL TO BLUE GILLS

James I. Tawse, deputy state game warden of Jackson says an over ambundance of June Bugs is killing thousands of large blue gills in lakes in southern Michigan The fish feed heavily on the bugs when they are numerous over the lakes and being unable to digest all the food die from the effects of so much gluttony.

The assication voted to continue the summer assembly and university, grounds operations and other business under the present policies and leaders.

FEW WOMEN WIN ON STATE BALLOT

Surprisingly few women of Michigan have taken advantage of their opportunity to hold political office.

Just how infant industry this women-in-politics is, however can not be appreciated until some estimate is given of the number of state offices there are to hold. The available offices number into the thousands.

Elective state and district officers including circuit judges, total no less than two hundred thirty seven and appointive state officers, including board members, number two hundred thirty four. Elected county officials number nine hundred fifty, besides a considerable number of appointed officials. Elected township officers make up an army of about ten thousand.

Here are eleven thousand four hundred twenty one political jobs and a beginning has not yet been made, for not a single village or city official has been included.

Women obtained the vote in Michigan nearly two years before their sisters elsewhere in the country, got it under the nineteenth amendment. The state amendment was adopted November fifth, nineteen eighteen, and went into effect a few weeks later. Contradicting dire predictions in that campaign the women soon would dominate public office, a recent survey by the League of Women Voters show that fewer than three hundred and fifty women have taken elective or appointive jobs. There are in addition many women in public life in subordinate positions, such as deputy clerkships, treasurerships, etc., But women filled such positions two decades ago.

Although the legislatures of forty seven other states boast a total of one hundred twenty two women law maker. Michigan after two experiments, has handed this responsibility back to the men. Former State Senator, Eva Hamilton of Grand Rapids made an exceptionally impressive record in the nineteen twenty one Michigan session and in nineteen twenty-five Mrs. Cora Reynolds Anderson of L'Anse, former state representative, broke the ice for the women in the lower house, also building up a strong influence for her district, but neither woman was able to weather the complexity of local political storms in her own district Generally women feel they should do considerably better in this particular field.

Althought women repeatedly have been candidates in state-wide elections for state offices, only one has achieved victory—Mrs. Dora Stockman of Lansing, member of the state board of agriculture, involving as it does a voice in the administration of Michigan State College.

LENAWEE HAS RECORD CROP

With the harvest of the nineteen twenty seven wheat almost completed, Lenawee county farmers are finding their crops better in quality and expect that the volume will exceed the bumper one of nineteen twenty six, when fifteen hundred thousand bushels was estimated as the record.. The movement of this grain to the market means a payment of practically two million dollars to Lenawee farmers.

Managers of grain elevators in the county report the crop to be almost uniformly better than last year, although certain sections find it about the same or lower. In the vicinity of Adrian, Tecumesh and Clinton millers and grain dealers say the yield is unequaled in their memory.

One firm for its day's business recently showed seven thousand dollars turned over to the farmers of that vicinity. Grain elevators throughout the county are filled to capacity and the shipment from each point is averaging about two carloads a day, the farmers apparently being ready to sell immediately without holding their crop in storage.

A survey of the county shows the northern and eastern parts exceeding last year's crop, with several farms showing a yield of fifty two bushels to the acre in the vicinity of Tipton and yield of fifty bushels to the acre near Adrian and Deerfield.

The average woman will forgive a man almost everything except for having let her make a fool of him.

New Ford To Be All-Metal Steel Industry Hears

Additional technical details of the forthcoming new Ford car are contained in what is purported to be authentic information published by the Daily Metal Trade, of Cleveland this week. The newspaper, through its close contact with the steel industry where Ford is placing large orders for steel sheets, bars and the like, states that the new Model A, replacing the veteran Model T, will be an all steel job using no malleable and but little cast iron.

It is stated that several forms of new steel upon which Ford mentallurgists have been working for years, will be used in the car. . Detailing the information it has assembled the Daily Metal Trade says.

'Built as an all-steel car, steelmakers will be interested in its being planned to make its crown-type fenders of heavier gage and wider, its flywheel much heavier its front axle htavier, full roller bearings on all wheels which are wire wheel as standard equipment—all this without increasing the weight of the car to only a little more than Model T.

"Emphasizing its all-steel character, the new car will contain no malleable and no cast iron except the engine block. Ford claims to have incorporated in it new steels due to treating methods upon which he has been working for years.

"The airplane principle will be carried out even to the fan itself which will be two-blade like an air plane propeller instead of the usual four-blade type of car fan.

"As has been pointed out previously, the new car will be high speed, four cylindtr selective type transmission vehicle. This definitely makes the new model a gear shift car. The new transmission will be made of improved steel, almost a duplicate of that used in the Lincoln car except for size and the Lincoln type clutch which is noted for a quick getaway, will be used, but also in a smaller size.

'Added to this, the engine is more powerful, the motor being larger than the L head type used in Model T; bore increased to three and seven eighth inch instead of three and three fourths inch as in Model T; while the stroke is about a half inch longer.

"Tests under actual road conditions show that this new model engine will run in practically any position and under severe climate conditions. For instance, it has been operated in a refrigerator in which temperatures gradually have been lowered to twenty degrees below zero; and also in a furnace room with varying degrees of heat.

The motor will be rated at thirty four horsepower compared with the old rating of twenty two horse power, and will be capable of a driving speed of fifty five to sixty miles an hour. The motor will be dust proof, with all steel pistons and valves and with all parts machined and held to closest possible limits.

"Other changes under the hood include the enclosing of all ignition wires, while the gasoline tank will be built into the body so as to form the inside of the cowl.

"The chassis is entirely made over to put its center of gravity low and thus conform to the widely advertised safety type principles. It is heavier and wider, maintaining the full body width in the rear and tapering to the front. In fact, beginning with a curved radiator of a very attractive design as the starting point of is streamline effect, it carries to the rear along a body referred to as the 'Spanish type' extremely low with wide, low windows, thus giving the new car a very distinctive modern style

"Keeping in mind the economy features of the Ford principles the builders have incorporated a new carburetor, designed by the Ford organization. Tests have shown this carburetor gives thirty miles to the gallon of gasoline although observers make the reservation that the public driver may not always be able to get that much economy out of it except with care and study.

"The stiff springs of the old Model T have disappeared, giving place to cross or transverse design of springs such as are used in many high priced cars—flattened out, given more leaves and made longer. Snubbers, which are standard equipment, are to take away the once familiar Ford bob.

"Other new features will be the installation of both an oil and a water pump, the fan belt operating beside the fan, also the water pump and a six hole generator. This latter will be an entirely new design, resembling in its construction the dynamo used for electrical power. Even the starter will be different, being further improved and equipped with oilless or self-lubricating bearings.

"Bearings will be of babbitt alloy, with large surfaces for wearability. The counter balanced crankshaft of extremely heavy construction will rest on three bearings, the cam shaft will rest on five bearings and will have one sixteenth inch more lift than the old type.

"The timing gears will be of special composition using cotton as its chief material, but pressed into shape so as to be tougher than steel. The rear axle housing will be banjo type, more easily accessible for repairs, welded and seamless, while the rear gears will be integral with the shafting so as to eliminate possibility of fracture. To aid further toward this end, tractor type steel, will be utilized in the rear end of the new car.

"Adding to all these things is a complete set of instruments in the board before the driver's eyes, and improved headlights, will aid his night driving.. The interior trim in the new car will meet present standards, which now are much higher than formerly; in fact, there will be more body room also. —Mich.. Mfg.. and Financial Rec.

MACHINE REVEALS HORSES' STRENGTH

Horse pulling contests were to be staged at eleven county fairs in Michigan before the end of September. Michigan State College has agreed to lend the dynamometer, a machine for measuring the pulling strength of horses, to each of the fairs this year.

The dynamometer has been used for pulling contests since its first appearance in Michigan Farmers' day nineteen twenty five. The contests have featured the annual mid summer conference at Michigan State college for the past two years, though they were replaced this year by plowing.

U' OF M. STUDENTS IN WAR ON AUTO BAN

Determination is threatening to nullify the effects of the ban on student cars at the University of Michigan. At least, such action is indicated by the answers which several hundred undergraduate students of the university made to questionnaires sent out by the journalism department.

When the regents of the university decreed at their last meeting that 'No student in attendance at the university after the beginning of the first semester of the university year of nineteen twenty seven and twenty eight shall operate any motor vehicle," they left a loophole through which no less than sixty two per cent of the student car owners next semester anticipate driving their broken down 'flivvers" as usual.

Authority to the Pollyanna-like hopes of the undergrads is given when it is understood that something like thirty five per cent of the students now in attendance at the Summer session have permits to drive. Approximately the same proportion own or operate cars during the regular year, and if this ratio holds true the coming year, more than fifteen hundred undergraduates will drive their cars despite the new ruling.

Twenty per cent of the car owners now enrolled in the university declare that if they are unsuccessful in obtaining special permission to drive next fall, they will attend some other university. On the other hand seventy six per cent assert they are willing to forsake their cars for the privilege of remaining true to their alma mater.

A Reminiscence of Other Days

By LOUIS V. HARVEY

To the voyager who may for a day's outing betake himself down the Detroit river from the state's metropolis, and tarry among the islands studded like emeralds at the mouth of this broad stream, no regrets will be forthcoming if he should chance to visit Bois Elanc. This beautiful little island, lying on the border between His Majesty, King George's domains and the United States, cannot fail to interest the most prosaic on a midsummer day, and especially the old block-house which has remained intact to be handed down as a priceless heirloom to such as are historically inclined.

'Tis a warm day in the month of August, and the broad deep river (Detroit) is gently ruffed by an ethereal breeze scarcely perceptible, yet amply sufficient to render the bosom of the water a sparkling mass of ripples, scintillating in the sun's rays not unlike a great diamond deftly set by a gigantic hand in the living green of a summer landscape.

My boat is newly painted, and the scorching heat of approaching midday seems to fry the oil and blister its white surface, while I slowly ply the oars, pausing occasionally to glance over my shoulder at the approaching steamer, "Milton D. Ward," bound for Toledo or Buffalo, with a party of jubilant pleasure-seekers. The "Ward" seems to be headed directly for my boat: but this fact does not frighten me in the least, as I know the ways of these river captains. Presently two short blasts of the deep-throated whistle admonish me that I must keep clear of the big craft, and so with a dozen sturdy strokes I pull aside while she scuds by with great commotion about her wheels, and the ripping hissing sounds of a sharp prow cutting the glassy swells, playing an accompaniment to the rush and roar of inside machinery. From the orchestra on the forward deck come sweetly across the water the stirring strains of "Blue Danube," growing fainter and fainter still as the steamer is hull-down on the blue waves of the open lake—rolling and tossing with an endless procession of white-capped swells. But I must hasten; already the noon hour is near at hand, and "Old Sol's" rays fall scarcely aslant of the green rows of rustling corn ashore, where the moist brown soil is being stirred by the cultivator, and occasionally I hear the broad vernacular of the farmer, as he guides his faithful horse back and forth—dreaming perhaps of golden harvests.

Pulling my boat upon the sandy beach, I secure the painter to the projecting root of a scraggly birch, and make my way toward the old time-scarred building which, in the early days of Northwest Territory, was a bone of contention between the British soldiery and hostile Indian tribes, mostly Potawatomies and Miamis.

Notwithstanding the lapse of 150 years or thereabouts since its erection, the old block-house seems today as solid and substantial as when first completed; so well-preserved are the "shakes" or split shingles upon the roof, that the hardest rains fail to penetrate. The walls are built of square-hewn logs, dovetailed together at the corners, presenting a very finished appearance; and the whole is surmounted by a hip-roof with a sort of cupola or lookout-window in the form of a double dormer. The foundation or first story is perhaps eight feet high; above this the second story projects over some three feet on all sides, and is probably ten feet high to the eaves. At a convenient height the logs—merely slits—to accommodate a gun-barrel, and extending entirely around the four sides, commanding every approach, and making a very defensive structure, considering the needs of those early days. Enter the bullet-scarred doorway, long since devoid of shutter, I mount a rude ladder to an upper room, thence to the lookout window. From this elevated position I have a broad view of Lake Erie; far down in the southeast quarter, a faint smudge on the horizon shows the path of some outbound barge; southeast by south, a rapidly-growing object with black hull and rakish masts indicates the approach of a steam-yacht. Seating myself on the rough sill of the opposite window, I fall into a brown study. 'Tis high noon; not long since the farmer must have turned out of the furrow and stabled his faithful horse; the monotonous humming of bees outside, mingled with the distant bellowing of steamboat sirens, lulls me to drowsiness; I dream. * * * * I thought I was in the large room below; a roaring fire in the great fireplace seemed to light the room but feebly, and weird shadows were cast upon the walls by the sudden leaps of flame curling 'round the sturdy oak back-log, responsive to fitful blasts of Autumn winds which essayed to reach down the wide chimney with smoky arms, and grasp great handfuls o glowing sparks, hurling them peil mell up its great throat.

The scene was enlivened by inmates of the room; red-coated British soldiery, great burly fellows, with tall caps and ruddy faces. Some lounged on the rough benches before the fire, smoking their pipes as calmly as though they were not besieged by a band of over five hundred Indians of the Ottawa tribe, under the leadership of the artful Pontiac; but such was the situation. Ever and anon in the pauses of the night-wind, could be heard the shrill cries of the war-dance. An Indian camp was located on the north end of the island, and all through the night the savage dance went on unceasingly; while from his perch in the lookout, genial Lieutenant O'Leary could discern occasional flickers of light like coals gleaming through the dense foliage; these were the council-fires of Pontiac.

Dimly through the mist of years, I saw that little besieged band as distinctly as I now see the trees and refreshing grass; I saw Captain McDonald for the fifth time refill his pipe and resume his seat by the fireside, after cautioning the Lieutenant to b watchful lest some redskin in the darkness outside should creep stealthily from the shadows of the surrounding trees and ignite the dry grass and weeds, which during the preceding summer has grown rank and tall about the litle fort; for well they knew the treacherous nature of the foes.

"Mark well the stumps, Lieutenant, and see to it that none of them are movable," were his final instructions to his second in command, as he descended the ladder for the fifth time.

The captain deftly raked a coal from the fire, placed it in his pipe, and resumed his narrative of Braddock's defeat, telling how with his own kerchief he had tried to bind up the ghastly wound in the General's side; how the bullets had cut the air about them like leaden rain, and well-nigh demoralized the whole army; how th ambush became a defeat and the defeat a rout:—throwing the responsibility entirely upon the broad shoulders of that husky young woodsman, Colonel George Washington, who had three horses shot and several holes in his coat before he gave the order to retreat.

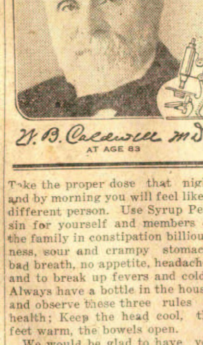
Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell was Right

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for forty seven years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of forty seven years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation. It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to to druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.



W. B. Caldwell MD
AT AGE 83

Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation billiousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health; Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin", Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

U. OF M. IS WORKING TO CLEAR MYSTERY OF COLUMBUS FATHER

Who was the father of Christopher Columbus.

This month has brought forward a new claimant a Portuguese. Last month, there was another and he was a Spanish Catalan from Barcelona. We already knew of three others—a Spanish Jew of Galicia a Corsican like Napoleon, and an Italian from Genoa.

It is late in the day to try all these claims and all the more so as Columbus himself wobbled when he had to talk about the beginning of his life. As to the facts of the case, the University of Michigan has all but one or two of those latest discovered in its possession.

This latest claimant says that Columbus' real name was Salvasor Goncalve Zarco and that he was the grandson of the famous Portuguese navigator of that name who discovered the Madeira Islands in the Atlantic ocean off North Africa, Maj. Santos Ferreira, who is known as a student of Portugal's archives, is established by the documents of an old Lisbon convent contemporary with Columbus.

MURDER IS SOLVED BY WIFE INSTINCT

How did Mrs. Andrew Kaczmarek far off in Poland, know that her husband had been slain in Detroit for his money, his body disposed of and that her children would have no Christmas.

'Woman intuition—the strangest thing in life." answered Lieut. of Detectives Paul Wendel, who with with Detective James Bogan, recently brought Joe Kramer, alias Frank Logazin, alias Peterson from Chicago to Detroit to face the charge of murder.

'It seems that the intuition of wives is never failing', he continued. "Now I'll tell you about this one instance.

'Andrew Kaczmarek came from Poland more than sixteen years ago and suffered all sorts of privations in order that his wife and three children across the water might be properly taken care of. He worked in an automobile factory and every day walked ten miles to and from work in order to save car fare. His fellow workers say that he lunched on bologna and spent no more than five cents a day on the noon meal.

"During this time he continued to send money back home to his family and incidentally had eleven thousand five hundred dollars in a savings account.

"By accident one of the gang, of which we believe Gramer is the leader, discovered that Kaczmarek had this money. They plotted to get hold of Kaczmarek's signature and his bank book. But a man who walks miles to work to save twelve cents was naturally on his guard. The gang attempted to lure him into places where cares are supposed to be forgotten. But these tactics wouldn't work with the plodding Pole.

'So, the gang planned to kill him,

"On the night of November first nineteen twenty five, he was asked by other members of the gang to take a ride. The thrifty Pole was in the back seat with two other members of the gang who strangled him to death. The car was driven to River Rouge and the body, weighted with concrete blocks, thrown into the water.

"The gang then set to work to mulct the carefully guarded bank account. They drove to Niagara Falls where they succeeded in cashing a draft for one thousand, four hundred twenty five dollars. Later they motored to New York and again, by means of a clever forgery, obtained what remained of Kaczmarek's savings account.

"And here is where the crooks made their first mistake. Encouraged by the success of their forgeries and hoping to stave off search for him as long as posisble, they forged a letter to his wife."

Back in that little town in Poland the patient wife and mother had often boasted of her Andrew's frugality, of the check that came once a month and of the certainty that on Christmas Day the children would be remembered and that the oldest girl's dowry would be assured by a father who never had failed. But the letters and checks stopped. Mrs. Kaczmarek haunted the post office, at last came the forged letter from the gang. Their forgeries had deceived a Detroit bank—but not the wife and mother Her letters in return, when translated by the Polish consul, proved that..

"My dear husband," she wrote, "I know that you are dead.. I know that I shall never, never hear from you again. I know they have killed you for your hard earned money and that your body is lying somewhere."

"Women seem to have a second sense that men do not have", continued Lieut.. Wenzel. "Kaczmarek body was found floating below the ice in River Rogue on January, thirty, nineteen twenty six, by two boys skating. We had some difficulty in establishing an identity, but we did this and in so doing affirmed that the widow's intuitions were justified."

EXPECT LOWER POTATO PRICES

Potato prices materially lower than in the last two years are anticipated by growers and buyers from Michigan and surrounding states who have been touring the Michigan potato fields.

The abnormal high prices of nineteen twenty five and nineteen twenty six stimulated the planting of an increased acreage last spring.

The question in the minds of Northern Michigan growers is whether the outlook is none too good for the lack of rainfall has retarded top growth.

WOMAN BLIND FOR LIFE HIKES TO EAST IN 16 DAYS

A life of blindness did not interfere with Miss Marie Morse of Grand Rapids completing a twenty four hundred mile "hitch hike" to New York Washington Philadelphia and Boston, and return in sixteen days, and enjoying it. She was accompanied by Miss Merinda Dudley, a grade teacher at Colt school, who found her an ideal tramping companion.

Miss Morse "did" the New York stores 'saw" serveral plays, visited historic landmarks and "saw all there was to be seen." She thrilled at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Washington, felt the crack in the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia and enjoyed her visit to Longfellow's home in Boston.

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

Prohibition Enforcement Moves Forward

"I BELIEVE IN PRHOBITON"

There have been many protests against the Civil Service Commission's demanding that applicants for positions in the Prohibition Bureau give proof, in their character examinations, that they are in sympathy with the law and believe in prohibition. This seems only a fair and reasonable demand and one which ought to appeal to the Administration as strictly essential. That Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman has recently announced that he will insist upon this qualification is indeed heartening.

It has not been uncommon to hear public speakers try to square themselves with wet audiences by prefacing their law enforcement speeches with an explanation that they are not prohibitionists. This from a man who is talking in favor of the enforcement of the prohibition law, at once nullifies his influence. No one can be very enthusiastic about an officer's qualifications who admits that he does not believe in the law and that he has been accustomed to violate it but that as long as he is in office he will obey it.

Mr. Lowman has said that the greatest problem is to get men who can stand up under the temptations offered them. "I believe in Prohibition" will be the surest protector and shield.

MR. LOWMAN'S ATTITUDE

"In so far as feasible, the initiative as to policies and the selection of personnel will be left to the Commissioner of Prohibition," the new Assistant Secretary of the Treasury said when outlining his attitude toward his present job and its problem, to A. H. Ulm, correspondent for the New York Times.

"The great problem," Mr. Lowman continued, "is to find for enforcement work in the Prohibition Bureau skilled men who will withstand the temptations that beset enforcement officers. I am going to do all I can to help develop a Bureau of Prohibition force that will be as efficient and trustworthy as are the forces of the Customs Bureau and the Coast Guard. If that can be done, satisfactory enforcement should follow.

"Whether it can be done is something nobody knows. The temptations are 'opportunities' in the language of crooks. Many crooks, naturally, try to get into the service. We have worked out what seems to be a perfect system of checking up on personnel, and we hope it will yield results.

"There are 'wet' spots, terribly 'wet' spots in the country. But it should not be forgotten that, as regards real liquors, national prohibition is reasonably effective now. Only a small proportion of the stuff people now buy and drink is real liquor or properly made beer. The real article has been virtually abolished; our job now is to root out substitutes. I think that when present-day drinkers realize this, enforcement will be much easier.

"It is noticeable already that the old-time type of sot—the perpetually saturated 'regular' drinker—has almost completely disappeared. In the old days he was the only kind of drinker who, even in a thirst emergency, would think of drinking the kind of stuff the bulk of drinkers now pay good money for.

"The stuff people are drinking kills off the heavy consumers rather rapidly. You remember what we used to think of folk who would drink straight alcohol. That is what most people who persist in evading the law are drinking now; and it is a lower grade of alcohol than sots used to finish off their lives with.

"So far as I know at present, the scheme of organization developed by General Andrews will not be changed in important particulars. The people who make up an organization, not the theories on which the organization is planned, count most in the long run.

"I have no policy except rigid, impartial enforcement of the law. The Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act are not theories of life or cults; they are parts of the Constitution and the laws. Many people seem to look on prohibition as a product of, and as a subject to, the caprice of officers appointed to enforce the laws. The officers did not make, and have no power to modify or repeal this law, nor have they any right to enforce it against some and not against other offenders. I think it very important that those entrusted with the details of enforcement should be in personal sympathy with the law."—The Union Signal.

Report Of The Sheriff's Office, Week Ending Sept. 10th 1927

Lee Jackman, arrested Saturday September 3rd on U. S. 11[?] and charged with transporting intoxicating liquor, waived examination on Fitzsimmons on Tuesday and was bound over to the October term of the Circuit Court. He was released on $1000 cash bail.

The entire Sheriff's Department was kept busy on Monday, due to the Labor Day celebration at Jonesville. Some of the officers directed traffic, others patrolled the roads, and others circulated in the crowd, keeping a watchful eye out for any disturbing element. However, everyone was apparently on his best behavior, and no arrests were necessary.

Clark Pierce, of Haslett, held for non-payment of alimony, was released Tuesday on order of the Circuit Court and directed to report again on October 8th. Meanwhile the Court will conduct an investigation into his case.

Frank Keating, who was a guest of the County for 10 days, was released from jail on Wednesday.

C. D. Lolmough, recently sentenced to Ionia for bootlegging, was taken to the Reformatory to serve his "time" on Wednesday.

Ben Long, late of Hillsdale and other places too numerous to mention, was again arrested Thursday afternoon. His offense this time consists of violating the terms of his probation. Saturday, Justice Aldrich gave him 30 days in which to improve his attitude.

Hugh Kittle, Addison was arrested Saturday afternoon charged with driving while drunk. He will be heard from later.

After a collision on U. S. 112 at Jonesville on Thursday, between a "wildcat" bus and a Packard coach, the driver of the bus and the driver of the other car were both charged with reckless driving Each plead guilty and paid fines and costs totalling $46.60, each.

Another collision of similar nature occurred on the Pike Friday afternoon but the driver of the car was hurt. The bus driver seems to haye been in the right this time, according to witnesses, and so a warrant for reckless driving is held for the driver of the other car, a Mr. F. Trombley, of Chicago. The new law is now in effect, and it has "plenty" teeth. Don't let them bite you.

High Records Made By Michigan Herds

Good dairy cattle in Michigan are not confined to any one section according to reports compiled in the dairy department of M. S. C.

The best producing herd among the 2,775 that were tested in dairy herd improvement associations in Michigan during the past year was owned by Arthur Fistler of Macomb county. The twelve cows owned by Mr. Fistler had an average production of 564.1 pounds of butterfat.

Other herds which had an average production of more than 500 pounds of butterfat for the year were owned by H. M. Atwater, Allegan county; Henry Myers, Oceana; and the Michigan Reformatory, Ionia.

The remaining six herds among the ten high in Michigan were owned by O. J. Becker, Ingham county; D. J. Dinsen, Kent; A. E. Reading, Van Buren; Wm. E. Hill Genesee; Edward Coupar, Sanilac; and Eddie Handrich, Oscoda.

Nine out of the ten high herds have been under test for production for two or more years in dairy herd improvement associations.

Last year, 1,072 Michigan herds qualified for certificates of merit issued annually by the National Dairy Exposition to owners of cows whose average annual production exceeds 300 pounds of butterfat.

Grain Crops Need Good Fertilizer

High grade complete fertilizer and lime applied to soil upon which wheat was grown on the Cass County Farm this year gave a return of $59.45 per acre more than was obtained for wheat grown on similar soil which received no lime or fertilizer, according to an announcement from the soils department at M. S. C.

The profit obtained from the fertilizer in Cass county this year agrees with the results obtained in other localities and in other years. The soils department at the College has had charge of the soils management work on the Cass County Farm for the past ten years

Lime and complete fertilizer on rye on the same farm paid a return of $34.21 more per acre than rye on unfertilized soil. Both wheat and rye yielded much better when lime was used than when the soil received no treatment; but the maximum benefits were obtained when both lime and fertilizer were used.

The use of high grade fertilizers is recommended for wheat and rye because the units of plant food in this type of fertilizer are cheaper than they are in low grade. The filler used in fertilizers has very little value as plant food.

"The plan is simple. It provides, briefly, for the following: Regular and frequent Masses and other services in all sections of the district; regular hours for confession in all the missions; catechism classes, of one hour each, in each church on Saturday afternoon; catechetical instructions for children and adults in farm houses and other centers where it is difficult or impossible to reach the church for Saturday classes; correspondence courses of instruction for widely-scattered families; pastoral visits to every family in the district at least three times annually; complete and constantly-revised census; weekly and monthly reports from each priest, and weekly meetings of the priests to discuss the work.

"Each priest has his own room in the mission house at Lapeer, at his disposal at all times. However, the three who administer the outlying missions find that distances are too great for a trip home each night, so they occupy rooms in Catholic homes, or hotels. Likewise, meals are taken wherever it is possible to obtain them while the priest is at work in his dis

THE "GET-RICH-QUICK EXPRESS"

By W. R. MOREHOUSE
Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

SO many millions of people have been defrauded out of their savings that it is the most natural thing for them to assume that the failure of any company in which they have stock is due to dishonest manipulations within the company.

W R. MOREHOUSE

The facts are that many companies go on the rocks financially due to mismanagement and poor judgment and without any intent on the part of those in charge to defraud the stockholders.

Because men of good moral character organize a company for the purpose of engaging in some business enterprise is no assurance in itself that the business will succeed. Good intentions are one thing and business ability another, and usually unless there is plenty of business ability the business fails.

Before you invest in any new enterprise you should not only satisfy yourself as to the integrity of the managers but you should be certain that they have the experience, the technical knowledge and the ability to make the business a success.

What I am seeking to emphasize is the importance of making a thorough investigation before you draw your savings from the bank and entrust them in the hands of persons who may lose them, not through dishonesty but through poor business judgment.

Too many inexperienced investors rely on hearsay and on information too general to be at all adequate, when it comes to parting with their cash. So I say, make it a rule always to go to the bottom of every investment, and as it costs nothing to consult your banker, or the local Better Business Bureau, or the National Better Business Bureau, New York City, leave no stone unturned in order that you get the facts.

If you find that the organizers are trying to avoid an investigation, take that as a tip for making a most searching investigation.

In making investments a hasty investigation, or a superficial investigation is a most dangerous thing. To get the facts about an investment you usually have to dig deep and wide, and no rush investigation permits you to do this. Promoters of the worst type often welcome a hasty investigation, knowing that it does not give the investor sufficient time to get below the beautifully camouflaged surface finish with which they have so adroitly clothed their fake stock.

The road to happiness and contentment lies along the route to safe investment, the road made safe by the slogan, "Investigate Before You Invest." At no point does this safe road run parallel, cross or form a junction with the route carrying the "Get-rich quick Express." And although the safe route is devoid of thrills and the excitement peculiar to the other route, it is also devoid of its worries, heartaches and disappointments.

Although the safe investment route makes no rash promises of "independence for life," or "a million a minute," and although it does not use the slogan, "Ride along with us to Fortune and Live in Ease and Comfort in your Old Age," it actually brings comfort independence and happiness to those who travel it, while the other route leads to despair, drudgery and poverty

According to a certain survey of investments sold to the public by irresponsible promoters 97 per cent proved to be a total loss, notwithstanding they were sold with the assurance that they would bring financial independence for life.

Of new promotions sold to the public in a certain city more than 50 per cent were doomed to failure from the beginning for they were waterlogged with too much free promotion stock given to the organizers. It is said of most oil promotions 85 per cent are doomed to failure before a share of stock is actually sold.

So I repeat, you cannot afford to take the "Get-rich-quick Express," for she's headed for the ditch.

A MODERN "CIRCUIT RIDER" AND HIS EQUIPMENT

The Rev. Fr. Thomas R. Carey, upper right, is a "modern circuit rider" as the pastor in charge of St. Philip Neri "consolidated" Catholic parish, which covers more than 2,000 square miles surrounding Lapeer, Mich. While he and his assistants hold services sometimes in a hotel lobby, in one isolated mission, the illustrations show the largest and smallest church buildings in the parish, the handsome stone Church of the Immaculate Conception, Lapeer, and (upper left) the tiny St. Elizabeth's, in Oxford.

"PETITS POIS" ARE "PETTED PEAS"

WHAT is there about a French label either on food or clothes which makes the article so much more interesting? It must be the French reputation for excellency in cookery as well as dressmaking. No one will deny that "Paté de Fois Gras" sounds a lot more aristocratic than "Goose Liver." Just so with "Petits Pois" which have always been considered a very great delicacy and came originally from France. "Petted Peas" they are facetiously called by canners because they require more coddling than any others.

What Epicures Say

When being prepared for canning, peas are graded by 32nds of an inch and the tiny ones belonging to the "Petits Pois" classification will pass through holes only 9/32 of an inch in diameter. But real epicures do not like the extremely small peas. They maintain that the larger sizes possess more nutriment. In fact they declare the choicest peas and the ones which have the choicest flavor are those which are cooked without sifting just as they come from the garden.

An Unusual Recipe

This extremely nutritious vegetable is one of the most successful of canned products, and is third in point of vegetable popularity. With its valuable aid the housewife can devise many tempting, dainty dishes. Here is a pea pureé which is different: rub through a colander one can of peas, add a little boiling water or soup stock. Cut several slices of bacon in small pieces, put in a frying pan and cook until crisp, add one onion cut in dice, and continue cooking with the bacon until brown. Add salt and pepper to taste. Serve like mashed potato, pouring the bacon and onion over it before serving.

Sea Food For The Farmer

PUTTING the treasures of the deep on the farmer's or in fact, anyone's dinner table is one of the many achievements of the modern canning industry. There is now no inland spot, however remote, where the inhabitants may not any day of the year enjoy the gastronomic pleasures of Lobster Newberg or Crab Flakes Leonie with quite as much gusto as though living on the seashore. Because you happen to live on a farm in Iowa, does not mean that you must be deprived of clam chowder on Friday or a fish course any day in the week.

The canning of sea foods is in fact one of the largest and most important angles of the industry. Oysters and clams, salmon and sardines have been our familiar friends for many years, but these days there is hardly an edible fish that swims the sea that is not canned. Shad roe out of season, caviar, anchovies and tuna, herring, soused mackerel and kippered snacks —may all be on the reserve shelf ready to enrich the daily menu of the inland dweller.

The Importance of Iodine

But what is of vastly greater importance, these sea foods are very high in iodine content, and supply in larger quantities than any other form of food, that ingredient so essential to health. This elusive mineral seems to have escaped from the soil of our western states just as it has in Switzerland and other inland countries, whose inhabitants show this deficiency in their diet by goiter and thyroid troubles.

Since practically all the iodine is in the sea, a bountiful consumption of sea food is practically the only way of introducing it into the diet, and the tinning of these products makes this a very simple matter in any locality. Sea food is no longer listed among the luxuries, it is within the easy reach of all, and should be included in the family menu more than once a week for it is considered a most valuable part of a well rounded diet.

Lobsters, clams and oysters which are literally dripping with iodine contain nearly three hundred times as much as fresh water fish, while shrimp has about twice as much as ordinary seafish, and even these have a good deal. An interesting illustration of how this property in the water makes the fish themselves thrive is seen in the case of trout and salmon. The daring ones who screw up their courage and go to sea grow in a year or two from a paltry six inches in length to a weight of fifteen to thirty pounds.

Offer Infinite Variety

There are so many ways of making sea foods interesting and tempting that one never need tire of them because of their sameness. Here are a few suggestions for different ways of preparing the canned varieties.

Shad roe may be made into thin little croquettes by rolling in egg and cracker crumbs. Fry them quickly in hot oil, and serve with Hollandaise Sauce just before the main course of luncheon or dinner, or hot and crisp with a summer salad.

Crab Flakes Leonies: Prepare one-fourth pound of fresh mushrooms or the same amount of canned ones. Place them in a pan with two tablespoons butter and cook five minutes. To three tablespoons melted butter, add three tablespoons flour, three-fourths teaspoon salt, one-fourth teaspoon paprika, and cook. When smooth, add three-fourths cup milk and stir until mixture boils. Add three-fourths cup cream, one-half pound crab meat, mushrooms and two tablespoons chopped green peppers. Serve in ramekins or patty shells.

Lobster Cardinals: Cook together two tablespoons butter, one tablespoon chopped green pepper, one teaspoon chopped chives. Add two and one-half tablespoons flour, and when smooth, add one and one-half cups hot cream or chicken stock, season with salt, cayenne, nutmeg, chopped parsley, and one tablespoon lemon juice, and stir until it boils. Add one and one-half pounds canned lobster meat, and one-half cup canned mushrooms. Serve in patty cases or ramekins.

Cold Salmon with Mayonnaise: This is an appetizing and satisfying dish which can be achieved with a minimum of trouble. Simply chill a can of salmon, of the size suited to your family, in the ice box, open, remove skin and bone unless you have bought the skinless and boneless variety, taking care not to break the meat, garnish with lettuce leaves and sliced cucumbers, and cover with mayonnaise sauce.

Salmon Mousse: Rinse the salmon from a pound can in hot water and drain thoroughly. Pick the flesh fine with a silver fork removing skin and bone. Mix the following dry ingredients: one-half tablespoon salt, one and one-half tablespoons sugar and one teaspoon mustard, add gradually three-fourths cup hot milk, and, when well mixed, cook in a double boiler five minutes. Add one and one-half tablespoons melted butter, the beaten yolks of two eggs with one tablespoon cold water added, and one-fourth cup hot vinegar. Cook a few moments and add three-fourths tablespoon granulated gelatine which has been dissolved in two tablespoons cold water. Stir until melted, add the salmon and turn into a mould to harden.

Detroit River Tunnel

Detroit is to build a tunnel under the Detroit River for the purpose of accomodating the vehicles and foot passengers across to Canadian territory. The tunnel will be something like 26 feet in diameter, and will consist of a tube of concrete running 1200 feet back from the banks of the river with a 3½ percent grade. The means of putting down this tube are somewhat unique to the average novice. First the approaches extending through city streets will be tunneled out and fully cased with concrete. Then barges carrying the first sections of airlocks and shafts will go out in the mid-stream and dump them. The path of the tunnel in the river will be dredged out by steam shovels to the proper depth, instead of going way below the surface and cutting a hole through. The false work or moulds of the concrete work will be placed in position and the pouring of cement will take place on land. The sections complete will then be put in place.

First it will be understood that the project must be voted on before it can be put in operation and this will be done in the November election.

If the voters say "go ahead" it will be done The Michigan Central tunnel was built a number of years ago and science has forged ahead since that time in the tunnel line and the company will operate its own line of motor buses through to Canada. The centre of the tunnel floor will be used for vehicles and sidewalks will be built along each side for pedestrians, so that one can walk from America to Canada if he or she desires. Ventilation will be particulary looked after and fire hydrants will be stationed at regular intervals also patrol boxes connected with the outside world by means of telephone so that foot pedestrians will be at all times fully protected from highwaymen of any kind or violence. If we were going to make a prediction we would say that the Canadian bootleggers as a rule will be the most overjoyed of any class of people we know, while it will be impossible to smuggle liquor thru' if the police service is properly looked after, yet the general consensus of opinion seems to be that there will be a way found to get by. That is about the worst feature of the undertaking. A wag suggests that United States build a large sewer ten feet in diameter from Canadian breweries to convey the liquor and have it all done with at one stroke. A couple of large valves could be installed at this end and a real sober operator appointed to manipulate them.

We hope none of our suggestions will be taken seriously by the wet bunch, Laying all joking aside we believe the new tube will be an agreeable outlet to Detroit's population which so much desires to Sunday in Canada, and for business purposes it will be much faster and more convenient than the antiquated ferries of passenger steamers which now ply across the River.

President Coolidge Is Back To The Grind

Our president has again taken his place at the daily grind of office in Washington and it is rumored he is already looking forward to the time when he will be just a plain private citizen of the U. S. A. The troubles of the Coolidges since taking this high office are more than can be anticipated by the general public and it is well that they return to private life. The death of a beloved son and loss of the President's father in Vermont coming as they did so close together have had a tendency to dim the lustre of enjoyment at the White House.

Then furthermore the days of Roosevelt and of Harding were as nothing compared to the pressure of public interference in the executive life. Receptions and continual rounds of dinners to diplomats and what-you-may-call-its, somebody or something connected with the ambassadorships of foreign countries with whom it is desirable to keep on good terms has practically rendered the executive mansion one great office for the transaction of routine business which is terribly hard on family seclusion and enjoyment.

As before mentioned in this paper the civil service now plays more than ever on the official nerves and constantly day and night these civil service detectives keen as steel must watch Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge lest some crazy crank or some demoniac attempt their destruction by means of assassination or some other subtle way. Everything that goes to the executive tables in the way of supplies comes under this searching scrutiny and it is no wonder the great stress of public life appeals to the Coolidges nix. But after all what is life if you can't have your freedom and roam the streets or the fields as you wish? Not much but a dried husk. The tremendous salary of the President of course has its lures, but as a rule most of the incumbents come out of the office, financially poorer than they entered since the temptation to overdo public entertainments and dinners is more than human and further than that no one outside official circles has any idea of the pressure placed upon the Chief Executive at such times lest the tone and furnishings of a great dinner to foreign diplomats fall below the standard of their expectations or of their home countries. The expensive floral decorations and trimmings alone would comprise a small fortune and much of this is taken from the President's own pocket money, so it is easy to see where the office may become impecunious. Some incumbents are of an economical nature, and strive to keep public extras down to rock bottom usually at the expense of their self respect since there are always harsh criticisms and people always standing ready to puncture the official reputation anytime.

The administration of the Coolidges has been marked by a sober Puritan aspect and the whole gist of their actions in office are as good as a warrant that not much matters to them how soon the whole grilling process is ended, Mr. Coolidge has been a wonderful well poised official in spite of the cruel shafts of red hot comment directed at his policies. Many of the vetoes put upon hobby bills fostered by various great interests have cost him many hours of worry and malcontent. When he vetoed the Pension bills of the Civil war widows there was a terrible hue and cry but how could he do otherwise? His program was set in advance for Economy and any deviation from that course would have meant oblivion. Greatly to his credit it may be said he has reduced the great public debt and increased the surplus which no other man before him had the nerve to stand up and support. In fact most of the officials of the day are like drunken sailors when it comes to looting the national treasury. Long live Calvin Coolidge!

Fair Time Again!

Fair time is again with us and everywhere we hear the din of preparation for the exhibits of fruits, vegetables and live stock. Hillsdale county and any other county is not falling behind in the usual trend of her interest in such affairs. The State Fair at Detroit as we understand it has had a prosperous season under the economical management of Governor Green who claims Alexander Groesbeck has proved rather of an extravagant executive. John Williams received a number of good premiums on his Duroc Hogs which already had been crowned with laurels at previous shows. This week he is at Jackson Fair. Directly following the Jackson affair comes Lenawee Fair at Adrian and then the old reliable "Most Popular Fair on Earth" with its multitude of attractions unique, satisfying and always superb. The late spring and long continuance of cold weather has rendered our summer so short that a late fall is imminent in fact it is a necessity. But even at that the whole season has been topsy turvy and nothing seems correct. At this time we are getting typical July and August weather when we should have received it long ago. When we should have been planting our gardens the weather was sour and cold and nobody felt like putting anything in the ground, so taken all in all we are more or less surprised that the yield of garden and field is so good No doubt there will be huge vegetables and mighty fruits on exhibition as old Hillsdale county always pans out something worth mentioning even though the whole season seems off. We have been so busy this fall that most of the important items about local doings and people have escaped us, but we entreat the public to have a little patience which we know they have shown already, until we get into our new home which wont be very long hence, then we shall again be ready to cater to the news Many important items no doubt have been overlooked by us in the scramble, but we are busy. Busy is the word. Secretary Terwilliger of the Hillsdale Fair reports that prospects were never so good for a full line of everything at his fair, the other secretaries also show optomism to a large degree. The one thing which the country-side cant afford to miss nor they never will, is the annual get together at Fair time when the whole family must meet those from far and near and enjoy one good visit while viewing the exhibits, the last thing before old winter shuts down his frosty lid for another six months. Prophets of the country are beginning to hit the target as to how the winter of 1927-28 is going to run, but we are positive that until next spring no one will be able to tell just what the temperature will be. Fair time has stole around on us once more like a thief in tha night, as we have never been half ready for anything this whole blessed summer. But it is here and make the best of it. There is an over-ruling power which brings everything out right or otherwise, and it is not for man to pre-suppose how this old planet is going to round its orbits for another twelve months.

Must Treat Wheat To Control Smut

Bunt, or stinking smut was more prevalent in the 1927 wheat crop than it has been for several years past according to the farm crops department at M. S. C., and the necessary precautions must be taken to prevent a still greater increase in next year's crop.

According to F. B. Drees, Secretary of the Michigan Millers Association, it has been necessary for the millers to make large discounts in some instances because of the presence of smut. Smaller discounts have been quite common.

It is the belief of members of the farm crops department that the prevalence of smut has increased due to the laxity of farmers in treating their seed wheat. The copper carbonate dust treatment is recommended, and if properly applied, is effective in the control of smut.

Not only does the presence of smut make the wheat undesirable on the market but it also reduces the yield. The M. S. C. farm crops department is prepared to furnish information on the copper carbonate dust treatment to farmers who wish this material.

The copper carbonate method is a dry treatment and therefore easily applied. It is cheap and does not injure the seed. The treated seed can be planted in the same way as the untreated seed, although it does not run through the drill as fast and the drill should be regulated accordingly.

For both wheat and rye, at least 200 pounds per acre of a fertilizer with an analysis of 2-16-2 or one of similar composition should be used on light soils low in fertility. A similar fertilizer or 16 percent acid phosphate should be used on the better soil types.

DRILL THREE TEST WELLS IN ISABELLA

Mt Pleasant is anticipating an oil boom. Eighty thousand acres of land in Isabella county have been leased by the Pure Oil Company and drilling preparations under way for three test wells. The first of the three wells, located nine miles east of Mt. Pleasant, is now down several hundred feet. The well has reached the Marshall sand. Drilling will be continued to the Berea sand, believed to be about twenty three hundred feet down.

The Pure Oil company, which controls the leases and is directing the drilling of the test wells, is reported to be backed by Columbus Ohio and Chicago capitalists.. It is stated on good authority that the vice president of the United States, Charles B. Dawes and his brother, are principal stockholders

The encouraging aspect of the situation for Mt. Pleasant citizens by sufficient funds is making the test in a thorough manner. The three test wells will be put down to the Berea sand, regardless of whether any indications of oil are found.

RECORD HONEY CROP IS ATTRIBUTED TO BIG ACREAGE OF CLOVER

A record production of white comb and strained honey is believed to have been made this year by apiarits in Southern Michigan. The increase in output is attributed to the large acreage of red, sweet and alsike clovers.

Returning from a trip about the state Prof. Edwin Ewell, bee specialist at Michigan State College reported he saw more clover in southern Michigan this year than in any season in the last decade.

Sweet clover is ideal for bees and Prof. Ewell reports the acreage of this legume is increasing rapidly in Michigan.

Moving bees into the fruit belt at blossom time last spring did not prove as profitable to beekeepers as they had hoped, owing to the rainy weather throughout the blossom period. The colonies however improved in strength and were in excellent physical condition for the clover bloom in June and July. This strength has been partly depleted, Prof. Elwell reported, by swarming in colonies which were not supplied with new supers as rapidly as others were filled.

FARMERS MAKE ALFALFA TESTS

Farmers in every section of the lower peninsula have started to cooperate with the Michigan State college and the Michigan Crop Improvement association in a series of five acre alfalfa seed production demonstrations which will continue for three or four years, and may result in the establishment, according to college specialists, of the most profitable agricultural industry Michigan has known.

The project resulted from the operation of the recent alfalfa train in Michigan, and many of the plantings are along the route taken by the "flyer'. Seed was distributed by officials of the college farm crops department from the train, and growing will be under the direct supervision of county agricultural agents and crops experts.

Hardigan alfalfa a new variety developed and tested by the State college is being used by the grower in the test. In trials at East Lansing, as well as other agricultural experiment stations in the western seed producing area of the United States, it had yields more than double the seed yields of other strains.

Thumb district growers who are starting alfalfa trial stands this year are A. L. Wright Archie Hope and T. B. Poole of Deckerville. Sherman Elliott and Dorr Perry of Caro Fred Dehmel, Unionville; Otto Monteith and W. S. Bell, Fairgrove; T. H. Koch, Millington; Otto Gettel, Bay Port; Herbert Gettel, Pigeon and Irvin Cardwell of Lapeer.

In Bay, Midland, Saginaw, Isabella and Gratiot counties, these farmers are co-operating in the project; Emil Jacobs Merrill Chas. Sass, Pinconning; John Kepfmiller, Auburn; L. H. Sonklin, Chesaning .Arthur Bendetr, Saginaw; L. J. Hills, Laingsburg; Guy Shippl, Midland and J. H. McCoy, Hope.

The third district of Michigan is the northern section of the lower peninsula.. Growers are, Burdette Crandall, Bellaire; F. H. Glidden, Alba; Fred Dobbyn, Mancelona; Leo Bloomer, Kalkaska; Fred Schmalzried, Levering; Valentine Mankowski, Gaylord; Johanensburg Manufacturing company at Johannesburg; Henry Waskowski, Vandervilt; M. R.. Johnson, West Branch; John Van Hauten, Lake City and Herman Weibert, Reed City.

CRUDE OIL BATHS START HAIR ON A BARREN DOME

Here's a new cure for baldness, vouched for by John Sampson, a driller on Shiawassee County's only oil well.

When Sampson came to Owosso in the spring, he was bald. Someone told him to rub crude oil, fresh from the well on his head every night. When oil was struck Sampson started following this practice Now he has at least some hair on the top of his head and he says that it is growing thicker. He is continuing the use of the oil.

HOW THEY WASH RAIL ROAD CARS IN FRANCE

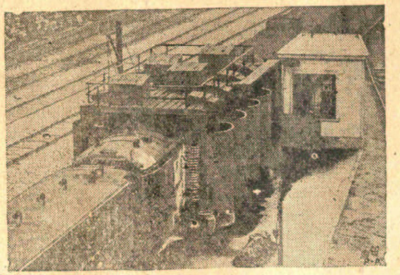

PHOTO shows an ingenious washing machine which has just been installed on a French railroad. This unique outfit consists of eight revolving rollers— four on each side—through which powerful jets of water spray each side of the train as it very slowly moves through a tunnel like affair. The machine is driven by electric power and, it is said, does the work of eighty men.

Once through the washing process,, the train moves on up the track where a crew of men board it to polish up the brass work. That's real efficiency, eh.

BAY CITY TO HAVE NEW EIGHTY ACRE AIRPORT

Bay City is the latest Michigan city to look toward the early establishment of a first class airport. The city is working out a plan whereby a tract of approximately eighty acres immediately adjacent to Saginaw river and located about four miles from the heart of the city is to be secured as the site for an airport.

The new movement toward better port facilities is sponsored by Bay City Chamber of Commerce. The site which is to be made available has been selected with a view toward providing a landing place for flying boats and seaplanes as well as for land planes. This will be provided in the Saginaw river which flows past the proposed airport. While this field is not as large as some airports in other parts of the state provision is to be made for the control of approaches to the port to make possible its satisfactory use by ships of practically any type. An important factor in the preparation of approaches will be the removal of wires which would otherwise make the approach to the field and the take off matters of difficulty.

A system of illumination is to be provided in the form of high towers adjacent to the field, but not interfering with its use, upon which it is planned to install beacons for the guidance of visiting planes. Just what investment will be necessary to provide these facilities has not yet been announced, but it is expected that the site will be available for development in the course of a year.

According to the tentative plan this airport will be located along the riverside drive between saginaw and Bay City which is nearing completion under the supervision of the state highway commission.

Acid Stomach
"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda
Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.
For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowls and gently urges the souring taste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips". Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

STURGIS ACQUIRES INDUSTRY

Sturgis Improvement Association announces the signing of a contract with the Harter Rolled Metal Company and the Kant Kut Tube Products Company of Goshen, Ind. calling for the removal of their plants to Sturgis. The Indiana concerns will occupy the building formerly used by the Central Wheel Company. About two hundred persons are employed by the new concerns.

WOMAN SERVES ON MAIL ROUTE

Braving blizzards and torrential rainstorms, fighting for a path through the heavy drifts of winter, plowing through roads made almost impassable by spring rains, that all the patrons of a rural mail route might be assured of dependable service—this reads like a job for a man, and a real man at that.

Yet in Lansing there is one woman who for twenty three years has taken her place every day with the small band of rural mail carriers working out of Lansing. In winter she has carried a shovel and fought her way through roads which many farmers would not dare to travel, and in summer the hottest suns have not prevented her from making her deliveries on time.

The woman is Mrs. Mary Woods, Probably the most surprising fact in connection with her occupation is that she did not take it up until her family had been raised. . And evidence that her job of raising her family was a good one is contained in the fact that one of her sons is a graduate of Michigan State college and is now employed by the British government as secretary of agriculture and chief forester of the Island of Borneo.

Mrs. Woods is now sixty years old yet she makes her trip every day.

AMERICAN LIFE SEEN PARADOX

America is a land of paradoxes; wealth and wastefulness, hand in hand; acres of fertile land lying uncultivated and farmers crying for relief legislation; magnificent schools, educational facilities for children and adults—and a nation strangely indifferent to culture and learning.

This is a summary of impressions gleaned from interviews with agriculture experts from Germany, Hungary, Poland, Denmark, Czecho-Solvakia and Belgium, who were at the Michigan State college attending the American and International Country Life conferences.

Their opinions are not founded on wide experience, for most of them have spent no longer than six months, at the most, in the United States. Some of the visitors have just toured the country with the group headed by Dr. Asher Hobson United States delegate to the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, concluding their journeys at the State college. The significance of their views lies in the glimpse which they afford of the United States seen through the eyes of the intelligent, educated European.

Accustomed to the limited land space in their own countries nearly all expressed disapproval at the acres of fertile soil left uncultivated in America. They assumed unhesitatingly that markets could be found for the exportable surplus and that marketing is the least of the American farmer's worries.

Honesty is doubtless the best policy, but it doesn't seem to contribute much to the success in professional politics.

REFEREE WILL NOT POOL EARLY ASSETS

Unsecured creditors of the defunct chain of Ealy banks through the Thumb district will receive their share of the assets that remain in the banks from the bank at which each was a depositor. The decision was given out by Referee George Marston of Detroit, following the arguments and evidence before him in a number of hearings to decide the method to be followed in the distribution of the assets

Marston's decision was based on the argument of E. E. Clark of Bay City, attorney for the First National bank of Bay City, trustee in the case. The referee asserted if it is logical for the assets to be distributed from each firm of banks it should follow that they be distributed from each individual bank, in order that all fairness might be observed.

The referee also ordered, on the petition of the trustee, that dividends of twenty per cent should be paid the creditors of the Ealy-Stacey bank at Akron and the banks at Millington and Otter Lake, belonging to the firm of Ealy-Evans.. The payment of the dividends will be held up until the time for appeal of the decision has lapsed..

Has Million Friends

WILLIAM J. CHITTENDEN Jr.

After two wrecking crews failed to dislodge William Chittenden Jr. from Detroit's finest hotels, every one in Michigan who has a nodding acquaintance with hotels began to realize that Chittenden had taken up the banner where his father laid it down and was fast becoming a national figure as a hotel manager.

Will Chittenden is still the manager of Detroit's most magnificent hotel but today it is the Detroit-Leland that five million dollar structure operated by the Continental Leland Corporation which also operates the Hotel Olds in Lansing and several other similar hostelries.

Will began his business career in a Detroit bank, but in eighteen ninety five listened to the reasoning of his father, then owner of the Russel House and went with that hotel—then Detroit's finest. But in nineteen five the wheels of progress demolished the Russel House to make way for a still greater hotel, the Ponchartrain and Will Chittenden was selected active manager in association with George Wooley.

But the wreckers got busy again in nineteen seventeen and tore down the Ponchartrain to make way for the present First National Bank Building. So for a time Chittenden turned his attention to building hotels and for a while was manager of the Morton Hotel in Grand Rapids.

Shortly after the erection of the Book Cadillac, Chittenden became resident manager where he remained until June of this year when he took over the reins of the Detroit-Leland.

In each instance Chittenden held the unique distinction of directing the policies of Detroit's leading hotel and won friends and patronage through his appreciation of the Golden Rule to hotel management.

WEATHER HITS TOURISTS TRADE

The caprices of the weather man this summer have taken thousands of dollars from the tills of Michigan business men, amateur statisticians assert after study of report from various resort centers.

Indicative of the tendency of tourists to find some other spot for their vacationing this year, is the report of the matron of the community rooms at Adrian. Adrian just south of the Irish Hills is the gateway to this popular vacation place. Last year more than three thousand tourists used the rooms during the month of July while this year only slightly more than two thousand have registered.

The city of Lansing, which conducts a municipal tourist camp on the outskirts of the city, also reports that the number who have visited the camp so far this year is much below that of last year. One explanation of this is that the road leading to the camp has been under repair for several weeks of the summer, making access difficult.

Despite the reported lessening in the number of visitors to the state, owners of lake cottages and those who rent boats at the inland lakes, declares that the equipment is being used to capacity this year the same as in former years. Possibly an explanation of this is that fishing has been better this year in Michigan lakes during July than it has been for several years.

TOOL WORKS OWNER-- A SAW MUSICIAN

PROBABLY environment had something to do with it, but the fact remains that Robert S. Alter—one of the millionaire owners of the American Tool Works at Cincinnati, Ohio-- is a saw musician of no mean talent. Thousands of radio fans can attest to that, having heard him over the radio quite often.

After remaining in the ownership of one family for seventy one years, Batchelor island a beautiful wooded tract of eighteen acres, two miles north of Buchanan in the St. Joseph river, has become the property of William Eiler, summer resort operator of Chicago and Lakeside, Mich.

BLOW TORCH ENLISTED IN WAR ON FRUIT PEST

The State orchards and nursery inspection department has adopted a new method of roguing diseased raspberry plants. The inspectors are using a specially designed oil burning blow torch to kill the plants.

Use of the torch has resulted from discoveries by Michigan State College entomologists that the germs of such virus diseases as mosiac, curl, streak and wilt are carried from diseased plants to healthy stock by aphids. Under the old method of roguing with grub hoes, it was observed that the aphids fell to the ground and migrated to healthy plants.

By using the torch to kill the plant before removal the state inspectors also are killing the insect before they have an opportunity to migrate to healthy plants.

COEDS JOIN STUDY OF SNAKES, BIRDS

College men and women are giving up a summer vacation to study mosses, snakes, and general plant life near Cheboygan and the University of Michigan biological station at Douglass Lake is crowded on visitors' day.

Guests are met by guides and taken in parties through the various exhibits of the station. In one of the exhibits, the director explained parasitic infection of birds The guests were shown through miscroscopes tiny parasites on the eyes and kidneys of frogs and fish. Then some of the infected fish were fed to gulls. One small bird seemed to be weaker afterwards, while a large gull of the same age fed on the same diet, appeared strong and vigorous.

The parasites were killing the small gull, the director explained, while the larger one was immune.. The purpose of the experiment is to find the cause of immunity of the bigger gulls. If the student-scientists can do this, they will work a great benefit since gulls as natural scavengers, keep beaches clean and prevent diseases.

Another popular exhibit was the snake department, where black snakes, rattlesnakes, copperheads, grass snakes and garter snakes were caged. The students bisect the snakes to learn their anatomy and the causes and methods of poisoning. Two co-eds and one man student picked snakes up in their hands while demonstrating methods. The reptiles seemed quite docile, one of them curling about the neck of a co-ed.

Beets need not always be served cold, in vinegar. The new, young summer beets are especially good hot, with butter and salt and pepper. Cook them in their skins and peel them when done by plunging quickly into cold water.

ROOMS ARE LARGER AT THE DETROIT-LELAND

The homelike atmosphere which is characteristic of the Detroit-Leland, is carried out not only in the far larger rooms it provides, but in the beautiful and livable furnishings and fittings and the delightful decorations, which are individual and not repeated in any two rooms on the same floor.

The cuisine transcends perfection. The labyrinth of public rooms, the galleries, promenades and approaches are colorful and vivacious, without the noisy clamor so often associated with large hotels.

With all these advantages the Detroit-Leland prices for rooms and food are so moderate that good judgment must approve.

STRAIGHT TALKS WITH AUNT EMMY

ON FRANCINE'S THRIFT

As Helen settled herself in Aunt Emmy's big chair she said: "Jack Hunt has bought the Briggs place. I never was so astonished in my life. Jack didn't have a dollar when he married Francine and now he's bought a house."

"Well, my dear, it's not so surprising to me. Francine is responsible for their prosperity."

"Why, Aunt Emmy, I thought she was awfully frivolous. I remember how disappointed I was when Jack married her. She seemed entirely too pretty and too well dressed to be a good wife. When I dined at their house I thought she was frightfully extravagant about her table. She must have paid her cook a lot to have the food she served."

Aunt Emmy smiled. "I liked Francine from the first," she said. "She and I became good friends. She told me how worried she was because Jack did not seem to think of the future and never tried to save money. Everything about housekeeping was so new to her that she was glad to come to me with her little problems. I advised her to save regularly, no matter how hard it might be. She coaxed Jack to open an account at the bank for her household money. He thought it was silly because they had so little. She said she could keep more accurate accounts if she had a bank account. He said they didn't have enough to keep track of. She insisted she wanted to learn to keep accounts. Then when they got rich, she'd know how.

"I don't need to tell you how they prospered. Three of the sweetest children in the world, and now a house! Jack is proud as he can be."

"Yes," interrupted Helen, "but how did she do it?"

"The very first week after she started her checking account at the bank she took the money she saved and opened a savings account in the thrift department, where she got interest on her savings. You see, she was determined to save at least 10 per cent of her income. She saved steadily. She asked me to help her plan things out and together we worked out a budget so she could divide her income to meet her expenses. When her plan was working well she told Jack.

Diet With Tomatoes

THE popular pastime of dieting has been made more interesting and more scientific by the fact that everybody is informed nowadays on the topic of food values. Both men and women with a tendency to embonpoint approach the problems of diet with intelligence and a sufficient knowledge of food properties to guide them safely through a reducing diet which, while taking off pounds will at the same time give a well balanced ration, containing the elements necessary to the maintenance of health.

A Versatile Food

There is no food which seems to fill all requirements when counting the calories like tomatoes, particularly the canned ones which may be had all the year, and always uniform in quality and flavor. This vegetable is at once low in calories and rich in vitamines — a rare combination. In other words tomatoes supply the chemical elements necessary to health minus the fattening quality which the starchy foods possess. A modicum of this starchy ingredient may be supplied by the addition of bread. A special qualification for tomatoes on a diet list is the fact that they may be prepared in infinitely various ways.

Tomato Ring is something different that may be done with this vegetable and is made in the following fashion: cook these ingredients for 20 minutes; one can tomatos, one bay leaf, speck of mace, one teaspoon salt, six peppercorns, one slice onion. Strain and reserve one cup of the strained tomato mixture. Melt two tablespoons butter, add four tablespoons flour and pour in slowly the tomatoes. When smooth, pour this over three well beaten egg yolks and set aside to cool. Beat three whites very stiff and mix gently with tomato sauce, turn into a well greased ring mold, set in a pan of boiling water. Bake in a moderate oven twenty minutes. When ready to serve, remove from pan carefully, fill the center with braised mushrooms.

Mrs. Sarah VanCamp, aged 86 years, passed away at Somerset Centre on Monday. Funeral services were conducted on Thursday and burial was at Somerset Centre

The famous Jackson Fair this season is reported better than ever with the usual crowd. Exhibits in all departments were on the general high average. Outside of being insufferably hot the weather was al that could be desired.

We are at present quite busy preparing to remove our outfit to the other side of the street. So if you do not get quite so much news this week as usual, don't get roiled at us. We are bound to do much better as soon as we get into the new location. On account of this we are making the paper only four pages this week.

Archie Bleech had the extra good luck last week to catch a pickerel in Mud Lake which tipped the beam at thirteen pounds and was really the "Daddy of them All." It is said his mouth would easily take in a five pound bass. It is seldom one of these big rascals is caught as they remain mostly in the muddy bottom and do not get hungry as they prey on smaller fish.

The foolish bunch keeps growing larger. New candidates are constantly popping up who want to fly across the Ocean and take a lot of unnecessary trips just to show 'em it can be done. The death toll already is reaching a high mark. Until some ingenious fellow fixes up some kind of apparatus to keep heavy bodies up in the air after the power stops, they had better keep right on the ground.

On Wednesday forenoon about 10:30 the North Adams Fire Department received a call to go to the home of Fred Post east of Henvy's Corners north of Pittsford where buildings were on fire. The splendid large barn containing grain, hay and straw also the chicken houses were consumed by the blaze, so that nothing is remaining except the house. It was too late to save anything of the outbuildings Origin of the fire is unknown and Mr. Post's insurance on all his buildings amounts to something like $235,00, with a possible loss around $20,000 only partially covered by insurance. One thousand chickens were consumed also some choice Police dog pups.

A. J. Calhoun and family met with what might have been a real serious accident with possible death last Sunday at about 3:00 p. m. when they were driving through Cadmus in Lenawee county. Just after they crossed the railroad track in Cadmus a couple of young men driving quite rapidly came up behind the Calhoun car and in trying to pass lost control of their car striking Mr. Calhoun's front hub. The impact was sufficient to bunt the Calhoun sedan off the side of the road down a steep embankment of about six feet. The other car which was being briven by a 14-year-old boy, Marion Dowble, and owned by Floyd Pierson both of Waldron,, turned over twice and ame up on its wheels smashed. The young fellows driving were more or less scratched and cut and so were the Calhoun family. Mr. Calhoun sustained a lame leg and Mrs. Calhoun's knees were bruised. Raymond, the son was cut over the eye with flying glass. However they consider themselves very lucky to get off as easy. Their front axle was sprung, glass smashed and some other damage sustained which it will probably require fifty dollars to repiar. Mrs. Oscar Mattison who was riding with the Calhouns was also cut and bruised.

U, Reasons are many why temperance workers should be encouraged to go on with their work she said. Wednesday a. m. was election of officers. Wednesday p. m. the principal speaker was E. H. Kerr, Co. Sheriff whose topic was "Inside Operations of the Liquor Law." He gave facts and figures to prove that much more is being done along the liquor law enforcement than ever before in our county. He quoted the statement that "An officer can not go far ahead of the people" which means that Public Sentiment has much to do with Law Enforcement. 60 percent of arrests in our county are for violation of liquor law. Mention was made of other laws which are openly violated, Sunday closing, anti-cigarette law, pool room regulations, etc. All present believed that our sheriff is doing good work and needs our most hearty support, The Convention was one of the most enthusiastic ever held and all departed with new interest in the work. North Adams Union was awarded the Banner for a year's good work, showing a 30 percent increase in membership, money raised etc. The slogan for the new year is "Prohibition is the best way." A five dollar bill was presented to Mary Bowditch, Pittsford, a small girl who had written the best essay on evils of using cigarettes. A good delegation from North Adams attended all sessions.

Why the Sheetrock way is the quickest way
QUICK construction is one of the important advantages you get in using Sheetrock, the fireproof wallboard.
For Sheetrock comes all ready to use. You simply nail the wide, ceiling-high sheets to the supports. The trim and decoration can follow without waiting for the walls to dry.
Besides being ready for immediate decoration, Sheetrock walls are proof against cold and damp, fire and sound. They are non-warping, non-buckling and permanent.

STREAM PLANS STIR NEW SUIT

Property owners in the vicinity of Grand Rapids, who until recently found little use for the numerous little streams which coursed through scenic spots to Grand River, are now resorting to the courts for the preservation of those streams.

The most recent and vigorous opposition to the destruction of a waterway was started by property owners east of the city limits They obtained a court order restraining County Drain Commissioner Robert Patterson from proceeding along the course of Coldbrook creek

This little stream, which finds its origin in Lappin lake, about four miles east of the city, lends itself to the landscape design of a number of fine residences in this section. Within the city limits this stream once famous for its speckled trout, has been placed in a culvert and the water is contaminated from several sources.

Silver creek has been cited as an example. Once this stream flowed through a little valley possessing considerable repute for its beauty. A few years ago its waters had become so badly contaminated and property owners had encroached so closely upon its banks that it was declared a public nuisance and was diverted into a culvert.

Recognizing the loss of so many of these streams the city officials sought to preserve these scenic places. Several years ago, through systematic effort, the city began to acquire the property on both sides of Plaster creek.

LANDMARK RAZED FOR MONROE STREET

Work of dismantling the O'Reilly homestead an old landmark, located on North Monroe street alongside the bridge across the River Raisin at Monroe has been started by Levi Sancrainte, the owner.. Sancrainte purchased the property from the Wider Monroe Street Land company, which bought it from the city for eight thousand dollars to be used in connection with the widening of the Monroe street.

The building contains old fashioned flooring pine, hemlock and thirty wooden doors. It was formerly owned by Mary Philomeno O'-Reilly, who was born in a toll gate house along the plank road across the street. The toll gate was moved to where the present O'Reilly homestead stands and later torn down. The present home was erected by her father during the civil war.

ISLE FEARS LOSS OF ONLY DOCTOR

Beaver Island is worried. It has heard that the state administration is slashing appropriations. It fears that the thirty five hundred dollars a year paid to Dr. Russel Palmer for practicing on the island may be withdrawn. Emissaries have gone to the Governor with the islander's plea that Dr. Palmer or some other doctor—be retained as a permanent resident on the island.

To understand what a calamity the withdrawal of a state paid medical man from the island would be one must know something of Beaver's geography.

It lies thirty two miles northwest of Charlevoix and is the largest of the charming archipelago at the head of Lake Michigan. In the summer a daily boat, the James E. Sanford, plies between Charlevoix and St.James the principal harbor But in winter the boat service is abandoned. During early fall, and some times well into December the mailboat makes a weekly or semi-weekly trip. When the lake is locked in ice the mail is carried on sled or cars from Cross Village on the mainland to St. James.

But there are many weeks either in autumn or in spring—when the lake is neither solid ice nor water. Floating ice, which may close in and become an inpenetrable mass at any time, makes a boat journey out of the question. On the other hand, the fact that the ice stretches in broken fields and is treacherous underfoot, makes equally impossible a pedestrian trip across.

The islanders clubbed together last year purchased an airplane to break the winter isolation. The machine, an ancient contraption unsuitable for the purpose, even if in good condition, lies today on the beach—useless.

Doctors have been carried over the floating ice in planes procured on the mainland. But that was in emergency cases. The cost of such professional visits naturally must be high. And most of the gold on Beaver Island is in the hearts of the islanders rather than in their purses. They are neither wealthy enough nor sick often enough even if they were wealthy, to make it worth while for a medical man to locate among them without the state's guarantee of thirty five hundred dollars as a first inducement.

The total population of St. James the village where James J. Strang was crowned as a Mormon king and where he reeled beneath the bullets that killed him has a population of but six hundred, mostly fishermen. The farmers and lumbermen scattered throughout the eighteen mile length of the island bring the total number of inhabitants up to about eight hundred. Certainly, here is no field where a doctor may amass a fortune, and yet a place where men may writh in the agony of limbs crushed by falling trees and where babies may be born in midwinter with no one to give medical care.

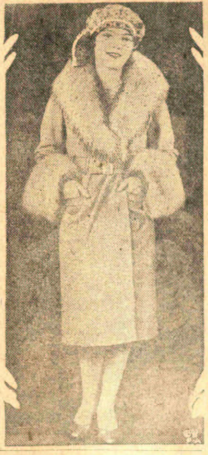
Phil Dotto claims the championship of the world for distance and time on roller skates. The nineteen year old Iron Mountain lad brought his marathon event to a stop before three hundred persons after skating around the streets of the city for fifteen consecutive hours. During that time he averaged six miles an hour, giving him a distance of ninety miles for the day. The best known record is forty eight miles made in more than seven hours.

A PRACTICAL COAT FOR COMING FALL DAYS



MISS Dorothy Mackaill is pictured wearing what is indeed, a practical coat just designed for the coming Fall and Winter season

It's a peach-colored Kasha wrap It's collars and cuffs are of peach colored fox fur. And, as its creators describe it, it is;

Dressy enought for semi-formal wear—

Warm enough for cold weather--
Light enough for warm days—
And extremely attractive for sports wear.

BATTLE CREEK WOMAN LIFTS LOCOMOTIVES TO SUPPORT BABY

To use her own words Mrs. Cooper 'aws broken' She had to fill the shoes of both father and mother to her little five year old daughter, Hilda. Today she and Hilda have a home of their own.

A couple of hours before Hilda starts for school her mother, Mrs. Annabelle Cooper, of Battle Creek Mich., is at work in overalls in a locomotive shop, where she is the only woman among six hundred men.

From a little narrow platform, sixty five feet in the air, Mrs. Cooper operates all the cranes that lift the locomotives that come into the shop for repairs. Some of these engines weigh more than one hundred fifty tons.

During the agitated days of the World War, Mrs. Cooper stepped into this job, so strange for a woman. For the first time in the history of the United States women were being employed in railroad shops; in fact machine shops of any kind. Mrs. Cooper was one of those who obtained work at the Canadian National railway shops in Battle Creek.

"When I came into these shops.' said Mrs. Cooper. 'There were twenty six other women. But with the signing of the Armistice and the readjustment that followed, the others went back to their house hold duties or to office positions. Somehow I stayed on, and here I am today. My job— you can't call it anything else—has meant a great deal to me. It has helped me keep Hilda with me. Oh, I can not tell you how I dreaded the thought that maybe I might not be able to make a living for us both, and that we would have to be separated.

Sour Stomach
"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowls and gently urges the souring taste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips". Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

OSCEOLA PRISONERS ARE BUILDING THEIR OWN JAIL

Five prisoners of Osceola county are helping to build their own jail at Reed City. With the new jail but partly finished and the steel cells moved over from the old jail at Hersey, it was up to the five men arrested for vagrancy to help build the jail if they wanted more than one cell roof over their heads.

Under the supervision of the town marshal, Ben Buerge the five have been working as mason tenders.

FISH'S CHANCE TO LIVE SMALL

An idea of the great odds against the wild life of the woods and water in its fight for existence is given by Ole Clines, supervisor of Amber township.

Mr. Clines has a bass hatchery on his farm. Around three thousand large mouth bass were hatched there last spring and today it is estimated that not more than five hundred remain. The others have been eaten by heron, snakes, shore birds and turtles.

"My nursery is only one hundred feet from my house and I watch it closely", said Mr. Clines. "A few days ago I shot and killed a large heron and determined to find out what was in the stomach. I found sixteen young bass, evidently from my nursery. Besides the bass I found four frogs and two tadpoles

"I killed a water snake that had been living in the nursery. I found inside eight baby bass. I have killed a dozen or more snakes and several herons.

Mr. Cline's nursery is fed by spring water and the outlet is Pere Marquette River.

Shot used for cleaning bottles glass jars have a great way of spilling and are hard to pick up. Keep a piece of fine chain hanging near the sink.

NARROW BRIDGE PROBLEM ACUTE

With several narrow bridges on heavily traveled state and county trunk lines in Kent county and confronted with a recent verdict or a corner's jury that such a condition contributed to the death of a little girl in a traffic accident, the Kent county road commission is giving consideration to means of relieving the situation until the bridges can be built.

The Cascade bridge over the Thornapple river on the Grand Rapids-Lansing road, the North Park bridge over Grand River, the Ada bridge over Grand river on the Grand Rapids-Ionia road ,the Plainfield bridge, over Grand River on U. S. one hundred thirty one are four bridges handling heavy traffic but which are just wide enough to allow two automobiles to pass. The accident in which the girl was killed occured on the bridge over Rogue river, near Plainfield.

As a temporary expedient, the road commission is investigating proposals to replace the present wooden guard rails along the bridges and bridge approaches with channel iron grades of smooth surface. The wooden guard frequently catch the hub caps of automobile wheels and throw the cars toward the center of the roadway, usually into the path of the approaching car which the driver is attempting to avoid. Smooth sur faces on the guards would permit sliding, Country Engineer O. E. Hess believes.

A Reminiscence of Other Days

"Yas sir, hinguns his something hi've seen ha good deal holf hin my day," he said, "but that little scrimmage with the pesky reds was habout the worst hi hever hexperienced, hand hi tell you men the sight hof hour poor fellows lying there hall mutilated hand bloody, hevery mother's son hof them minus 'is scalp, was hunerving to say the least. Hevery tree by the roadside seemed to 'ide han hingun, hand those further back three or four. Mighty small has my love his for the Colonials, 'elp me Gawd, hi believe hi speak the truth when hi say that Braddock might 'ave been halive today (peace to 'is hashes), hif 'e 'ad taken the hadvice hof Colonel Washington."

After delivering himself of the above rich cockney brogue, he lapsed into a moody silence, broken only by fierce pulls at his long pipe and the crackling in the fireplace. Presently again he hailed the lookout. "His hall well, Lieutenant?" "I am not sure," was the reply, and with a bound McDonald was beside him. "Captain, do you catch that shadow near the big stump there, and one over there and there?" said O'Leary, who was a well-bred young Irishman, with eyes as keen as an eagle's. McDonald watched the shadow for a full minute, and he fancied it moved. Both men held muskets on their knees; both took deliberate aim, and fired simultaneously. For the duration of three minutes, nothing but echoes woke the stillness. The wind had lulled; the expected death-cry did not come. O'Leary laughed rather sarcastically, while the soldiers crowded under the lookout and jocosely chaffed their officers for wasting powder.

Suddenly their merriment was interrupted by a pandemonium of yells which seemed to come from all quarters of the forest, blending into the prolonged war-whoop of the bloodthirsty Ottawa—and the long expected battle was at last a reality. With some confusion, the men snatched muskets and powder-horns, rushing to their posts; but nothing could be seen through the narrow posts. The spiteful crack of rifles, followed by the dul thud of bullets burying themselves in the spongy logs, kept the garrison's nerves on a raw edge for perhaps two hours, then gradually died out; and all was quiet again save the dismal hoot of an owl somewhere in the trees outside. Taking stock of his casualties, Captain McDonald found two of his men had been slightly pinked in the arms by half-spent bullets which had strayed through the ports; beyond that nothing of consequence.

The scene changed:—I thought 'twas early summer; the white man and Indian were at peace. Several red-coated Britishers were being entertained by a group of warriors playing ball some thirty yards from the block-house, while beside the door sat Captain McDonald: who occasionally addressed himself to his Chiefship, Pontiac, reclining on the bosom of mother earth, a few feet away, leisurely smoking.

Suddenly the ball was given an exceedingly hard rap, and soared high over the heads of the braves, coming right down at the captain's feet, who good-naturedly stooped to pick it up, not seeing the stealthly redskin who followed; but he did see the shadow of an outstretched arm on the ground—a fraction of a second too late.

With a sickening thud the tomahawk crashed into his brain. In the twinkling of an eye it seemed every Indian had armed himself with a tomahawk snatched from beneath hi blanket. The astonished soldiers leaped to their feet, and tried to reach the door, but the Indians were t quick for them; they had alrea secured most of the muskets, which had been carelessly left inside. Seeing the fruitlessness of getting inside, the soldiers stampeded like frightened deer for the shore, where a boat was in waiting; again the Indians were forehanded—only two whites gaining the boat and pushing off pell mell, pursued by twenty bullets, which found the mark ere they had gone fifteen strokes.

Again the scene changed:—Far up the river I fancied I saw an approaching long-boat manned by British soldiers, the squad apparently in command of a fine-looking young officer, who stood in the bow shading his eyes with his hand against the blinding glare of the sun upon the water, and gazing anxiously at the wooded shores of Bois Blanc, but seeing no sign of life; a naked storm-beaten tree towered high above its fellows like some giant spectator of the tragedy which had been enacted. Soon the long-boat rounded a little point, and came in full view of the block-house. The officer hailed—sending his voice clear as a bell, but his cry broke on the still air like the sudden report of a musket, and the echoes were the only reply as they chased each other to and from the silent shores, and seemed to lose themselves at last in the high bluffs at the north end of the island. The door of the stockade gaped wide open, but no familiar form emerged from its portals. Strange conjectures were passing in the minds of the men, and each read in the others' faces forebodings of a calamity. As the boat's keel grated on the sands, they ascended the steep bluff to the block-house, and as the officer sprang nimbly through the underbrush, his toe caught on some obstacle, nearly tripping him down. Impatient at delay he administered a spiteful kick—and a human skull was dislodged and rolled away down the hill!

The whole party were now standing in the open expanse: and what a sight met their eyes! At intervals of perhaps ten yards around, a semi-circle fartherest from the fort, large stakes were set deep in the ground—for a purpose; each stake bore a skeleton in various states of preservation—some blackened, others weather-beaten and glistening white in the summer sun, while the long-since charred and blackened embers told only too plainly how the victims met their fate at the hands of the treacherous Pontiac.

For some minutes the brave officer and his men, hardened though they were to scenes of carnage, could scarce restrain the scalding tears as they stood there with bowed heads; then every man's good right arm was upraised, and I caught their voices in unison, "This murder shall be avenged, though it cost every drop of blood in our veins."

Then a misty light came over the scene, and it faded like a mirage. The spell is broken and I awake; the roaring whistle of a distant steamer fully recalls my senses. Surely my position is an uncomfortable one, and my head aches from contact with the rough sill. My watch indicated 7:15. Great Caesar, what a nap I have taken!

The red-hot sun is just touching the western horizon, as I launch the boat and pull far out on the rolling river, nightly watched by the soft radiant eye of Bois Blanc light.

The End.

Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell was Right

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left the Medical College in eighteen seventy five, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he has used in his practice, known to druggists and the upblic since eighteen ninety-two as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, billiousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chance with strong drugs.

A bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will last a family several months, and all can use it. It is good for the baby because pleasant to the taste, gentle in action

FAMED PUNTERS RETURN TO STATE

If nothing more, Michigan should have one of the greatest groups of punters in the Big Ten Conference this season with the return of five former varsity kickers, Louis Gilbert, George Rich, Harold Greenwald, Fred Fuller and William Puckelwartz will probably be the nucleus of Coach Yost's punting staff at the opening of the nineteen twenty seven gridiron season

Gilbert stands head and shoulders above the group, some even ranking him with the redoubtable Harry Kipke, all American half and the most accurate punter in recent years.. Besides Gilbert Coach Yost will have Fred Fuller who starred with the varsity eleven in nineteen twenty five but who was scholastically ineligible last season.. Fuller's kicks are not quite as accurate as Gilbert's but travel fully as far and with equal speed.

Freenwald and Rich subbed for Gilbert last season at the kicking end of the game when "Louie" was out of the game with a bruised foot Of the two, Rich is probably the better although neither displayed the arch and length of boot which Gilbert was capable of sending off Punckelwartz punted as third man on the nineteen twenty five squad and while his kicking is better than average, he is a bit behind the rest in booting the oval for long distances.

Among the new men on the squad LaVerne Taylor, an end is said to possess the faculty for getting off long punts. The addition of several more newcomers to the list should completely satisfy the coaches' desire for a capable staff of punters.

POTATO FARM CHOICE WAITS

The state board of agriculture intends to select the site for the Michigan State College's new potato experiment station at harvest time early in October, according to Melville B. Mc Pherson, of Lowell, a member of the state board and chairman of the committee named to investigate proposed locations.

By delaying the selection, McPherson said the state board can climinate from further consideration sites found subject to early frost injury. The new station must be a place, he explained where the state reasonably may expect its experimental plots to reach full maturity.

Intimations that certain interests seeking the station intend to offer to partly pay for the cost of the farms have reached the state board and McPherson said each of these proposals would be given careful consideration. The state board is not looking for gift farms he added, and will not accept some farms as a gift. The legislature has appropriated twenty five thousand dollars for the new station. This money will not become available until early in January.

A delegation of Montcalm County farmers and business men recently interviewed Mc Pherson and urged the committee to inspect the James Edgar farm of one hundred sixty acres, near Lakeview, as a site for the station. The merits of the place were explained in detail.

Another strong contender for the station, is the Cadillac district, which has invited the committee to inspect a farm near Lake City.

GRAND RAPIDS TO GET REFUND FROM COUNTY

The city of Grand Rapids is to be refunded nine thousand, four hundred thirty seven dollars and eighty cents by the county for over payment of board bills of city prisoners at the county jail during the period from January, first nineteen twenty two to June first nineteen twenty six. . The city was charged for and paid the board bill of every police court prisoner sent to the jail, regardless of whether the offense was against state law or city ordinance.

AUTO EXPORTS BREAK RECORD

Exports of automotive products during the first half of nineteen twenty seven had a total valuation of two hundred twenty one million, seven hundred sixty thousand, seven hundred fifty three and exceeded the previous record of one hundred eighty two million, one hundred fifteen thousand, seven hundred eighty four dollars made during the corresponding period of last year, by twenty one and 8 tenths P. C., according to figures supplied by the automobile division of the department of commerce

Passenger car shipments registered gains in every price class with the exception of those vehicles valued "up to five hundred dollars".. The most notable advancement was in the class 'over twelve hundred up to two thousand dollars' numbering sixteen thousand three hundred fifty four units, where the gain was sixteen hundred four in actual numbers and one hundred fifteen per cent in value.

The total value of passenger car exports increased twenty five and six tenths per cent and reached, one hundred seventeen million, one hundred forty three thousand, five hundred sixty two dollars as against ninety two thousand, two hundred seventy nine thousand, three hundred thirty nine recorded in the January to June period of nineteen twenty six.

Shipments of trucks and busses established hitherto untouched totals and the fifty four thousand seven hundred twenty five units, having a valuation of thirty four million, five hundred sixty two thousand, one hundred eighty four showed a fifty six and one tenth per cent gain in value and a forty one and nine tenths per cent advance in value, with the low capacity vehicles up to one ton, responsible for the larger share of this improvement.

Electric trucks and passenger cars, parts of motor vehicles, except engines and tires, motor boats marine engines and aircraft and parts all surpassed the shipments made during the corresponding period of last year, but trailers, automobile engines, motorcycles, cycle parts and aircraft engines declined.

For the first six months of the current year Australia has occupied the leading position as a market for American automotive products. Canada and Argentina, in their demands for passenger cars, retain their places immediately following Australia in importance while the takings of Denmark and British South Africa exceeded the Brazilian total.

SUMMER CANNING CUTS BROILER BILL

How housewives can cut their chicken bill in two by taking advantage of present prices and canning their winter supply of broilers and springers was demonstrated in Kent County at two meetings arranged by Miss Agnes Sorensen Kent county home demonstration agent.

In arranging the demonstration Miss Sorensen pointed out that farmers now are selling chickens at prices fifty per cent under those which normally are paid for the same class of poultry in midwinter Home canning of chicken in the summer would supply producers with a stronger outlet for their poultry at a time when the supply is heaviest, Miss Sorensen believes Consumers would have money and the farmers would benefit through improvement in the market.

STOCK DEATHS CUT IN SHIPPING THROUGH ASSOCIATION EFFORT

Efforts of the Michigan Livestock Loss Prevention Association to reduce livestock losses in shipments enroute to market are bearing fruit, officials of the organization reported.

Appreciable reductions were noted in number of dead and injured animals. The decline in July losses in particular encouraged officers of the association. Usually the the mid summer death rate is very high but this year only seven dead animals for each one hundred cars were reported against eleven dead last year. The cripples fell from eight to five per one hundred cars.

Losses continue to be heaviest in swine. The records show that hogs made up seventy nine per cent of cripples, and eighty per cent of the dead animals, in shipments reaching Detroit.

The calf losses ranked second to the swine.. Most of these losses investigation showed, were traceable to the carelessness of shippers. Losses were greatest in shipments in which the calves were permitted to run loose with other cattle and as a result trampled enroute to market.

COUNTY ROAD GARAGE MOVED TO REED CITY

The Osceola county road garage and repair shop will be moved to Reed City from Evart, where it has always been. Reed City offered the county road commissioners a ten year lease to the old waterworks building free of charge and the offer was accepted.

FRESHMAN RULE BLOW TO OLIVET COLLEGE 11

Coach Al Cassell, big four sportman from Carleton College Minn., began his second year as head of the Olivet College athletic department with none too bright an outlook for a successful year, especially as far as foot ball is concerned.

Olivet has been harder hit than the other schools in the Michigan Intercollegiate Athletic Association by the new Freshman rule as it had a number of weak places on the nineteen twenty six aggregation which could have been bolstered by new material.

The New Empress of the Rails

Sixty passenger engines of a new and improved type go into service on our lines this month. They are the most powerful six-driving-wheel locomotives ever built, and tests show that they are the most forward step in locomotive construction in years. A distinctly New York Central achievement, this type will be known as the "Hudson."

This engine differs from its predecessors chiefly by having the four-wheel, powered truck under the cab. This gives a more even distribution of the great weight, and hence greater starting and tractive power.

The story of New York Central is largely the story of the development of ever more efficient and more powerful locomotives. Thus does the "Hudson" become the lineal descendant of the "De Witt Clinton," and take its place as the new empress of the rails.

Fifty of these "Hudson" engines will be on the New York Central, and ten on the Michigan Central. Those on the New York Central will be numbered from 5200 to 5249; those on the Michigan Central from 5250 to 5259.

Your Uncle Hank Ford has recently completed a deal whereby he becomes owner of a 1500 acre rubber plantation in Brazil which is in full production for which Mr. Ford paid $42,000,000. Looks very much as if he intended manufacturing his own tires. Perhaps you have noted extra commotion among the allied interests of General Motors, and there is a reason as the world will soon discover. When Mr. Ford comes to the point of manufacturing his own cars complete even to the rubber there will be something doing in the prices of machines. The troubles of the Allies have only began it seems.what wots the public? Not much you bet. The more rubber plantations—the cheaper price we will get on Flivvers and perhaps —other cars. When this business of Auto manufacture gets where it ought to be the public may be surprised to learn that dividends of manufacturers are so high the profit is more than the price of manufacture.

Billy Sunday Only a Memory

To those who have heard the Honorable Billy Sunday preach his soul stirring sermons we need say little but to those who have not heard him we might say much since the newspaper reports of him given several years ago when he was in his glory and about the time he conducted such wonderful revivals in New York City and at other worldly places on the map, were slightly misleading. We were made to believe he was a sort of sporting Purveyor of gospel truths through the jargon of the baseball diamond or that he was merely a wonderful word painter without much christianity under his hat. The early history of the rise of "Billy" seems almost like a fairy tale.

He never saw his father who was a pioneer in Ames Iowa, and who enlisted in the Civil War with an Iowa regiment before Billy was born and went to the front never to return. He died from disease contracted in the service and thus the sacrificing mother was left with her family of three sons to fight life's stern battles as best she could. How well she succeeded history will record. She kept the little family together in the two roomed log cabin they called home, but times grew hard and she decided to send the boys to the Soldiers Orphan Home where they remained two years coming out of it in 1876. Mr. Sunday used to talk freely of his boyhood days and it was his pride that every inch of the way he had to fight like a trooper for his daily sustenance. He said: "I am a hayseed of hayseeds and the malodors of the barnyard are on me yet. I have crept and crawled from the university of poverty and hard knocks."

Mr. Sunday never preached any cut and dried sermons. His talks always came from a new aspiration, and the terriffic exertions he underwent in delivering his shovel and tongs stuff usually brought his hearers up to a high pitch of nervous excitement. Whether this sort of evangelism worked for good or for evil we leave our readers to judge. We personally do not know any of his converts nor have we ever heard of any who decided to take up their cross after listening to his talks although there is no doubt he had the altar rails full of penitents always wherever he happened to be.

The wonderful magnetism and personality of the strapping baseball athlete had much to do with the sudden fits of repentance of his hearers without doubt, and as there had never been any just like him nor has there ever been any since, he stands in a particular field alone. It is said of him that in delivering many of his sermons he assumed the most grotesque attitudes such as standing on one foot and leaning out over his audience, wallowing on all fours like an animal, and pounding the furniture unmercifully. Is it any enigma that to-day at the age of 64 years he resides at his Winona Indiana home a broken down old man devoid of most of the qualities which a minister of the gospel should have. We imagine that hearing a sermon from him would be much the same as listening to the last few remarks in public of the great ionoclist, Robert G. Ingersoll who talked as a voice from the grave.

Acrobatic preaching is all right in spots, and no doubt "Billy" Sunday's stunts on the platform had the effect of making the heedless listen, but did the spell wear off after Mr. Sunday was gone? Apparently Sunday whaled the society dames and the ultra-fashionable sporting class with all his might and he was foeman worthy of their steel don't you forget it, and how he managed to keep from under the ridicule of newspapers and stigmatism of "old fogeyism" in gay and reckless New York is more than we know. The malodorous Misdoings of the society sets in New York and Chicago must have been shaken to the core by his denunciations, but in no case did we ever hear a word of discredit given the famous divine.

But his days are past; public sentiment is changing for the worse. So far off its trolley has public ethics gone that in so notable a magazine as Literary Digest we find writers stating the Protestant religion is a fallacy, it is dying Prominent professors of literature tell us that thousands of good Protestants have come to disbelieve. What does this mean? It signifies the world is becoming a cesspool. People have not the faith they once had. Faithful Christian workers have watched and waited for results which never come.

To-day the Protestant church is on the verge of calamity; just what this calamity is we are not able to prophesy. Billy Sunday had his day, and he is a burnt-out cinder. The country waits for a new Mighty David to arise to take up the cudgel. Will he come?

Chemistry prove
It goes to show that vegetables and all fruits contain a high percentage of the best elements necessary to produce bone and blood and tissue. Certain pure Groceries which are found on our shelves also contain vitamins which combined into culinary products. have a tendency to keep the human system in first class health. She can't Eat Grass Enough
A cow producing 35 lbs. of milk daily cannot maintain that yield unless she has about 30 lbs. of dry matter in her feed.
Fresh pasture, which is nearly 80% water, contains but a small percentage of dry matter. This means that the cow will have to eat at least 175 lbs. of grass per day if she is to maintain both condition and milk yield.
Will your cows be able to find and crop that amount of pasture every day this summer? That is what you are expecting of them if you rely on grass alone. The result? A loss of milk and money, because few cows can eat more than 90 lbs. of grass in one day.
The remedy is simple. Feed Larro with pasture through the season—at the ratio of 1 lb. of Larro for each 5 lbs. of milk when pasture is plentiful, with a gradual increase as summer advances. Thus you can prevent the summer slump in milk; bring your cows into the fall in better condition for their winter work; and make more profit for yourself.

FARMERS OFFERED WAR EXPLOSIVES

Final echoes of the explosives used in the World war will resound through Michigan this year Larry Livingstone, agricultural engineering expert at Michigan State College said.

Through cooperation of the federal government and the college extension forces, farmers will have an opportunity to purchase the last allotment of war surplus explosives, he explained. There will be three hundred thousand pounds of pyrotol available for use in blasting tree stumps and boulders and in land clearing operations generally.

Livingston has charge of orders for the explosives, which will be distributed by the county agricultural agents. Only fifteen counties can obtain twenty thousand pound cars.

Since the war, fifty-five hundred thousand pounds of pyrotol have been used in Michigan with a saving of seven hundred and fifty thousand dollars to farmers, State college specialists estimate. Orders for the last allotment, which will exhaust the supply, must be placed by December first. . After Michigan farmers have used up the government material, they will have to purchase explosives at the commercial prices, according to Livingston.

MACKINAW ISLE BIDS FOR COOLIDGES' VISIT IN 1928

Cool north Michigan is pursuing Pres. Coolidge's nineteen twenty eight summer vacation scene preference already before he finishes his nineteen twenty seven vacation.

Governors and officials closed their meeting by indorsing Mackinac, little automobile-less isle in the confluence of Lakes Huron, Michigan and Superior as worthy to be the summer capital of the Union and G. A. Hendricks of Grand Rapids, Mich., Mackinaw Island state park commissioner, announces that this visiting governor's indorsement starts Michigan efforts to be host to President Coolidge next summer.

SEARCH FOR OIL ATTRACTS CROWD

The test oil well being driven by the Wittmer Oil and Gas Properties of Pittsburg, Pa., on the Ezra Huber farm, near Charlotte is now down almost two thousand feet and has proved to be a Mecca for hundreds of motorists. So popular has the spot become that a good automobile road has been worn as far as the well, and the field in which it is located has been worn bare.

Nothing more than a trace of petroleum has been discovered in the sand removed from the well. The company's geologist claims that the southern portion of Eaton county lies directly over the belt of oil that extends from Saginaw..

The surface of the ground is said to be nine hundred feet above sea level. Various causes have produced delays in the drilling. An eight inch casing had to be placed around the drill to relieve the difficulty caused by water flooding the well. A Carmel township farmer reports that oil seeps out of the ground on his farm.

GRAND RAPIDS TAKES STEP IN SAFETY MOVE

"Make them think' questions are being compiled by the public safey steering committee of the Grand Rapids Safety council, which, according to its chairman, H. Fred Oltman, proposes to circulate from ten thousand to twenty thousand questionnaires during the fall to seek ideas of the public on the traffic safety situation.

PROPOSES AID FOR FARMERS

While Government officials wrangle over what form of "farm relief" is best, Robert C. Atkinson a Niles business man, has devised a scheme which gives promise of immediate benefit to the farmers of Southwestern Michigan.

In belief, the plan is to aid the farmer of limited capital by giving him an opportunity to buy livestock shipped directly from the Western range country and financing his feeding operations during the period of feeding, through a 'contract note' at the nearest bank

Mr. Atkinson, who himself owns a farm near Niles and a ranch in New Mexico, worked out his plan after observations made in connection with business trips through the territory surrounding Niles. He noticed that on many farms a certain amount of pasturage is going to waste for lack of feeding animals and that the farmers did not have the animals because of the difficulties connected with obtaining them.

When he first broached the plan to a banker at Niles, he was told;

"Oh the bankers won't do that.'

"Get into my car and we'll see." replied Mr. Atkinson..

In the course of one afternoon they assured themselves on the support of two banks in Niles, one in Buchanan, one in Galien and one in New Carlisle, Ind.

Virtuall yallteabhshrdluhrrdolo

Virtually all the banks within a fifty mile radius of Niles, including portions of Berrien, Cass, St. Joseph and Van Buren Counties of Michigan and Elkhart, St. Joseph and La Porte Counties of Indiana, are expectd to fall in line.

"I have a nephew in New Mexico who is familiar with range cattle and I expect to depend largely on him to supply us with the right kind of stuff." said Mr. Atkinson "I also have other connections in New Mexico and Montana in which I have confidence.

"I expect to bring in just one carload at first. I shall rent a field provided with feed and water and turn the animals for ten days, inturn the animals in for ten days, in look them over. Then I'll go to the local banker and make arrangements with him to clerk an auction sale at which the animals will be sold.

The bank will finance the purchase of the livestock, taking a con tract note' which will be the same as a chattel mortgage, except that only the animals themselves will be the security. The farmer will pay the note when he sells the cattle. Meanwhile, the bank will be keeping track of him, to see that he is handling them properly.

"This will give the small farmer a chance to use his pasture and rough feed and to use decrepit or immature labor. On many farms there are old men or young boys not able to do heavy work, but who can look after livestock.'

The cattle brought in will be known as 'stockers and feeders". Some of them will be purchased in the fall, with the idea of completely "finishing them off" for market a year later. The rest will be purchased in the spring and resold after five or six months.

"Range cattle walk a lot to get sweet water and feed." said Mr. Atkinson. . "On Michigan pasture with plenty of sweet water and feed close at hand, the same cattle would take on twice the growth."

Besides the beef cattle, he expects to bring in lambs and breeding ewes, and perhaps some dairy cows.

Most of the notes will run from six months to a year.

The plan ought to be good for the banks as well as for the farmers, declared Thomas Cain, a Niles bank official. "If the farmers are more prosperous, the banks will be more prosperous too.

"There is very little risk connected with this type of paper, because we can watch the farmer and take the livestock if he is not getting along well. And it does not run long enough to become a frozen asset.'

Acid Stomach
"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowls and gently urges the souring taste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips". Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

FEDERAL MARKET OFFICE OPENS AT BENTON HARBOR

R. H. Shoemaker market specialist in the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics, has re-opened the Federal market news office at Benton Harbor where he will issue apple, peach, grape, onion and potato market reports in cooperation with the State Department of Agriculture. The office will be moved to Grand Rapids at the close of the grape season in October.

In his summary of the nineteen twenty six apple deal in Michigan, Shoemaker advocates the establishment of a special grade for canning apples. Canneries packed four million pounds of apples in tins last winter, but Shoemaker said they purchased twice that quantity, and sold the best fruit on the open market.

Shoemaker observed last year that the bushel basket was growing in popularity as a package for Michigan apples. More were packed in baskets than in barrels. In the past the bulk of the crop has been shipped in barrels. Fennville was the leading shipping point, loading three hundred fifty seven cars. Bangor and South Haven were second and third, respectively.

HART'S POWER PLANT REALITY

Hart's one hundred fifteen thousand dollar hydra electric project is nearing completion and within thirty days the residents of the town will be using their own electric light and power current. Thus comes to fruition one of the bitterest fights ever waged for municipal ownership, the matter having gone to the supreme court on two occasions.

The plant is located on the Pentwater river a mile from town and engineers declare it to be one of the most compact and efficient ever erected in Michigan. The power plant and spillway are combined in one structure. The two spillway gates are set on the sides of the power house and discharge below into the same channel into which the water wheels discharge.

The history of this project dates back about four years. At that time a committee composed of W C Bennett, Dr. L. P. Munger and the late J. D. S. Hanson secured the services of Grand Rapids engineers to make all investigations and reports to show the feasibility of the project.

Later another survey was made, followed by an election in which a bond issue was proposed. This failed. Another election was held in which a bond issue carried by a margin of two votes. Then followed a law suit on a technicality which was carried to the supreme court and won by the village.

Still another law suit with injunction proceedings was started and carried to the supreme court the village winning that also.

THE COUNTRY OF THE BLIND

By H. G. WELLS

Three hundred miles and more from Chimborazo, one hundred from the snows of Cotopaxi, in the wildest wastes of Ecuador's Andes, there lies that mysterious mountain valley, cut off from all the world of men, the Country of the Blind. Long years ago that valley lay so far open to the world that men might come at last through frightly gorges and over an icy pass into its equable meadows, and thither indeed men came, a family or so of Peruvian half-breeds, fleeing from the lust and tyranny of an evil Spanish ruler. Then, came the stupendous outbreak of Mindobamba, when it was night in Quito for seventeen days, and the water was boiling even as far as Guayaquil; everywhere along the Pacific slopes there were land-slips and swift thawings and sudden floods, and one whole side of the old Arauca crest slipped and came down in thunder, and cut off the Country of the Blind forever from the exploring feet of men. But one of these early settlers had chanced to be on the hither side of the gorges when the world had so terribly shaken itself, and he perforce had to forget his wife and his child and all the friends and possessions he had left up there, and start life over again in the lower world. He started it again, but ill, blindness overtook him, and he died of punishment in the mines; but the story he told begot a legend that lingers along the length of the Cordilleras of the Andes to this day.

He told of his reason for venturing back from that fastness, into which he had first been carried lashed to a llama, beside a vast bale of gear, when he was a child. The valley, he said, had in it all that the heart of man could desire sweet water, pasture, an even climate, slopes of rich brown soil with tangles of a shrub that bore an excellent fruit, and on one side great hanging forests of pine that held the avalanches high. Far overhead, on three sides, vast cliffs of grey-green rock were capped by cliffs of ice but the glacier stream came not to them, but flowed away by the farther slopes, and only now and then huge ice masses fell on the valley side. In this valley it neither rained nor snowed but the abundant springs gave a rich green pasture, that irrigation would spread over all the valley space. The settlers did well indeed there. Their beasts did well and multiplied and but one thing marred their happiness. Yet it was enough to mar it greatly. A strange disease had come upon them and had made all the children born to them there—and, indeed, several older children also—blind. It was to seek some charm or antidote against this plague of blindness that he had with fatigue and danger and difficulty returned down the gorge. In those days, in such cases men did not think of germs and infections, but of sins, and it seemed to him that the reason of this affliction must let the negligence of these priestless immigrants to set up a shrine as soon as they entered the valley. He wanted a shrine—a handsome, cheap, effectual shrine—to be erected in the valley; he wanted relics and suchlike potent things of faith, blessed objects and mysterious medals and prayers. In his wallet he had a bar of native silver for which he would not account; he insisted there was none in the valley with something of the insistence of an inexpert liar. They had all clubbed their money and ornaments together, having little need for such treasurer up there, he said, to buy them holy help against their ill. I figure this dim-eyed young mountaineer, sunburnt, gaunt, and anxious, hat brim clutched feverishly, a man all unused to the ways of the lower world, telling this story to some keen-eyed, attentive priest before the great convulsion; I can picture him presently seeking to return with pious and infallible remedies against that trouble, and the infinite dismay with which he must have faced the tumbled vastness where the gorge had once come out. But the rest of his story of mischances is lost to me, save that I knew of his evil death after several years. Poor stray from that remoteness. The stream that had once made the gorge now bursts from the mouth of a rocky cave, and the legend his poor, ill-told story set going developed into the legend of a race of blind men somewhere "over there" one may still hear today.

And amidst the little population of that now isolated and forgotten valley the disease ran its course. The old became groping, the young saw but dimly, and the children that were born to them never saw at all. But life was very easy in that snow-rimmed basin, lost to all the world, with neither thorns nor briers, with no evil insects nor any beasts save the gentle breed of llamas they had lugged and thrust and followed up the beds of the shrunken rivers in the gorges up which they had come. The seeing had become purblind so gradually that they scarcely noticed their loss. They guided the sightless youngsters hither and thither until they knew the whole valley marvellously, and when at last sight died out among them the race lived on. They had even time to adapt themselves to the blind control of fire which they made carefully in stoves of stone. They were a simple strain of people at the first, unlettered only slightly touched with the Spanish civilization, but with something of a tradition of the art of old Peru and of its lost philosophy. Generation followed generation. They forgot many things; they devised many things. Their tradition of the greater world they came from became mythical in color and uncertain. In all things save sight they were strong and able, and presently chance sent one who had an original mind and who could talk and persuade among them, and then afterwards another. These two passed, leaving their effects, and the little community grew in numbers and in understanding, and met and settled social and economic problems arose. Generation followed generation. There came a time when a child was born who was fifteen generations from that ancestor who went out of the valley with a bar of silver to seek God's aid, and who never returned. Thereabout it chanced that a man came into this community from the outer world. And this is the story of that man.

He was a mountaineer from the country near Quito, a man who had been down to the sea, and had seen the world, a reader of books in an original way, an acute and enterprising man, who had come out to Ecuador to climb mountains, to replace one of the three Swiss guides who had fallen ill. He climbed here and he climbed there, and then came the attempt on Parascotopetl, the Matterhorn of the Andes, in which he was lost to the outer world. The story of that accident has been written a dozen times. Pointer's narrative is the best. He tells how the little party worked their difficult and almost vertical way up to the very foot of the last and greatest precipice, and how they built a night shelter amidst the snow upon a little shelf of rock, and, with a touch of real dramatic power, how presently they found Nunez had gone from them. They shouted, and there was no reply; shouted and whistled, and for the rest of that night they slept no more.

As the morning broke they saw the traces of his fall. It seems impossible he could have uttered a sound. He had slipped eastward towards the unknown side of the mountain; far below he had struck a steep slope of snow, and ploughed his way down it in the midst of a snow avalanche. His track went straight to the edge of a frightful precipice, and beyond, that everything was hidden. Far, far below, and hazy with distance, they could see trees rising out of a narrow, shut-in valley—the lost Country of the Blind. But they did not know it was the lost Country of the Blind nor distinguish it in any way from any other narrow streak of upland valley. Unnerved by this disaster they abandoned their attempt in the afternoon, and Pointer was called away to the war before he could make another attack. To this day Parascotopetl lifts an unconquered crest, and Pointer's shelter crumbles unvisited amidst the snows.

And the man who fell survived.

AGE OF FISH IS EASY TO TELL

The fish that flashes in the rushing brook or hides beneath the lily pads of a tranquil lake is as old as he is long.

There appears to be no Mutts nor Jeffs in the underwater world. Fish of the same family and age are invariably the same size, and thus statisticians have been able to fix fish age upon fish length.

Trout are the same size during the first year, be they brook brown or rainbow. At three months they are an inch and a half long. At six months they are three inches long. At a year they are again doubled in length.

But during the second year the brook trout grows only to eight inches, while brown and rainbow trout attain a ten inch length. By his fourth birthday the brook trout is a foot long, the brown trout fifteen inches long and the rainbow trout an even foot and a half from nose to tail.

The captor of a fifteen inch bass large or small mouthed—may be sure his catch is at least four year old.. Wall-eyed pike are two years of age when they measure ten inches, adding three inches a year until they reach their maturity at four years.

Perch on their second birthday are seven iches long. They add two inches in the following year, becoming ten inch veterans at four.

Blue gills are slowest to take on weight and longtiude.. The yearlings are but three and a half inches long, and only after two years do they reach the legal length of five inches. At four they are full grown to an eight inch dimension just a nice size for the frying pan.

FORGET FORTUNES IN DETROIT BANK

Many thousands of dollars lie in the banks and trust companies of Detroit abandoned or forgotten by the owners or unknown to the heirs.

A large Griswold street trust company has on its books a trust fund amounting to several thousands of dollars which was started more than twenty five years ago by two nurses, and has been unclaimed for the past thirteen year.s The company officials have tried repeatedly to locate the two women. It is possible, the officials say, for the account to run indefinitely through several generations of its heirs.

But often accounts that have been thought lost or forgotten by the owners are eventually claimed. Recently a pass book bearing the name of a bank long since forgotten in the shuffle of progress bearing the single entry of five dollars dated eighteen seventy three was brought in for collection. For many years the little account had run on unnoticed, drawing interest at the rate of six per cent, which prevailed at that time. About nineteen hundred the bank closed out its accounts as nearly as possible and retired from business. Unbalanced accounts were taken over by the State. If this little account could be collected now, after fifty four years, it would pay the owner more than eight times as much as he deposited or about forty five dollars.

The story of an account amounting to more than two thousand dollars, that lay unclaimed for twenty four years, is told by C. E. Partridge, of the Dime Savings Bank. Officials of the bank had tried many times to locate the owner, and, although .letters mailed to him were never returned, no reply could be had. More than doubled through the accumulation of interest the account eventually was collected by the heirs, who explained that the owner had been a northern Michigan woodsman and timber man and had lived alone in the wilds, seldom visiting civilization..

Mr. Partridge tells another story of a globe trotter who remained unheard from for thirty three years. He had been forgotten by friends and the bank had given up hope of finding him when he suddenly appeared to settle his account. With happy anticipation he presented his pass book and collected well over twice the sum he had deposited years before.

A recluse living in a quiet village, has an account in a Detroit bank which was thougnt to have been without an owner for nearly fourteen years. The bank's ledger has shown no change in the account for so long that it was about to be given up as belonging to a dead man. Finally the officials of the bank learned that the man was alive. They then induced him to come in and claim his funds.

An account amounting to over one thousand dollars had lain unclaimed in a local institution for nearly twenty five years when a probate court, in settling the owner's affairs named the heirs. The other property left by the depositor was administrated, but many years have passed and the dead man's savings still remain on deposit unclaimed by the heirs.

Final valuation of the Port Huron and Detroit railroad extending from Port Huron to Marine City, Mich., was announced by the interstate commerce commission as three hundred forty four thousand one hundred twenty nine dollars. This is an increase of about thirty thousand dollars above the tentative valuation which was protested by the rairoad company.. At the same time, the commission finally valued the Port Huron and Southern railroad, which is owned by the Port Huron and Detroit rail road and runs from [illegible], Mich. to South Port Huron at seventy one thousand dollars.

SQUAD OF COPS CALLED DUE TO MAD CATS CUNNING

A "mad cat" scare set the southwest part of the city of Ferndale in an uproar and the offending cat's agility and cunning made the services of a squad of patrolmen necessary to end its career.

The cat is said to have been bitten by a dog shot later on suspicion it had rabbies. The cat bit Joseph Spence and escaped. He hunted for the animal most of the night, but when unable to find it he notified police, who set out with nets to make the capture.

One of the policemen caught the cat in a net, but it clawed and bit its way to freedom and took refuge under a house. Tear gas cartridges failed to dislodge her, but when a stream of water from a hose was turned under the house, the cat ran out to be shot by Patrol John Morgan.

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine back in eighteen seventy five, the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine.. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in eighteen ninety two under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid vegetable remedy intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

Millions of families are now never without Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be gald to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours.. Just write "Syrup Pepsin", Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

Somerset Congregational Church Starts Its New Year With Enthusiasm

A well filled church greeted Prof. W. H. Roberts of College Department of History for his opening sermon following his three week's vacation, during which time the church was closed.

Several friends made use of the splendid paved roads which converge at this point and many came from nearby cities.

As one expressed it, "Either the sermon or the music alone were worth the long drive to hear."

Prof. Roberts is never disappointing, and the large audience was an evident inspiration to him in treating his subject "Singleness of Purpose", amid templation, 1st, to take life easy by commanding stories to be made broad, 2nd to be spectacular,3rd to satisfy the morbid crowd demanding a conquoring hero as a King rather than lasting good for human race, which is the first of a series of sermons on "Fundamentals of Christianity."

Next Sunday is to be "Rally Day" for the Sunday School. A fine program has been arranged for the Sunday school hour following the Church Service at 10 a. m. Central Standard time at which time Prof. Roberts is to take up another phase of his general topic "Fundamentals of Christianity."

Report The Sheriff's Office, Week Ending Sept. 24th, 1927

J. O'Brien, late of New York City, was arrested September 18th, for disorderly conduct on the street of Hillsdale, and was sentenced to five days in jail. Jimmie was some canary, and during his stay amused the inmates with his singing.

Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of the past week, the entire Sheriff's Department operated on U. S. 112, familiarizing the motorists with the main features of Michigan's new Motor Vehicle law. In order to make the knowledge of the law more lasting, it was necessary that the worst violators be taken before a Justice' of the Peace and a fine administered, beside the verbal "bawling out", given by the officers. Separate groups of Deputies worked in Allen, Jonesville, Moscow and Somerset Center, also travelling the Pike between these points, 51 arrests were made during the 4 days, 4 being for reckless, 2 for exceeding the Bus speed limit, 11 for exceeding the speed limit through Allen, and the rest for speeding thru Moscow, Jonesville, running past the red traffic lights, etc. Approximately $650 in fines and costs were collected. In the enforcement of these laws, the officers worked toward quality, not quantity, only the more flagrant violators being arrested. Hundreds of other motorists were merely stopped and warned, and the particular section of the law which they were violating was pointed out to them in a courteous manner.

Milo W. Smith, of Jonesville, was arrested in the traffic crusade for operating without a tail light and given a summons to appear. Appear he did, but in an intoxicated condition, and then got himself still further into "hot water" by creating a disturbance in the Court Room. For this he was fined $20 and sentenced to 5 days in jail for Contempt of Court by Justice Espie, of Jonesville, in whose Court the above took place, Smith paid the fine and served the days and is now out.

The crusade also netted 4 bootleggers, who crossed the watchful eyes of the traffic patrol. On Tuesday night a Chevrolet Cabriolet speared in Jonesville and was stopped by the officers. The driver put over a fast one and managed to slip away while the lights on the car (his) were being fixed. The car was brought to Hillsdale, where it was found to contain 10 cases of liquor. Virgil Watts, of Medora, Ind., who was riding with the driver, was held for questioning and later released.

Thursday Walter Chismas and wife driving a Chrysler Coupe came thru Moscow. Officers there stopped him, and after talking to him for a few minutes, "got his number". The Chrysler was found to contain 30 gallons of "moon". Chismas waived examination before Justice Aldrich Friday and was bound over to the October term of the Circuit Court, bail of $1000 not furnished.

Thursday afternoon Ed Weisner of Detroit and Chicago was stopped as he headed west thru Moscow, with a Dodge Coupe. Circumstances were so suspicious that he was immediately brought to Hillsdale, where investigation revealed 6 cases of Grade A whiskey. Weisner appeared before Justice Aldrich Friday afternoon and waived examination and was bound over to the Circuit Court, bail the usual $1000.

A. C. Johnson and Jess Michaels both of Jonesville, sailed thru Allen Tuesday, and thereby hangs the tale. They broke the speed limit and were run to earth by the officers at that point. Both men seemed quite a little the worse for liquor, and a glance in the car revealed a quantity of home brew, bottled, in the rear seat. The men were brought before Justice Fitzsimmons, where each waived examination and was bound over to the Circuit Court,—bail of $1000 each. Johnson was released Saturday morning on a bond furnished by Mr. Dudley. Friday morning Michaels plead guilty in Circuit Court, but sentence was deferred until Sept. 26th, when a number of others will be brought up for sentence

Claude D. Spade was arrested in Ohio, State Friday afternoon on a charge of deserting his family and brought back to Hillsdale. He was taken before Justice Fitzsimmons and released on $500 bond, furnished by Mrs. Close, and immediately re-arrested on a Body Attachment for non-payment of alimony, etc. Saturday morning he made a settlement that was satisfactory to the Circuit Court and was released.

Considerable excitement has been caused the past week by the numerous bands of gypsies passing thru the County. A large camp of them is now located near Churches Corners. This particular band has several concessions at the Fair, and the Sheriff's Department has been kept busy answering complaints in regard to these people.

Victor Lacarac, the first Federal prisoner to be sentenced to a Co. Jail in the State of Michigan was received at the jail about 10 a. m. Saturday, to serve a sentence of 91 days for V. P. L. The visiting U. S. Inspector of Prisons gave the Hillsdale County Jail a high rating, and now since the Federal Court for the Eastern District of Michigan is no longer sentencing U. S. prisoners to the Detroit House of Correction, a number more are expected.

Dayton C. Cook, a local young man, was arrested Saturday morning after passing a worthless check on a county filling station operator. His case will be brought to Court next week.

William Klaus and Walter Murray of Detroit, were arrested late Saturday night after an auto accident on U. S. 112 in Somerset Twp. in which they were one set of principals. The Deputy who investigated the wreck noticed that the men were considerably under the influence of liquor and brought them to jail, where they will held until it is determined what the nature of the charge placed against them will be.

No. of prisoners in the County Jail 17. Under sentence 3. Waiting trial 14. Total 17.

ON the face of things one may sometimes imagine that canned meats are expensive, but a closer analysis will reveal that they are infinitely cheaper than fresh meat, in addition to the fact that they require no great amount of cooking and preparation. Mentally compare the relative cost in time and money of a can of boned chicken and the same amount of meat from fresh fowl. The washing, cleaning and cooking process is so complicated as to be discouraging even in contemplation. How simple by comparison is the use of the canned product, which is equally good for salad, creamed chicken and all the various uses to which the fresh meal may be put.

Cutting Down Costs

The greatest economy of canned meats, however, lies in the fact that they are so concentrated, having lost 20 per cent to 50 per cent of the water that was present in the fresh meat. For instance, a 30-ounce can of corned beef contains the equivalent in nourishment of nearly 49 ounces of uncooked beef, and 60 pounds of canned beef are equal to 100 pounds of fresh beef without bone or sinew. These are convincing arguments for the housewife who must watch the family budget. Cutting down on the cost of meat means reducing the largest single item of food. Moreover, canned beef is higher in protein content than fresh beef.

Suitable Sizes

Can you imagine the housewife who must provide for five hungry people buying a pound of fresh meat for dinner? And yet because a full pound can of beef is too much for the average family, canners have taken to putting up a 12-ounce can which will make a satisfactory meal for five, and which may be used in a number of delightful ways; sliced, made into sandwiches, combined with vegetables in the making of nourishing stew, or

An Open Letter to the Editor

From the President of General Motors

LAST SPRING I wrote you that my belief in the country newspaper had led us in General Motors to decide to advertise our products together in the small-city press of the country.

The returns from the series of the messages recently published have justified that faith; and we shall continue to advertise in your community through your newspaper this fall.

It occurs to me, however, that some of your readers may be asking: "What is General Motors?" and "Why is General Motors?" These are fair questions and I should like to answer them as frankly as I can.

General Motors was organized some years ago on the theory that a group of large companies, working together, could render a better service than they could separately. In this we simply applied to industry a principle that is as old as civilization as regards the human family and human progress.

Original members of the General Motors family were Buick, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Oakland and Oldsmobile, together with the Delco-Light Company and other well-known companies manufacturing automotive equipment. By joining together their resources, we were able to establish great Research Laboratories, a 1245-acre Proving Ground and the GMAC Plan of credit purchase; to effect vast economies in purchase and manufacture and distribution; to assure and maintain the quality of every product in the General Motors family.

Has the General Motors family principle proved itself in practice?

The best answer, I think, is to compare the Chevrolet, Buick, Cadillac, Oldsmobile and Oakland of today with the models of five or ten years ago.

Then add Pontiac, a General Motors creation. Add LaSalle, another General Motors creation. And then consider how General Motors has developed these cars into a complete line, within which any family may find a suitable quality car at the price it plans to pay: "A Car for Every Purse and Purpose."

Another example is Frigidaire, the electric refrigerator. General Motors had the resources to spend millions to develop a satisfactory refrigerator, and then to apply to its manufacture the same processes which have increased the utility and lowered the cost of the automobile.

We believe that this record justifies General Motors as an economic institution. Its products are quality products, first of all. Their prices represent the economies of united effort passed on to the purchaser. In the last year one in each three automobiles chosen by the public has been a General Motors car. The service of Delco-Light electric plants has extended to more than a quarter million homes, while Frigidaire has become the world's largest selling convenience of its kind.

We believe also that the values now offered in the current General Motors products (which are listed below) prove anew that "many minds are better than one" and that a family of companies, working together, can produce results which are decidedly in the public interest and of increasing benefit to the individual family.

Very truly yours,
Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., President

Regular Parent-Teachers Meeting

Monday evening, October 10th the Parent Teachers' meeting is to be held at the Congregational church with program. See to it you are there if you are in any way interested in our High school and you should be if you live in the district. Here is a chance to show your loyalty to the cause of education as teachers are endeavoring with the limited facilities to make the thing yield results.

They Forgot To Mention North Adams

In a pre-fair announcement in the Hillsdale Daily News it was stated a great base ball tournament was scheduled to take place during Fair week. The American Oils, a crack team of Jackson was to meet Albion on the diamond, each representing their own county. However, Albion was to start the fuss by meeting North Adams team on Wednesday and of course they were to win the game. and eliminate the sand lot players from North Adams.

The game had to be called off on account of storms, and was postponed until Friday. When the two teams finally crossed bats the boys from North Adams succeeded in overcoming their bashfulness to the extent of five runs while Albion had done nothing. Thus was North Adams eliminated. After administering this shut out to Albion, our boys kindly consented to play the American Oils, and the Jackson team was expected to make short work of it.

Ameliorated weather conditions on Saturday made it possible to play the final game, and both teams went to the diamond primed for the inevitable, and they played a League game from start to finish.

Old fans stared pop eyed at what was by far the best game played there in years; it was just a series of one, two, three—out. It was seldom they put a man on first, and still rarer if he got to third.

Ryle who pitched for our team sent those delusive drops and out and ins over the plate until the batters got corkscrew neck trying to make a connection, so he put over a few "easies" for the boys to hit, as it was just as quick to field a man out on first apparently. Everett Williams went thru the spectators and caught a terrific pop-up outside the lines, and in almost every smash at the ball somebody was there

Taken all around the Saturday game showed North Adams' metal and handed out a few surprises to fans who agreed they would enjoy seeing North Adams in action again. McDonald pitching for American Oils threw a wicked ball, but occasionally our boys were able to make a line fence drive. The hard fought game ended with one lone score for North Adams.

Sunday School Making Rally at Somerset

Prof. W. H. Roberts preached his second sermon on "Fundemental Christianity" the title being "Forgiveness" which was very much appreciated and pronounced by one listener to be the best sermon he has preached during his Somerset pastorate.

Anna Lawrence, '27, was a H. S. visitor Wednesday.

The Girl Reserves met Thursday night after school. The installation of the new officers and initiation of new members will be held soon. Thirteen new members will be added.

The eighth grade English class had a debate Tuesday afternoon on the subject, "Resolved that it is harder to make a living today than in the time of our grandparents." The affirmative was upheld by Robert Keefer, Chairman, Mildred Miller and John Draper. The negative by Robert Smith, Chairman, Ruth Young and Donald North. Both teams presented good arguments and gave good rebuttals. The negative was declared to have won the debate.

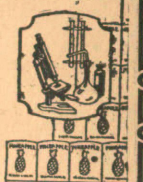
WHAT DOES
Chemistry prove



It goes to show that vegetables and all fruits contain a high percentage of the best elements necessary to produce bone and blood and tissue. Certain pure Groceries which are found on our shelves also contain vitamins which combined into culinary products. have a tendency to keep the human system in first class health. The present pure food laws combined with chemistry, make it quite impossible for a Grocery or Market to handle anything but the best.

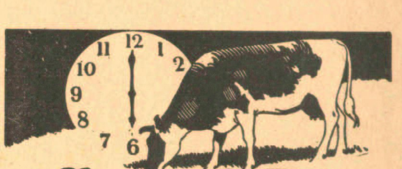
EDSON J. BENGE



She can't Eat Grass Enough

A cow producing 35 lbs. of milk daily cannot maintain that yield unless she has about 30 lbs. of dry matter in her feed.

Fresh pasture, which is nearly 80% water, contains but a small percentage of dry matter. This means that the cow will have to eat at least 175 lbs. of grass per day if she is to maintain both condition and milk yield.

Will your cows be able to find and crop that amount of pasture every day this summer? That is what you are expecting of them if you rely on grass alone. The result? A loss of milk and money, because few cows can eat more than 90 lbs. of grass in one day.

The remedy is simple. Feed Larro with pasture through the season—at the ratio of 1 lb. of Larro for each 5 lbs. of milk when pasture is plentiful, with a gradual increase as summer advances. Thus you can prevent the summer slump in milk; bring your cows into the fall in better condition for their winter work; and make more profit for yourself.

WAR ON ILLITERACY PLANNED IN STATE

Ingham county has been selected as the test point for Michigan in a national campaign against illiteracy sponsored by the General Federation of Women's clubs, it was announced by Mrs. Frank Gates Ellett, president of the Ingham county federations.

Mrs. M. S. Graham of Lansing who has been appointed general chairman of the movement, plans to appoint sixteen assistant chairmen, one from each township in the county

The state department of public instruction has pledged its co-operation in the campaign, which was undertaken by the federation at the request of the National Bureau of Education in an attempt to stamp out illiteracy by nineteen-thirty..

Because of the expense resultant from a national survey, the federation planned a trial census limiting it to one county in each state. Each county, chosen is supposed to be typical of any district in the state, having one city, small towns and a rural population.

In outlining plans for the campaign, Mrs. Ellett pointed out that there are five million persons in the United States unable to read or write, and that this country ranks tenth in literacy among the nations of the world.

If the movement's success warrants its extension, states surveys probably will be made within a few years, she said.

MASTODON'S TUSK DRAWS HUNDREDS

What is believed to be the tusk of a mastodon that roamed the St. Joseph valley in ages past has been unearthed on the farm of Noah J. Weaver near Buchanan.

The bone, measuring seven feet and four inches from tip to tip and being eight inches in diameter at the butt, was partly uncovered by excavators employed in digging a ditch through the Weaver farm. Glen Weaves, seventeen year old son of the owner of the farm, noticed a piece of the tusk protruding from the ground and removed it from the heavy substrata of clay in which it was imbedded, the bone was in three sections. Decomposition and ossification of animal and vegetable life had caused its color to change from a limestone white to a dull gray.

Word that the curiosity was being exhibited has brought hundreds of thrill hunters on pilgrimages to the Weaver farm points as remote as South Bend and LaPorte Indiana.

WAR STILL WAGED ON MOTOR TABOO

When Harvey Emory recently appointed assistant dean of students at the University of Michigan with power to enforce the students automobile ban took up his work this fall was faced with the task of considering some fifteen hundred applications for special permission to own and operate motor cars If Mr. Emory succeeds in discharging his duty without incurring the enmity of more than one thousand students, he may count himself fortunate.

Results of a questionnaire circulated among summer school students by those enrolled in the department of journalism, revealed the fact that virtually every student enjoying the use of an automobile during the regular school term intends to apply for special permission, undaunted by the warning of the regents that this will be granted only in extraordinary cases where actual necessity can be proved.

In the course of a heated debate on the subject, held by the Adelphi Society of the University, the argument was applauded that "If the university forces a ban on student cars because of their real or fancied immoral influence, then by all means we should have a ban on canoes on the Huron River. This was countered with the equally heated admonition to 'Pity' the poor student, right in the prime of life, who can't carry a small notebook a third of a mile to class without having to ride there in an expensively upholstered car. He should be in a sanitarium, not in a University".

Whether other demonstrations of disapproval in the form of roller-skates, kiddie cars ancient bicycles and the like will again be staged is apparently a matter of unconcern to university authorities. They take the position that the absolute ban was pronounced only after restrictive measures failed and the student body has indicated its inability or unwillingness to co-operate in reducing the annual number of student deaths resulting from automobile accidents.

SACRED FLOWER OF NILE BLOOMS IN MONROE MARSH

The lotus, sacred flower of the River Nile was in full bloom during the week in marshes east of Monroe along Lake Erie, and the beds were visited by many persons The growth this year compared favorably with that of last year. The blossoms are gradually diminishing, however, because of the low water in the creeks in the marshes, derived from the River Raisin, and the increased spreading of wild rice, which practically smothers the flower.

PREVENTORIUM SUPPORT ASKED

Effort to renew public interest in the Grand Rapids preventorium idea to the extent that the board of supervisors will agree to bear a material part of the expense of operation of a new institution has been begun by Sunnybanks Preventorium, a corporation recently organized.

The corporation has placed before the supervisors a proposal in which it agrees to purchase a site, erect the buildings and eventually turn the property over to the county if the county will indicate sufficient interest by contributing from eight thousand dollars to ten thousand dollars annually toward maintenance. The board will act upon the petition during its October session.

For several years the Grand Rapids Anti-Tuberculosis society operated a preventorium for undernourished children on leased property. An old barn, which has been used as a school house and as a dormitory for the boys, was destroyed by fire and emphasized the hazard existing in the remaining buildings;.. Consequently the project was abandoned last spring despite the fact that the institution had attained a nation-wide reputation.

Those interested in the old preventorium approached city officials with a view of inducing the city to create such an institution in connection with its municipal hospital system. The city commissioners reported they could not possibly take on another burden under the present tax limit. Then the sponsors, informed by the Welfare union that it considered it to be a project which should be financed by the public, formed the corporation known as Sunnybanks Preventorium.

Partridge became more plentiful in the Saginaw valley after the fire of eighteen seventy-one which swept through thousands of acres of great pine forests in the vicinity of Midland, according to G. Will Ball, eighty-three year-old pioneer, who has lived in Midland most of his life.

It may be that the burning of the heavy pine needle carpet, which covered the ground like a great mat and killed off other vegetation allowed clover and other food to grow aiding the partridge. In any event there were thousands of them after that avers Mr. Ball.

The pioneer hunter says that the Indians spent the summer hunting and fishing along the river banks. By an early treaty they were given a large tract south and west of the present city at the "little forks of the Teetabawasink" river. Most of their fish were taken with the spear, their game with the rifle. Later they were transferred to the Isabella reserve.

PASSING OF TROLLEY CAR RECALLS DAY OF GLORY

Days when "trolley parties" were popular social events and when it was the ambition of young men to obtain employment in operating the new electric cars, were recalled by old residents when the Marquette County Electric railway operating between Negaunee and Ishpeming, recently suspended service.

The cars first began to run on July first, eighteen ninety two and their passing was due to the competition of the speedier motor buses.

Victor "Dos" Anderson of Negaunee. who was empolyed as a regular conductor and operator at the close of the service began work for the company in May eighteen-ninety -five, and has been in its employ since that time. In eighteen- ninety five, Mr. Anderson recalls, the first all-winter service between the two cities was maintained and it was a matter of pride for the motorman to bring his car "in on time" when heavy snow drifts threatened to stop traffic.

RESEMBLES 'GOD OF WEALTH'

TOKYO Japaneses got a startling surprise the other day. Daikoku the "god of wealth" in Nippon, was considered only alive in his image which adorned many family shrines. Then along came S. GETS PURE WATER AFTER 50 YEARS

More than half a century of waiting for a pure water supply on the part of Saginaw citizens will be rewarded within a comparatively short period, if work now in progress on the construction of the city's pure water plant continues at the same pace.

The history of Saginaw's fight for pure water has many angles and for years has been the city's greatest civic annoyance. The advancement Saginaw has made was accomplished in spite of the lack of a pure water supply and now upon the eve of the successful culmination of the movement to obtain pure drinking water it would seem that the most dangerous barrier to municipal progress had been hurdled..

There was a time, many years ago, before such modern terms as stream pollution were known, that the water of the Saginaw river could be consumed without the menace of a city-wide epidemic. Then came industrial development following the closing of the lumber days, together with municipal improvements that caused the sewage from Saginaw and other cities situated on the Saginaw river, which eventually raised havoc, with the water supply of Saginaw.

This led to the construction of deep wells situated upon convenient neighborhood corners within two or three blocks of any home and today they stand as testimonals to the struggle undergone by Saginaw to obtain pure water. These struggles have taken form of legal battles in courts of equity strenuous political campaigns and finally culminated in a city-wide movement among the school children wherein was organized a campaign among the younger generation which resulted in a successful vote upon a pure water bond issue.

The choice of the source for the city's pure water supply probably caused as much furore as any single issue. There were factions in past years which sought Saginaw bay as the source, others that wanted the river to furnish the supply as at present and finally there came into the arena the group demanding that a pipeline be laid from the flowing springs in Clare county. a distance of some forty-two miles away.

Before the last vote, one bond issue had been raised for building a pipeline from Saginaw to the bay for pure water. The money was spent for right-of-way and some of the preliminary work, and after the funds were exhausted and the work hardly started, the antagonism against the bay as a source grew rapidly. It is a coincidence that on part of the right-of-way obtained for the water pipeline, the city is now deriving revenue from the production of oil, several wells have been sunk upon this land.

Sour Stomach

Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowls and gently urges the souring taste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips". Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

Muskrats or Mortgages?

By DR. P. G. ROHR

The farm problem is sitting on the stomach of the profession politician as heavily as an overdose or mincemeat pie on the schoolboy's tummy. He's counting sheep these nights thinking about next year's election. And all because he knows there's a lot of farmers worrying and wondering when they see the value of farm lands on the tobaggon. The reason why so many farmers are seeing their farms decrease in value is that the average return from the acre is not what it should be. World conditions, tariff wars and overproduction are all jumbled up in a grand mess of trouble making and so the farmer has cause to worry and the politician real reason for wondering what the farmer intends to do about it.

As always, whenever folks are in trouble there are a lot of doctors who disagree as to just what's the matter and what kind of treatment to use. Government help, cooperation schemes and a thousand different remedies are suggested. Some of them good, some not so good—all of them beside the mark when you really get down to it. The only real help is the help that the farmer gives himself. When a businessman gets into trouble and finds his line doesn't sell or make his money he looks around for something else that will. But he will make money if he can help it and its to be made. Why not the farmer.

Now I don't claim to be much of a doctor for the farmer. But I've got a little suggestion that's worth money if the farmer will sit up and read and think and then act.

When figures show that there were two hundred sixty nine million dollars worth of raw furs used in these United States last year to make up fur coats and collars and scarfs, when we know that something like one hundred fifteen million rabbit skins were imported from Australia and Europe, when we know that almost eighty-five different furs in the show windows of our cities are nothing else but bunnies dolled up in different colors and styles, when we read that alley cat catching is a good business in New York, because cat pelts bring sixty cents a [illegible]ce, why then its time to think whether there isn't something to this much talked of fur farming business. And when on top of that Uncle Sam writes special bulletins about fur farming and tells us in one of them that"— The demand for fine furs and their scarcity have made possible the introduction of fur farming, either as a special business so as a side line. It is open to all who love animals and have at least a backyard to keep them. Several species have been tested in captivity and when rightly managed have yielded satisfactory returns." (693 Yearbook United States Dept. of Agriculture 1926). When we read things like this the thinking farmer hasn't an excuse for not making money out of acres which now worry him.

One of these species the govenment books speaks about is the muskrat. There's ont one of the folks on the farm who hasn't sometime or other trapped or shot muskrats.. The critters used to bring a dime or at most twenty cents, if you didn't make them up into caps for pa or the boys. Today the rats in this section bring as high as two dollars and eighty cents and three dollars per pelt, and the meat forms a treat for many a butter and egg man who orders marsh hare and get muskies at eighty cents a pound.

And the fine thing about this little beast is that you don't need a lot of fancy fixings to make him produce for you. Even if you have not a marsh or pond or swamp on the place you can raise muskrats in pens and get better rats and finer pelts and more of them than would be the case if the rats were left to run wild on the place.. For pen raising is a success now. Government experiments here and in Canada have proved that beyond a doubt. A small compact pen, a little trough of water where they can wash their food, they are clean critters, a nest box, and pretty much the same meal ticket as the rabbit and you got a money maker if you only let them alone and let nature take its course. And if you do, Mother Nature will do her share, for in these parts the muskrats will breed four times a year and have a litter of six on the average each time. Then figure that the first litter of the year breeds that same season. Then take a pencil and figure out how many you'll have in two or three years and you begin to suspect that the Government is right when it tells the farmer that furs are a mighty fine crop to raise.

The next time you go to one of the big cities just stop and look at the ladies and notice how many furs they wear. Ma won't mind if she knows you're doing it with an eye to business.. You'll begin to realize that the world uses a lot of furs. . And then you'll begin to wonder where they are going to get them. . You can remember when muskarts were plentiful down your way. Now the State has to declare a closed season to keep them from being exterminated The man who raises the right kind and enough of them is going to make money supplying the market.

MAKES SUIT FOR WALKS IN RIVER

Exploring river bottoms is a hobby of Joseph Sheridan, twenty three years old, who has just been graduated from a mechanical engineering school.

While others take walks for the sunshine and fresh air, Sheridan delights in strolling along the bottom of Kalamazoo river, eighteen feet under water, observing the fish and other forms of water life.

Lacking the means to purchase a diving bell or a diving suit he built one of his own design. An oil can with a water tight glass window, connected with the air-pump by three hundred feet of ordinary garden hose, fits over his head like a helmet, and is weighted down with sixty pounds of concrete to keep it firmly in place while under water. At a depth of ten feet the sixty pound cap is as buoyant as a hat. The helmet is constructed on the principle of the diving bell, being open below and resting on his shoulders as he walks through the water. The pressure of the air at the top of the helmet keeps out the water and permits him to breathe with entire comfort.. Fresh air is supplied from the pump which, worked at sixty strokes a minute changes the air in the helmet every twenty seconds.

The device, the inventor says is one hundred per cent safe. Should the air line become fouled, thus cutting off the supply of oxygen the air in the helmet is sufficient to last a minute, and it takes only fifteen seconds to come up from the greatest depth he has ever attempted.

A teaspoon of mixed pickle spices tied in a small bag and added to the water in which fish, ham or tongue is boiled, will add a very pleasing flavor..

SATIN HATS MADE FOR TALL WOMEN

Watch your ensemble. If you wear one of the extremely modern hats, you will wish to be very careful in your choice of accessories. You will wear a neckless of some cleverly designed costume jewelry bracelets to harmonize with it, and perhaps exactly the right pair of modern earrings. Your trusty pearls will not do.

If you are small and inclined to be not too slim, don't wear one of those new satin hats with the large ribbon loops over the ears. It is a ravishing hat for the tall and otherwise gifted but for what we like to call the 'average reader' it is not a hat, it is a disguise.

The irregular hem line has great charm when it is properly handled

Be conservative. You will have difficulty in going wrong about color this autumn. Browns and tans that begin in the beige range and grade to rich coffee colors are very smart. Black, of course, has been revived. Slate blues and inky blues. Odd shades of green gray and "grege". Some reds mostly purple reds. These are all good and all effective.. When in doubt, invest in beige and brown combinations. "Off" shades, so smart this season, are subtle and hard to wear. What is more, nothing harmonizes with them. You have to buy each small accessory with the off shade in mind.

If you wear a frock and coat of some shade of brown or tan and have beige gloves, bag and stockings, and even hat to match it's almost too easy. The result is always smart. No longer need a woman expose ungainly legs or bulging knees if she happens to possess them.

Tiers are very modish for the more tailored garments, and evolve into drapes in the more formal ones.

Pleats are quite as smart as they were for spring season but have assumed a more practical air.

Tailored bows are extremely smart for trimming. One sees them both as an ornament and a finishing. Drape effects sometimes appear to be nothing but a huge soft bow at one side of the gown.

Feathers and scallops are the outstanding trimming details for millinery. Toques entirely covered with flat feathers are not an uncommon sight, and the tiny tuft like a shaving brush is very smart either at the side or directly in front.

So there you exactly are. All the little style hints that really are important in the fall mode. With these and a careful consideration of your individual needs, you should be able to have the most charming wardrobe available.

Flowers are as you already know worn on the shoulders of almost every smart afternoon or evening gown at present. These fluffy petaled chiffon flowers do much toward making a simple frock a success. It can almost be said that no frock is complete without its shoulder corsage. The woman who dislikes the shoulder flower consoles with the shoulder bow of ribbon or chiffon.

Even jewelry has turned toward flowers. Thus we see reproductions of antique flower jewelry in almost every department store. Little clusters of crystal flowers are worn on hats. Pearl flowers in spray effects in various pastel color combinations are worn as shoulder pins and pendants.

END HOLD UP OR DRY UP IS DETROIT'S THREAT

A threat that the Detroit Department of Water Supply may stop furnishing water to the village of Halfway was sent the village commissioners by Paul T. Dwyer, assistant corporation counsel. Mr. Dwyer and the Board of Water Commissioners have been aroused by an alleged attempt by Halfway to 'hold up" the village of Roseville for twenty thousand dollars.

Roseville located just beyond Halfway, has petitioned Detroit for water service. Halfway has had this service for some time. Under its contract according to Mr. Dwyer, Halfway must build and turn over to the board pipes to its village limits, Halfway, however built pipes to a point of one hundred and fifty six feet from the Roseville-Halfway line and stopped. Now,, Dwyer says, Halfway refuses to lay the additional pipe unless Roseville pays twenty thousand dollars.

Prohibition Is Making Good

BY GIFFORD GORDON

Is prohibition making good? This seems to be the one dominant thought in the minds of American people who are sincerely anxious to know the facts in regard to prohibition. It is over four years now since we first became interested in American prohibition. During these years we have traveled almost 70,000 miles in this great land, and "Is prohibition making good?" is the most common of all questions asked me. Of course, my answer has always been in the affirmative, but such an answer would be value less unless it could be backed up by facts. I am positive if the good people of this great country knew of all the good prohibition qas accomplished in face of all the odds it has had to go up against, there would be no doubt nor fear in their minds as to the wisdom of the reform. Here are some of these facts.

ALCOHOLISM AND PROHIBION

One of the many things the opponents of prohibion have been attempting to do during these seven prohibition years, is to prove that prohibition has produced a great alcoholic problem. So many fine intelligent, cultured people have, in all seriousness, told me how all the alcoholic hospitals of this country are crowded and over crowded with patients, due to prohibition. Whenever these people have been asked to quote their authority for making such assertions, their only reply is: "Well, they say it is so." They need the real facts presented them on this phase of the question.

The day I interviewed Dr. Neal of Los Angeles, I put to him one brief question, which was: "Doctor, has prohibition increased your business?" Here are his exact words in reply; "We had 68 alcoholic hospitals scattered over America twelve vears prior to the Eighteenth Amendment; we treated 125,000 alcoholic patients. Within two years of prohibition, 66 of our 68 hospitals went out of business." The encouring part about it to me is they have remained out of business these seven prohibition years. Dr. Neal is operating but two such hospitals today—one in Los Angeles, the other in San Francisco.

Not long ago, I read an article in one of the American magazines, that told its readers how the great Keeley cure in Dwight, Illinois has had to more than double the number of its wards since 1920 in order to cope with the great increase in alcoholic patients due to prohibition. How far, far from the truth is such an assertion! Dr. Keeley sold his building to the United States Government after two years of prohibition. It has been used ever since as a hospital and home for some of our disabled soldiers. Dr. Keeley is still doing business in Dwight, but a brick cottage is plenty large enough for the number of patients coming to him now. He once operated 50 alcoholic hospitals in America. Today he is operating but 12; 38 have gone. What a pity such facts are not generally known throughout this great country!

People who listen to the wet talk of today have long since come to the conclusion that many more people are dying from alcoholism today than was the case in the old days of the legalized saloon. Professor Irving Fisher of Yale University is responsible for the statement that in the old saloon days, 50 people per every one million of the population died each year from alcoholic poisoning, but under prohibition the average is about 2 per every million of the population per year. What a difference between what "they say" on the one hand, and the facts in the case on the other.

PROHIBITION A GREAT ECONMIC BLESSING

Undoubtedly the great moral forces of this country wrote the Eighteenth Amendment into the Constitution of the United States. Since then, however, we believe it has gained a new ally—the economic ally. All great employers of labor and captains of industry whom I have interviewed are absolutely united as to the great economic blessings which have followed in the wake of prohibition. Leading American economists have studied this phase of the question with much care, and we believe no one has given more thought ful to this subject than has professor Irving Fisher, the distinguished economist of Yale University.

Furthermore, in his general position that prohibition has made, and is making, enormous additions to our national wealth, he is supported by such men as Professor Thomas N. Carver of Harvard, Henry Ford, Judge Gary, Herbert Hoover, Roger Babson and many others who speak as experts on this question. These men cannot possibly be classed as rabid prohibitionists. On the contrary, they are sane, intelligent, and among the best of American citizens. We cannot trample beneath our feet as if it were dirt the testimony of such men.

On the basis of Professor Fisher's reckoning. seven years of prohibition means the saving of forty-two billion dollars, and yet the opponents of prohibition are going over this great country holding up their hands in holy horror at the thought of Washington having to grant thirty million dollars a year for the enforcement of our prohibition law

Hillsdale Fair Exhibits Finer Than Ever

In all departments of the "Big Fair" this year the exhibits were of the very best and exceeded the quantity ever before. Those who attended are forced to admit that nothing even inclement weather, can interfere with this annual affair. On Saturday morning it was raining hard but the extreme wetness of the atmosphere had nothing in common with spirits of most of the patrons. It was noticeable that people from Montpelier, Ohio Bryan, Angola Indiana and other points in both Ohio and Indiana were in attendance and taking things as they came cheerfully. They laughed and considered the weather only as a good joke. So as before mentioned nothing in the world can stop the "Most Popular Show on Earth."

Ball Games throughout the week were exceptionally well played and all agreed this one feature along recompense for attending. On Wednesday and Thursday the rain predominated but the halls were full of people and they milled about seeing what they could and spending a considerable time in sociability.

We understand that while gate receipts fell off alarmingly, the concessions this season yielded quite up to the standard of other seasons and while the Society of course has lost several thousands, yet there will be no deficiency in paying premiums and other expenses.

"Buckskin Ben" and his troupe were there with tremendous popularity also the Lippicott magic performer whom our citizens will remember visited North Adams with the Bell Barkus players two years ago. Other attractions were as usual the big Ferris wheel, merry go-round and crack the whip.

Records Improve In State Egg Contest

Thirty-one pens of ten birds each have crossed the 2,000 egg mark in the fifth annual international egg laying contest at the M. S. C. as the contest enters the final month. Production has increased substantially this year over last year's records, and it is expected that the average at the end of the 51 weeks will be well over 190 eggs per hen for the entire contest.

Michigan owned pens leads in two of the three largest classes. A pen of ten Barred Rocks owned by F. E. Fogel, of Okemos, Mich., leads this class with a total production of 2,030 eggs. Harry Burns of Millington, Mich., owns the pen of White Leghorns which leads this class, as well as the entire contest, with a total production of 2,375 eggs.

The race is still close in the White Leghorn class, with interest centered on the three leading pens. Ten birds owned by F. G. DeWitt of Grand Blanc, Mich., are in second place with 2,340 eggs, followed by the pen owned by Marshall Farms, of Mobile, Alabama, with a total of 2,331 eggs.

Egg weight requirements were added to the rules of the contest this year. This requirement, in some instances, is responsible for the number of accepted eggs being smaller than the total. Eggs weighing 18 ounces or more were accepted until Jan. 1. The requirement after Jan. 1 was 20 ounces.

Hank and Mike went autoing on the old turnpike. They stepped on the gas and made a faux pas and Mickie lies in yonder church yard. The Sheriff gathered in Hank and gave his breeches the plank and now the folks are wondering "who next."

Suspects In Custody of Hillsdale Sheriff

Deputy Bert Winn together with Sheriff Wilson working with Sheriff Earl Kerr and his deputies have uncovered what is thought to be important evidence in the killing of little Lamoine Cox, Wednesday evening three miles west of Hudson.

It seems that a more or less wild party with women, booze and other accompaniments was being staged near Bird Lake at a private residence during Wednesday afternoon and evening. This party was attended by various Hudson residents including Harold TenEyck, Donald Shafer and the latter's older brother. This statement was made to the Post Gazette by Sheriff Earl Kerr over the phone Monday morning.

The two Shafers together with TenEyck were taken to the Hillsdale jail Saturday evening for questioning and Monday morning two other residents of Hudson, Brisendine and Kessler were taken to the Hillsdale jail also for questioning. Some points have not been answered satisfactorily by the various residents of Hudson and both the officers from Adrian and Hillsdale are going over the matters very thoroughly in an effort to find out just where all parties were and what condition they were in.

The three first named above were taken into custody at Bird Lake Saturday evening by the officers of the two counties. Deputy Winn took Brisendine and Kessler to the Hillsdale jail Monday morning.

Edd Nelligan limbered up his good Flivver's speed and out he went on U. S. 112. The officers hustled over and said he's raising Hell-again, and sure twas Nelligan, but what a mess he had made Good old Mrs. Whitcher was busted like a pitcher and her old man was sure wrecked. Nelligan drank a lot of wine and drove right down the line, but Kerr put him in the jug and now all is Well-again.

One Out of Ten Has "It" in This Musical Town

One out of ten has it in Hazelton, Iowa, reports the Conn Music Center. "It" refers to a place in the flourishing band and orchestra that is Hazelton's pride and joy. When the band strikes up in this community of 500 souls, 50 of them are performers and the remaining 450 make up the audience. They just about have to close the school down, too, in order to give a concert, because all these 50 musicians are in the public school which totals only 160 pupils. This is believed to be the largest school musical organization, in proportion to enrollment, in the United States.

The orchestra, organized in 1925, was, with the exception of the pianist, made up entirely of boys and girls who had never played any instrument. Yet five months later, they gave their first public concert before a packed house. The band was established in 1926 and had its initial performance nine months later.

TAKES SAX FROM THE DEVIL AND GIVES IT TO THE LORD

"Music belongs to the Lord, but the devil stole it, and I am giving it back to the Lord."

This is the way Aimee Semple McPherson. famous evengelist, in a talk before the Conn Music Center at Elkhart, Ind., explained why she is making music such a prominent feature of her revivals. A 200-piece band and a choir of 1,000 voices are now being organized, she told the music men, for use in her revivals.

"The saxophone has often been called the instrument of the devil," said the famous evangelist, "but I am converting it to the Lord's use. It is time the preachers got busy and put more joy into their services. The world is speeding along on seven league boots, while the church lags behind with leaden shoes.

"Music is an expression of joy and as such has a foremost place in religion. There is room in the church for all kinds of music. The tuba and the rebec, corresponding to our cornet and violin, were played in the very early church. It was only in comparatively recent years that the organ came to be regarded as the only instrument suitable for church music. The music of the band and orchestra should be a part of the present-day church.

"In revival work, the band has something to offer which the organ and even the choir do not. That is, it stirs people to action. The organ has a spiritual and uplifting appeal, of course, but it takes the stirring, martial airs of a band to bring people to their feet and enlist in Christ's church militant."

TOWN WITHOUT BAND NEEDS DOCTOR, SAYS FRED HIGH

Afflicted With Sleeping Sickness and in Danger of Creeping Paralysis, Business Lecturer and Writer Warns Community.

"The community without a band, orchestra or other musical organization is certainly in need of a doctor. If left alone, it is only a matter of a short time when the town will be as dead as a door-nail."

Fred High.

This is the firm belief of Fred High, lecturer and writer, as expressed to the Conn Music Center. Mr. High is a favorite speaker before Kiwanis, Lions, Rotary and other service clubs, and his business and community institutes have sold dozens of communities first to their own people, then to the rest of the world.

"Years of experience have convinced me that a community which has not the spirit to appreciate its musicians, is afflicted with community sleeping sickness, and that if this affliction is allowed to continue, the community will have nothing to look forward to but creeping paralysis," says Mr. High.

Play, Work Together.

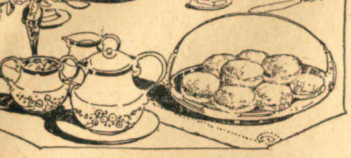
"A true co-operative community spirit expresses itself, first of all in an organized effort to play together. If people can be made to play together, they will soon learn to work together. True neighborliness develops and in a very short time they are all pulling together for the good of the whole town. "A town with a good live band supported by all the people is like a magnet, she draws trade, she draws business, she draws investors, she proclaims to the world that she is full of pep and that she is out to achieve success for herself and for all who are within her gates.

What Schwab Says.

"And that this is not merely a notion of mine, can be seen from the manner in which America's foremost industrial leaders view this problem. Charles M. Schwab, in discussing the importance of music in industry, recently said: 'One of the first questions we ask when we take over a new plant is, "How can we manage to provide some good music and healthful recreation for our employees?" We have found that the giving of noon-day concerts and sings for our workers greatly increases their interest in the company and in their work. It increases their general efficiency to such an appreciable extent that we have found it to be a wise investment.' What Mr. Schwab has found is true of great industrial plants, I have found is true of communities.

"A well-organized musical organization, whose members have a consciousness of the part their organization should take in a community, is a greater asset to any people than a bargain-counter store, a mushroom plant or any one of the many things which most communities try hardest to secure and boast most about when they have them."

Tea Time Tasties



By CAROLINE B. KING
Culinary Expert and Lecturer on Domestic Science

EVERY hostess is ambitious to have her tea table a popular one. The hour between the large affairs of the day and dinner may be such a cozy, intimate, jolly one, if everything pertaining to it is just right. Pretty appointments, chatty guests, unusual and dainty things to eat, spell success, whether the tea be an informal studio affair or something more elaborate.

Savory bites are always popular at tea time. The tasty morsels described here are all different and tempting enough to make fascinating additions to the tea table. They may be served with tea, coffee or cocoa, or with a fruit punch, as preferred.

Swiss Tartines:
Make a flaky pastry, as for pies. Roll thin and spread with grated Switzerland cheese, fold and roll again. Then cut in small rounds. Cut half the rounds in rings, using a smaller cutter, and place these on the cheese circles, pressing them together lightly. Brush with milk and bake in a quick oven. Fill the centers with tart jelly and serve hot.

Deviled Crackers:
One cupful of diced Switzerland cheese, one-quarter teaspoonful of dry mustard, one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, one tablespoonful of melted butter, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, with salt and paprika to taste. Beat to a paste and spread on hot toasted crackers.

Gingerbread a la Suisse:
Slice hot gingerbread one-half inch thick, and cut in pieces for serving. Place the pieces together with thin slices of Switzerland cheese between them and serve at once on small plates, topping each with a spoonful of whipped cream.

Swiss Bouchees:
Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter and add one-half cupful of flour and cornstarch mixed, season with salt and paprika and add two cupfuls of scalded milk. Cook until thick and fold in a cupful of Swiss cheese, cut in small pieces; also one beaten egg. Simmer until cheese is well blended with the other ingredients, then pour in a flat, well buttered pan and set away to cool. Cut in diamonds, stars, circles and other forms, and sprinkle with grated Swiss cheese and paprika. Clip into a hot oven and brown delicately.

Cheese Tidbits:
Make any nice rich muffin batter and add to it half a cupful of Switzerland cheese cut in bits, drop into tiny greased muffin pans and bake in a hot oven. Split, butter and serve with marmalade.

Discuss Soils Needs Before State Groups

The results of years of experimental work with soils in Michigan will be carried to farmers in the state by series of meetings to be conducted by specialists from M. S. C., according to an announcement this week by the soils department.

A truck that carries concrete illustrations of the need for lime and organic matter in a campaign of soil improvement is now visiting many southern counties. Soils specialists test samples of soil and marl brought by farmers to the meetings that are held in each county visited.

Later this year, meetings will be held to familiarize fertilizer dealers and farmers with the analysis of fertilizers that are the most profitable when used for the crops raised in the locality where each meeting is held.

Soils survey work in Michigan has progressed to a stage where the soils types and their needs have been pretty well determined. The soils department believes that at the present time, the development of new areas of marginal lands will prove unprofitable.

The work of the department in assisting owners of muck soils to find profitable crops for their particular soils will be continued.

When Chicago Went Movieless

Chicago movie patrons, deprived of their daily film fare by a recent theater strike, turned to books news dispatches inform us. Photographs of long lines of people storming bookstores and libraries while the theaters stand empty are given as additional proof. All this probably should prove something, and behind it may lie some great moral; but what is it? That the movies are harming the book industry? More books are printed circulated and read than ever before. That the movies, being on a lower intellectual level, should be discouraged while book reading is encouraged? Much piffle is put in Hollywood cans, to be sure, and unreeled before the world; but like wise much balderdash is put between covers and sent broadcast as literature. And those at whom the moronic influence of the movies is directed are quite apt to be attracted by the moronic influence in certain types of books.

It is difficult to get a fair perspective of the movies. Supporters can hear, see and think no evil of them; they are recreational manna, uplifting, inspiriting, devotional given to a weary world to brighten life and lighten old age. Their opponents, on the other hand, see them only as unmoral, unclean and degrading; fit solely for suppression and that right quickly. Neither, of course, is an accurate picture; the true one lies somewhere between. But where? Of a late movie magnate it was written that he replaced thousands of saloons with hundreds of pleasant picture palaces. The first part of the statement is doubtful. No one man, surely no film producer, banished the saloon from America: that was done by the American people. But the second phrase contains a germ for thought. The main defense of the old saloon was that it was the poor man's club. A new club has arisen. Even the chiefest censurer of the movie would scarcely say it contains the same destructive forces as the saloon.

Courses Help Solve Every Day Problems

Short courses are becoming more and more popular with people who are engaged during the greater part of the year with the practical application of the principles taught according to an announcement of the director of short courses at M. S. C.

Every effort is made to have the courses at Michigan State cover the latest developments in each of the fields in which courses are offered. The instructors are often men, as in the floricultural course, that are persuaded to teach in the class room the methods that have enabled them to build up a successful business.

The sixteen weeks course in general agriculture begins October 24. Those enrolling in this section are given training in many lines of farm work. The eight weeks course are planned to give intensive information upon one subject.

Most of the 500 students who were enrolled in short courses last year were residents of Michigan that could leave their business for only a brief period. Creamery managers, greenhouse owners, beekeepers, and hatcherymen as well as farmers find that a period spent in classes has a direct commercial value.

Mr. Jones and wife of Price, Utah, were camping in the Wasatch National Forest in Utah. Here the timber is magnificent. They decided one day to take a hike to a neighboring mountain, and so left their automobile standing near the camp and also forgot to entirely extinguish the fire. A small spark was left when they went away. This was early in the morning. In the evening of the same day they came home but were met some distance away by smoke-grimmed saw-mill men and other fire fighters who took them to what had been their camp, not a vestige of which remained. Everything was in ashes and their fine automobile so shiny and nobby when they left was a heap of wreckage and twisted metal. Mr. Jones felt quite cut up and so did the mill men. They lectured him slightly on the science and theory of prevention as this might have burned many thousand feet of valuable timber. As it was Jones lost $2300 in cold cash besides considerable of his self-esteem.

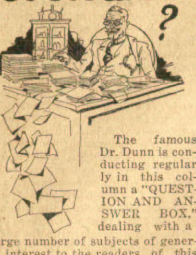
DO YOU KNOW



The famous Dr. Dunn is conducting regularly in this column a "QUESTION AND ANSWER BOX," dealing with a large number of subjects of general interest to the readers of this paper. You are invited to send in your questions to Dr. Dunn, care of this paper, and they will be given prompt consideration; and where deemed of general interest, will be answered through this column so far as space permits.

Dr. Dunn has for a long time been a member of the executive staff of the Michigan Mutual Liability Company of Detroit, and has become famous through his weekly broadcasting over WGHP. The doctor has had wide professional, commercial and sociological experience, and while the absolute accuracy of the answers to all questions is not guaranteed, the most authentic sources of information will be the basis of all replies.

Q. Dear Dr. Dunn, Can you tell me what percentage of the new automobiles sold during the past year represent replacement of old and worn out automobiles.

A. According to statistics compiled by the United States Department of Commerce, the world's consumption of automobiles in nineteen twenty six totaled five million ninety one thousand, four hundred seventy four cars.. Of this total two million thirty thousand, 400, fifty six cars replaced a similar number of worn out scrapped motor cars; and three million seventy one thousand eighteen motor cars represented an addition to the world's automotive rolling stock..

The great bulk of these automobiles was manufactured in the United States, where replacement of old automobiles totaled one million eight hundred fifty thousand eight hundred thirty eight motor cars, and additions to the automotive population numbered two million eighty six thousand fifty eight new cars...

Q. Dear Dr. Dunn.. What classes of persons should not be allowed to drive automobiles.

A. Persons who should not be allowed to drive cars include, children below a certain age. Persons whose height does not permit easy reach of the controlling pedals. Persons who have not sufficient strength to operate control levers easily and positively. Persons under the influence of liquors or drugs. Epileptics or others subject to fits or fainting spells. Persons who do not know and understand the traffic laws, ordinary rules of the road and other points concerned with safe and efficient automobile operation. Persons with dangerously defective hearing or eyesight.. Cripples or persons minus arms or legs whose defects interfere with their safe control of an automobile. Persons whose nerve structure is not sound or who do not react quickly and the mentally incompetent.

PICTURESQUE SHIP AGAIN IS FLOATED

The passenger steamer United States once the private yacht of Col. Green, son of the late Hetty Green which has had a most picturesque career both on salt and fresh water, is again afloat at Pt. Huron.

When the steamer again rested on a nearly even keel with its hold dry, a friend turned to Capt, J. T. Reid, who has charge of the wrecking operations, and remarked, "Captain, you are the only man who ever made the United States dry."

The United States was built at Manitowoc, Wis., in nineteen hundred nine. During the World War, Col. Green turned the yacht over to the Government.. The steamer then started out on an eventful career.

In nineteen seventeen, fifty feet was added to the length of the boat after she had been disposed of by the Government. The United States next appeared in the passenger and freight carrying business, operating out of Miami, Fla., to Florida ports and the Bahama Islands.

The craft next became the property of Canadians, it was brought to the Great Lakes to operate between Port Arthur and Houghton, Mich., This venture did not pay. Again the ship changed hands and was started on the run between Grand Haven and Milwaukee.

Because the steamer was owned by Caandians some difficulty arose as to whether she had the right to operate between two United States ports. The issue was finally decided by the owners with drawing the boat from its run and starting her from Milwaukee to Sarnia.. As the United States was passing Mackinac she was boarded by a United States marshal who seized her and turned her back to Milwaukee.

An adjustment was made with the Government by the Canadian owners and the United States was later permitted to leave Milwaukee and proceed to Sarnia. It was while berthed at a Sarnia dock in June, being fitted out, that she caught fire. So much water has poured into the hold that she turned on her side and sank.

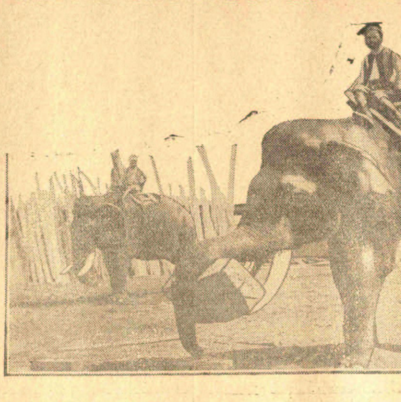
JUMBO—A LUMBERJACK OR 'WHAT HAVE YOU'—IN BURMA



ELEPHANTS in far-off Burma are amongst the most domesticated of animals They are pressed into service for all kinds of heavy work, particularly that of carrying heavy loads.

One of the uses to which they are most frequently applied is that of lumbering—being used to pile up huge timbers. And it is said they do the work of about ten men in a minimum of their time..

SILHOUETTE STYLES CHANGE IS SUBTLE

One early style collection for winter introduces subtle changes in the silhouette, giving a new line and proportion. Most important is the raising of the waistline by bolero effects and an apparent lengthening of the skirt by transparent and uneven hemlines. Last season it was the waist which predominated, but this season it is the skirt. To be also noted is the looseness of material around the natural waist line, with the tight belt around the hips, and the waistline at the hip-bone.

Boleros on many models can in most cases be removed, giving two costumes. Flares suggest a new line to the silhouette, with the blouse underneath loose and full and giving feminine softness to the figure—a new idea but reminiscent of the costumes of Hindu or Siamese dancing girls. Pleats loose and flowing panels, full transparent overskirts hanging below a straight, narrow foundation, present the appearance of longer and fuller skirts.

Colors in the main are subdued, but there is much rich glitter which is an important characteristic of most collections producing the effect of much rich embroidery without the actual embroidery. Gold shines through even woolen street costumes, and there are combination blue and gold metal belts and collars for afternoon wear. Strass sparkles on swaying tulle skirts, and much rich brocade is shown for evening.

Godets on the side and side draperies are seen in practically all day time dresses, and also in the long coats. New, wide sleeves have the underpart like the underblouse, in different material from dress and bolero. Other sleeves are short- which give variety to the collections. Scallops finish some coats and dresses. Long ratine capes are new for sports, and combine two colors.

Street costumes are influenced by sport effects. Reversible coats are much in evidence, with short hussar jackets with collars, cuffs and edges outlined in bands of shaded gray astrakan, black fox or lynx. Skirts are either straight, pleated or with side godets added, and some have both pleats and godets.. Long coats have large revers, suggesting directoire models, and there is much velvet, artificial silk and woolen fabrics combined with gold. Pleated chiffon velvets give glitter and richness to afternoon gowns and ensembles.

Evening gowns also show the influence of sports effects in their pleated, three tiered skirts with designs in strass along the edges. Boleros prevail in this type of costume, giving the effect of higher waistline. Full transparent skirts sparkle with strass and the uneven hem line is much noted.. Some of these are quite long, which seems to be the dominant note in evening modes.

CHLOROFORM GANG AGAIN ROBS ROOTS IN BERRIEN COUNTY

Police and sheriff's officers are seeking the gang of "chloroform" chicken thieves, who operated so successfully in Berrien county last spring when thousands of choice poultry were taken.

The method used by the raiders is unique, blowing chloroform thru chinks in the chicken house walls, then entering the coop and packing the prostrate fowl into gunny sacks, the marauders steal into the night in high powered motor cars and invariably head for the Indiana state line.

The chicken stealing ring's operations extend from Buchanan to South Bend and thence to Chicago.. Police and sheriffs in Michigan and Indiana believe there are three departments in the ring, collection preparation of product and distribution The fowls are sent to to fences in Chicago, officers believe.

AGED INDIAN TELLS OF HUNTING MEAT AS HE WEAVES BASKET

Dreaming of the days when his grandfather, Makhakcush, the great chieftain of the Chippewas, came from the Mackinac country, and made war against the Sacs of Saginaw and drove that tribe from the great valley where there was an abundance of fish and game, Sodney Adam weaves baskets and makes miniature bows and arrows and canoes for the children of the great white nation that relentlessly pushed his people back, ever back.

Sodney Adam also bears the name of his illustrious grandfather the great warrior, but few know him by the name, Makhakcush. Early in youth he took the shorter name of Adam, deciding that the white man's way would be best for him..

When twenty -two years old he went West and assisted the early cattlemen in their fights against the fierce Sioux warriors. Perhaps it is because of this that Makhakcush is not regarded as their chief by the remnants of the Chippewas scattered over northeastern Michigan.

He sent his son to school and later his grandchildren and assisted other Indian children in getting an education, but he would have none of it himself. He was born of the woods and would ever remain a part of them.

Although allotted a place on a western reservation at the close of a tour of the country with Buffalo Bill's show he came back to northeastern Michigan and has since made his home during the summer months on the shores of beautiful Sand Lake in Iosco County and during the winter in Hale, a small village nearby.

Past seventy now, as he works on his bench outside his cabin door, he likes to tell of the early days when he hunted and killed for meat and fur.

BASSETT ESTATE SUED FOR STATES TAX ON TEN MILLION

O. B. Fuller, auditor-general has filed suit in the name of the State of Michigan in the Circuit Court for the County of Genesee against the estate of Harry H. Bassett, former president of the 'Buick Motor Co., who died last year in Paris in an effort to collect inheritance taxes on Bassett's ten million dollar estate.

The amount claimed by the State is not estimated in the suit, which asks the court to determine the value of the property and fix the tax.

In the suit, the State claims that Bassett formed the Genesse Corporation two years before his death and transferred to it the stock of the Managers Security Co. a General Motors holding corporation, and certain other property and securities and then gave the stock in the Genesee Corporation to his wife. children and other heirs, thus evading the inheritance taxes otherwise payable at his death.

The State maintains that this action of Bassett's was a final disposition of his property and made the beneficiaries heirs under the law.

OUSTED CHICAGO MAN ONCE DETROIT CHOICE

William McAndrew, superintendent of the Chicago public schools who was suspended recently during a controversey with the Chicago Board of Education, will be remembered as Detroit's choice for superintendent fourteen years ago. Dr. Mc Andrew declined the position which was then taken by Dr. Charles E. Chadsey.

Dr. McAndrews was born in Ypsilanti, Mich., and is a graduate of the University of Michigan. He is widely known in the state. He has been much in the public eye since thirty years ago when he was ousted as principal of a Chicago high school because he refused to obey a trustee who sought a faver for his son, a student.

197 NEW STATE LAWS IN EFFECT

A total of one hundred ninety seven new laws passed by the recent Legislature are now effective

At least one-half of the new laws call for appropriations to operate the various State goverment-al functions. Only one appropriation is of note, that of fifty thousand dollars for the American Legion to carry on welfare work among its members.

The new criminal laws, especially the new criminal code, tending to bring criminals to justice quickly and close numerous technical loopholes, is by far the most important law to go on the statute books.

The Firearms law also effective is one of the most stringent on the statute books of any state.. It calls for a complete registration or all pistols, stiffens the regulation surrounding the sale of firearms, forbids the possession of machine guns and increases the penalties for carrying of concealed weapons

An avenue is paved in another law to separate wayward minors from hardened criminals in their trials and punishments.

The chief change in the motor vehicle laws is in the Hoover code, originally introduced in accord with plans outlined as a result of work done by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, to make uniform traffic laws throughout the country.

The most important change abolishes the speed law on country roads and merely provides the driver must be able to stop his car to avoid a collision with the nearest object ahead. The law, however, continues to permit the Michigan Public Utilities Commission to regulate the speed of motor buses.

Banking laws were changed in several instances, the most important change permitting banks to invest in Public Utility bonds not to exceed three-fifths of their savings deposits.

Agricultural laws also are subject to a number of changes, chief among which are the following,

Compels name and address of milk dealers on all bottles and forbids interchange of bottles among dealers.

Forbids use of artificial coloring in sausages.

Provides more adequate method of condemnation and destruction of diseased bee colonies.

Empowers proper county officials to provide means of damming water in preparation for dry seasons on drained land.

The new workmen's compensation law, increases maximum payments from fourteen dollars to sixteen dollars a week and the maximum amount on which payments shall be made from sixty per cent to sixty-six and two thirds per cent.

A law permitting cities to charge for sewage service, the same as for water and light, is looked upon as a means of permitting numerous cities to finance building of sewage disposal plants. Methods also are provided in a law whereby cities may condemn land for aviation fields, and a new law also goes on the statute book forcing air pilots to undergo government examinations before being permitted to carry passengers.

Among the important conservation measures to become effective were those giving the State control over the disposal of slash in the northern woods; repealing the law on remaining riparian rights and increasing the payment of counties for lands taken over by the State for failure to pay taxes. All nimrods in the future must pay one dollar for fishing licenses.

Last, but not least, among the important measures is the one-cent increase in gasoline tax.

SUMMER HERE COOLEST ON RECORD FOR 12 YEARS

The last three months, June, July and August were the coolest summer months in Michigan in twelve years. Norman Conger meteorologist of the United States Weather Bureau, says.

The average daily temperature was two and seven tenths degrees below normal.. While individual months have been exceptions, this average is the farthest below normal of any time since nineteen fifteen.

August of nineteen twenty seven was the second coldest in the forty six years of the history of the bureau, with an average daily temperature of sixty six and six tenths degrees, being exceeded only by an average of sixty six degrees for August nineteen fifte

By H. G. WELLS

At the end of the slope he fell a thousand feet, and came down in the midst of a cloud of snow upon a snow slope even steeper than the one above. Down this he was whirled, stunned and insensible, but without a bone broken in his body; and then at last came to gentler slopes, and at last rolled out and lay still, buried amidst a softening heap of the white masses that had accompanied and saved him. He came to himself with a dim fancy that he was ill in bed, then realized his position with a mountaineer's intelligence and worked himself loose, and, after a rest or so, out until he saw the stars. He rested flat upon his chest for a space, wondering where he was and what had happened to him. He explored his limbs, and discovered that several of his buttons were gone and his coat turned over his head. His knife had gone from his pocket and his hat was lost, though he had tied it under his chin. He recalled that he had been looking for loose stones to raise his piece of the shelter wall. His ice-axe had disappeared.

He decided he must have fallen, and looked to see exaggerated by the ghastly light of the rising moon the tremendous flight he had taken For a while he lay, gazing blankly at the vast pale cliff towering above, rising moment by moment out of a subsiding tide of darkness. Its phontasmal, mysterious beauty held him for a space, and then he was seized with a paroxysm of sobbing laughter.

After a great interval of time he became aware that he was near the lower edges of the snow. Below, down what was now a moon-lit and practicable slope, he saw the dark and broken appearance of rock-strewn turf. He struggled to his feet, aching in every joint and limb, got down painfully from the heaped loose snow about him, went downward until he was on the turf, and there dropped rather than lay beside a boulder, drank deep from a flask in his inner pocket, and instantly fell asleep. . .

He sat up and perceived he was on a little alp at the foot of a vast precipice that sloped only a little in the gully down which he and his now had come. Over against him another wall of rock reared itself against the sky. The gorge between these precipices ran east and west and was full of the morning sunlight which lit to the westward the mass of fallen mountain that closed the descending gorge. Below him it seemed there was a precipice equally steep, but behind the snow in the gully he found a sort of chimney-cleft dripping with snow-water, down which a desperate man might venture. He found it easier than it seemed, and came at last to another desolate alp, and then after a rock climb of no particular difficulty to a slope of trees. He took his bearings and turned his face up the gorge, for he saw it opened out above upon green meadows, among which he now glimpsed quite distinctly a cluster of stone huts of unfamiliar fashion. At times his progress was like clambering along the face of a wall, and after a time the rising sun ceased to strike along the gorge the voices of the singing birds died away, and the air grew cold and dark about him. But the distant valley with its houses was all the brighter for that. He came presently to talus, and among the rocks he noted—for he was an observant man—an unfamiliar fern that seemed to clutch out of the crevices with intense green hands. He picked a frond or so and gnawed its stalk, and found it helpful.

About midday he came at last out of the throat of the gorge into the plain and the sunlight. He was stiff and weary; he sat down in the shadow of a rock, filled up his flask with water from a spring and drank it down, and remained for a time before he went on to the houses.

They were very strange to his eyes, and indeed the whole aspect of that valley became, as he regarded it queerer and more unfamiliar. The greater part of its surface was lush green meadow, starred with many beautiful flowers, irrigated with extraordinary care, and bearing evidence of systematic cropping piece by piece. High up and ringing the valley about was a wall, and what appeared to be a circumferential water channel, from which the little trickles of water that fed the meadow plants came, and on the higher slopes above this flocks of llamas cropped the scanty herbage. Sheds, apparently shelters or feeding- places for the llamas, stood against the boundary wall here and there. The irrigation streams ran together into a main channel down the centre of the valley, and this was enclosed on either side by a wall breast high. This gave a singularly urban quality to this secluded place, a quality that was greatly enhanced by the fact that a number of paths paved with black and white stones, and each with a curious little kerb at the side, ran hither and thither in an orderly manner. The houses of the central village were quite unlike the casual and higgledy-piggledy agglomeration of the mountain villages he knew; they stood in a continuous row on either side of a central street of astonishing cleanness, here and there their particoloured facade was pierced by a door, and not a solitary window broke their even frontage. They were parti-coloured with extraordinary irregularity, smeared with a sort of plaster that was sometimes grey, sometimes drab, sometimes slate-colored or dark brown; and it was the sight of this wild plastering first brought the word "blind" into the thoughts of the explorer. "The good man who did that" he thought, "must have been as blind as a bat."

He descended a steep place, and so came to the wall and channel that ran about the valley near where the latter spouted out its surplus contents into the deeps of the gorge in a thin and wavering thread of cascade. He could now see a number of men and women resting on piled heaps of grass, as if taking a siesta, in the remoter part of the meadow, and nearer the village a number of recombent children, and then nearer at hand three men carrying pails on yokes along a little path that ran from the encircling wall towards the houses. These latter were clad in garments of llama cloth and boots and belts of leather, and they wore caps of cloth with back and ear flaps. They followed one another in single file, walking slowly and yawning as they walked, like men who have been up all night. There was something so reassuringly prosperous and respectable in their bearing that after a moment's hesitation Nunez stood forward as conspicuously as possible upon his rock, and gave vent to a mighty shout that echoed round the valley. The three men stopped, and moved their heads as though they were looking about them. They turned their faces this way and that, and Nunez gesticulated with freedom. But they did not appear to see him for all his gestures, and after a time, directing themselves towards the mountains far away to the right, they shouted as if in answer. Nunez bawled again and then once more, and as he gestured ineffectually the word "blind" came up to the top of his thoughts. "The fools must be blind," he said.

When at last after much shouting and wrath, Nunez crossed the stream by a little bridge, came through a gate in the wall ,and approached them, he was sure that they were blind. He was sure that this was the Country of the Blind of which the legends told. Conviction had sprung upon him, and a sense of great and rather enviable adventure. The three stood side by side, not looking at him, but with their ears directed towards him, judging him by his unfamiliar steps. They stood close together like men a little afraid, and he could see their eyelids closed and sunken, as though the very balls beneath had shrunk away. There was an expression near awe on their faces.

"A man," one said, in hardly recognisable Spanish. "A man it is—a man or a spirit—coming down from the rocks."

Yet Nunez advanced with the confident steps of a youth who enters upon life. All the old stories of the lost valley and the Country of the Blind had come back to his mind, and through his thoughts ran this old proverb, as if it were a refrain—

Dr. Caldwell's 3 Rules Keep You Healthy

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for forty-seven years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation known as Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It doth not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of forty-seven years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system

Keep free from constipation. It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one fo the generous bottles of Dr, Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

W. B. Caldwell MD

Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. UNCONQUERED!

BOAT DESIGNER OF SIXTY YEARS BUILDS CHAMPION CRAFT

Building faster boats has been the lifelong desire of Maurice Renaud, sixty years old, who with deft fingers, fashions oak plankings to some skeleton of a hull in his boat plant on the banks of the Indian River, which flows through the picturesque town of that name and nestles in the hills of northern Michigan between Mullet and Burt Lakes.

In Detroit, forty years ago, he used to watch the boats going by. He saw the lumberman's difficulty in propelling his heavy river scow, and gave much thought to hulls that could be driven through the water at a swifter pace.

Today his shoulders are somewhat stooped, but his mind is as alert, and his eyes as keen as in the day of youth. He speaks with firmness on the topic of boat building and his earlier days.

On July, fourth, "Pepper" built by Rr. Renaud, won first place in the outboard motor races at Conaway, Mich., driven by Robert Graham, twelve years old, of Detroit

PIONEER TELLS OF INDIAN LORE

Edwin Morris Wells, ninety three year old pioneer of Eaton county, according to Frank N. Green, Olivet postmaster and president of the Eaton County Pioneer society, was the oldest person at the annual pioneer meeting held at Sunfield.

In relating his experience as an eight-year-old child coming with his parents from Syracuse, N. Y. to Buffalo by the Erie canal, thence to Detroit by steamer, on to Sunfield by horse team, Wells says that his most vivid impressions concern the Indians.

At Kalamo Center, about ten miles from Olivet, five hundred were camped.. Thornapple Lake now a popular resort and Swaba Lake were Indian headquarters. Chief Swaba loved his firewater and was a dangerous character when drunk. He was said to have killed his wife and a number of other women when in a drunken fit..

The sacredness of Indian traditions was another impression strongly stamped on the mind of pioneer. An Indian was locked in his wigwam by the placing of crossed sticks in front of the door a barrier as effective as the strongest lock of today. One Indian was tried by jury for a misdemeanor and as a punishment was forbidden to carry a gun, the chief commanding that he be shot on sight if the orders were disobeyed.

The first piece of property which Wells acquired was a gun. When he was nine years old his father told him that if he would look after getting the cows home at night as his regular job he could have his choice between a gun and a dog. The boy chose the gun and he still thrills at the remembrance of the little weapon, nickel trimmed and adorned with nickel emblems. Later it was traded, says Mr Wells for twelve thousand bucket staves and twelve hundred sap bucket heads.

Like other settlers of that early age, Wells engaged in the maple sugar industry and in eighteen-sixty made nine hundred fifty "tight" sap buckets between January nine and April first. Not content with farming, alone, he became plasterer and carpenter and at the age of seventy -eight he went to Battle Creek, where he worked at carpentry for five years receiving three dollars a day, the highest wage then paid for that work.

'U' ESTABLISHED IN 1817' CLAIM

Setting up a claim that the University of Michigan was founded on August twenty, eighteen seventeen, rather than on March, eighteen, eighteen- thirty seven and that Michigan became a state on November, third eighteen thirty-five instead of on March eighteen-thirty- seven, Frank H. Culver, a graduate of the university, class of eighteen -seventy-five and now a Chicago attorney, has published a pamphlet. Arranged as a brief the attorney's case is set forth, quoting supreme court decisions and other material..

Reasons for the collection of the large amount of data include a declaration by a professor that the university was founded under the constitution of eighteen -thirty seven, though he states, 'there never was a constitution of eighteen- thirty-seven"; and a statement by a "conspicuous alumnus" that the university was established by the act of March eighteen, eighteen- thirty-seven, though the supreme court has decided to the contrary.

Quoting James V. Campbell, author of the "Political History of Michigan", Culver states that in eighteen -seventeen the act was passed to incorporate the Catholepistemiad or University of Michigan which, he says, is indentical in law with the present institution and goes on to state that by the act no locality was prescribed. A modifying act in eighteen -twenty-one located the institution at Detroit, it is said, and the law of eighteen-thirty -seven moved it to Ann Arbor.

'Congress appropriated land 'for a seminary of learning' by an act in eighteen hundred four, and this was conveyed to the College of Detroit which it is pointed out, was the same institution as the University of Michigan. The land was located at Larned and Bates street and the grant is commemorated by a bronze tablet, erected by the University of Michigan association of Detroit, in the warehouse located on that site.

MACKINAW IS VISIONED AS MICHIGAN ST. MORITZ

Michigan will have a snowtime sport resort all its own this winter.

Howard Nicholson, director of winter sports at St. Moritz, Switzerland, will arrive at Mackinaw Island and immediately begin to chart out ski jumps, toboggan slides and courses for dog sled racing, ice skating, ice boating and horse racing over ice, with a view to having the resort ready for the first annual Great Lakes States winter sports carnival next January.

The fastest things on ice—aeroplane motor driven sleds—are to be introduced in races for the first time in the United States at this coming carnival.

DEPOSITS DOLLAR TO LEAVE HEIRS MILLION

William Stellema, a fruit dealer, made a novel investment in a Holland Mich., bank by which his male descendants will benefit five hundred years hence.

He deposited one dollar accompanied by instructions that the accumulative compound interest can not be distributed until the year of twenty four twenty seven. Then those of his descendants who are living in Michigan will receive seventy five per cent and twenty five per cent will go to those living in other states.

Before any distribution is made fifty thousand dollars is to go to hospital work. The amount will run into seven figures when the time arrives.

Visitors during September were Kenneth Woodby who is attending Addison High School. Raymond Mallery of the Pease District and little Erma Haydu.

Those having 100 percent attendance this month were John Iveson, Richard Iveson, Joe Haydu, Helen Haydu, Theron Post, Mary Reimschisel and Lucille Woodby.

Our new school supplies consisting of colors, scissors, poster and construction paper, mounting board stencils, molding clay, printing set, coping saw and blades etc. are very much appreciated.

The pupils of all the grades have been working on our Fair Exhibit. The beginners have made "Picture Books." Others grades have made a United States Product Map; leaf, soil and wood collections. The boys have enjoyed their work in manual training. They have made furniture animal cut out, and various ornaments with the coping saw for the exhibit.

Family Orchestra to Put Music in Home

Family orchestra ensembles to bring more music into America's homes is the vision of C. M. Tremaine, noted figure in the musical world. Writing to the Conn Music Center at Elkhart, Ind., Mr. Tremaine suggests this idea as a basis around which a new family relation may be built up.

C. M. Tremaine.

Mr. Tremaine points to the music week editorial appearing in the Chicago American which carries out the same thought. Following are some of the high points of this article:

"Music is, or ought to be, part of everything in life. It expresses as nothing else can men's highest aspirations, deepest sorrows, patriotic courage, love of country and of home.

"Henry Ford's advice to fathers and mothers is, 'Let your children play some instrument. If they can't play well, let them play badly' and he quotes the Bible:

"'But be ye doers of the word, and not hearers only.' Be creators of music, not merely listeners.

"Above all, the family should be musical. . . . Every family a complete orchestra, would be an excellent motto. . . .

"Each of us should cultivate music in his soul and mind, and every father and mother should encourage music in the home.

"If your little boy wants a saxophone, sacrifice yourself and let him have it.

"If your daughter wants a ukulele, a banjo, guitar or violin, give it to her."

This Band Plays 365 Days a Year

Long Beach Finds Music Good Investment; Director in Mayor's Cabinet.

A municipal band maintained 365 days in the year is the proud boast of the City of Long Beach, Calif. No other city in the United States and possibly in the world can claim to provide so lavishly for the musical entertainment and education of its people, says the Conn Music Center. In addition, thousands of tourists visiting California from all parts of the globe are attracted to Long Beach by this abundance of band music and elect to pass a large share of their visit there enjoying the daily afternoon and evening concerts.

H. L. Clarke.

This famous band, one of the oldest municipal bands in existence, was first organized in 1908 by Charles H. Windham, then mayor, and has been in constant operation ever since. The present band leader is Herbert L. Clarke, for many years associated with John Phillip Sousa, and now in his fourth year at Long Beach.

The band is supported entirely by municipal funds at a yearly cost of $125,000, raised by a seven-mill tax levy on the assessed vaulation of local property. The unique situation of Long Beach, and the enormous attraction of the band to tourists has been found more than to justify this expenditure. Every performance finds guests of the city. No charge is made for any concert given nor is any collection taken.

Director Clarke is a member of the mayor's cabinet. His 47 bandsmen are employed under a special civil service statute, and are engaged and discharged only by the director. This frees them from political influence and obligation and assures having only men who are real musicians and thoroughly trained in concert band playing.

This sounds no doubt, but as a matter of fact it is an exhortation for the benefit of mankind in general. You are now as well situated as you will be at any time to meet your bills. The average merchant needs these amounts to clean up his obligations and prepare for his winter goods. He has kindly took the burden of your credit through the summer, and now he needs the cash.

The frost will soon be on the Pumpkin and the due is on your bills which for your own benefit you should get all settled before the cold weather is upon us. The Turkeys are roosting high and Thanksgiving is close by. This appeal for the good of all is the united voice of the who passed away June 8, 1927, and was read at the Woman's Congress, Hillsdale Fair by Mrs. A. D. Jennings of Somerset.

I am often reminded of these words

Hope, Love, Pleasure and Pain are mingled together. like sunshine and rain and the smile and the tears. The song and the dirge follow each other like surg upon surg.

A tribute of love and respect to our dear departed secretary Mrs. O. B. Mosher of Hillsdale Womans Congress who had served well and faithfully for twenty years. She loved her work and her energy and her ability was so manifest to her many friends I really need not speak of it. Yet it is indeed a great pleasure to her Co-workers to know at the time of her demise was serving in the same good work.

We sometimes feel she did not fully realize in her feeble condition the responsibility and strain it would be upon her. But alas! God's finger touched her and she slept.

We are proud to pay her due homage, she would not ask more. We know she was a worthy member and those who knew her best loved her best. I have found her in our long acquaintance to be loyal to her friends and will be sadly missed in the home and by her congress friends.

She was a woman who seldom gave her opinion until asked for and then it was filled with good judgment which school life and life's school had developed in her. While we live and memory holds its sway we will not forget our friend and I am sure it will bring back tender and useful memories.

Many times we've come together
In the Autumn of the year
To enjoy our helpful programs,
And the neighborly good cheer.

Many are the friends we've met here
As the years have passed away
And our thoughts are drawn in memory
To a face we miss today.

Now we greatfully recall her
Twenty years of faithfulness
To the work in Womans Congress,
Work to which she gave her best.

From her life she offered
Time and thought without reserve
For she found the work a pleasure
Thankful for health and strength to serve.

Could we give a greater tribute,
Than to say she never swerved
In her loyalty to duty
And the ideals that we serve.

So amid the Fairground's clamor
And the gay festivities
Let us pause in quiet homage
To her staunch nobility.

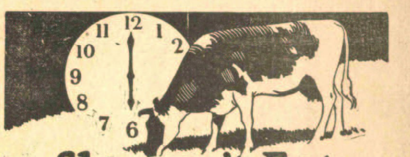
Mrs. A. D. Jennings

WHAT DOES
Chemistry prove

It goes to show that vegetables and all fruits contain a high percentage of the best elements necessary to produce bone and blood and tissue. Certain pure Groceries which are found on our shelves also contain vitamins which combined into culinary products. have a tendency to keep the human system in first class health. The present pure food laws combined with chemistry, make it quite impossible for a Grocery or Market to handle anything but the best.

Fruits and Vegetables are here if anywhere in Town

EDSON J. BENGE



She can't Eat
Grass Enough

A cow producing 35 lbs. of milk daily cannot maintain that yield unless she has about 30 lbs. of dry matter in her feed.

Fresh pasture, which is nearly 80% water, contains but a small percentage of dry matter. This means that the cow will have to eat at least 175 lbs. of grass per day if she is to maintain both condition and milk yield.

Will your cows be able to find and crop that amount of pasture every day this summer? That is what you are expecting of them if you rely on grass alone. The result? A loss of milk and money, because few cows can eat more than 90 lbs. of grass in one day.

The remedy is simple. Feed Larro with pasture through the season—at the ratio of 1 lb. of Larro for each 5 lbs. of milk when pasture is plentiful, with a gradual increase as summer advances. Thus you can prevent the summer slump in milk; bring your cows into the fall in better condition for their winter work; and make more profit for yourself.

Old Fences
Made New
At Slight Expense

IT DOESN'T take much time nowadays to keep fence lines stock-tight and in good repair. Not if you use these quick driven Red Top Steel Posts.

You can drive 20 or 30 Red Tops in an hour. And the fencing is attached in a jiffy so that it will never pull away. This means that you can get a lot of fence repaired even in odd moments.

It's pretty risky business letting fence lines go hang while waiting for a time when work is slack to put them in shape. The damage to stock or crops that can come from just one weak spot may be larger than the entire expense of keeping the fences in good shape. An ounce of prevention is certainly worth while here.

Keep a small stock of Red Tops on hand and get one of these One-Man Drivers. Then when you see a wood post going bad simply drive a Red Top alongside, take out the wood post and fasten the fencing to the steel post. These Red Tops will stop any farm critter you've got on your place.

We personally guarantee Red Tops and we are authorized to make adjustments promptly. Red Tops are not an experiment. They are a proved success and have been giving a good account of themselves in thousands of farm fence lines.

We picked the Red Top line because we believe it is the best value. That's the way we try to buy all lines of goods. We expect our business to grow on the basis of giving you a full dollar's worth for every dollar you spend. Come in and see us when you're in town. MOTHER!

A Child Doesn't Laugh and Play if Constipated

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue mother. If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, donesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup", then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile, and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup", which has full direction for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "Califorina Fig Syrup Company."

SEEKS OLD THRILL OF WHALE CHASE

Ingvald Iverson, superintendent of buildings and grounds of the Muskegon public school, longs again for his old job of chasing whales. He believes it a most fascinating work. and although it is twenty-three years since he was a whale fisher, off the Shetland Islands, he still remembers his battles well.

Whale fishing has lost much of its thrill according to Mr. Iverson because the dangerous practice of killing the whale from a small row boat has been replaced by modern methods. During Mr. Iverson's four years of whale fishing it was a common practice but many men were killed.

As a boy of seventeen, Mr. Iverson was finishing his fourth season as a whaler, an occupation at which his father was killed and at which two of his brothers are engaged today. His father had been a sea captain and whaler all his life and was killed on the last trip of the nineteen hundred and three season.

When a whale was sighted each man went to his assigned post. The firemen went to the line, the engineer or his assistant handled the windlass, the captain was the gunner and the wheelsman kept his post. After the harpoon has been shot into the whale three men went out in a small boat to deal the death blow. It was this method which was abolished because of the danger.

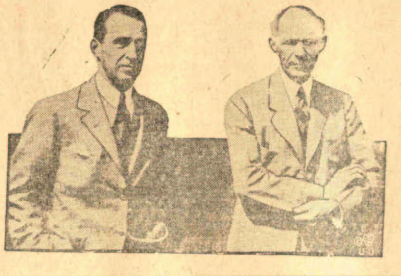
GRAND RAPIDS IS GIVEN HOSPITAL IN SLIGH WILL

Provision for a children's hospital for Grand Rapids is made in the will of Charles P. Sligh, furniture manufacturer.

The amount to be devoted to the hospital will be two hundred thousand dollars and a trust fund of one hundred thousand dollars has been established to accumulate over a period of a year to provide for the erection of one of the buildings of hospital.

The estate is estimated at one million dollars in personal property and fifty thousand in real estate.

Children get the habit of eating unsuitable food because the busy mother has not time to plan and prepare two separate menus. It is relatively easy, howevr, to plan menus composed of foods which are suitable for children to eat, or to adapt the foods in the grown-up menu so that the children can eat them. For example, high flavoring and rich sauces may be omitted, fruits used instead of pastry, and milk desserts given frequently.



AEROPLANES —FORD'S PRESENT HOBBY

HENRY FORD, the world's foremost automobile manufacturer, continues to be much interested in the development of aviation. With a fleet of speedy planes of his own he has made several flights and fully enjoyed them. And it is not at all unlikely that, in the not far-distant future, Mr. Ford will go in for building planes on a large scale.

MICHIGAN MAN IN ANTARCTIC HUNT

Upon as lowly a thing as a soft-boiled egg may have depended the success of Commander Richard E. Byrd's epochial flight over the North Pole in May, nineteen twenty-six, and his recent trans-oceanic flight when he battled his way thru Atlantic storms to the northern coast of France. And in the matter of food, a Michigan man, Garnet "George" Tennant of Manistee probably holds it within his power, to make Bryd's proposed Antarctic explorations successful or a failure.

Improper food would seriously handicap the commander when he seeks to wing his way beyond the realm of human habitation inside the Antarctic circle. So says Tennant, and he should know, for he will be chief cook of the coming expedition, just as he was when Bryd and Bennett made their Arctic dash..

Tennant was in Manistee recently visiting his sister Miss Carrie Tennant He is now in New York where he has been assembling the provisions for a year's stay at Steward Island, south of eighty degrees, where the base of the Bryd expedition probably will be located.

It is no easy task to get together foodstuffs for a twelve months' stay in frigid temperatures such as Tennant did before the Chantier left New York in April nineteen twenty-six, with Byrd's plane and the party of fifty-two men. As it happened, there was no real need for so much provisions, for the flight was over and the party returned home within two months. But Arctic explorers have learned to prepare for the worst and take a long enough to keep the party alive for many months. Too many intreid explorers have never returned from that vast northern region.

It will be a greater problem to assemble provisions for the Antarctic expedition for many of the foodstuffs taken on the nineteen twenty-six expedition would freeze and be useless on the trip to the South Pole, Tennant says. This is true because the base will be on land, where storage facilities are not so good as were provided aboard the Chantier.

STATE'S OLDEST JUDGE PRESIDES IN SHIAWASSEE

Known to be the oldest probate judge in Michigan, in point of service, and believed to be the oldest judge of any kind, probate circuit, or supreme court, in the state—that is Judge Matthew Bush—of the Probate Court of Shiawassee County. He now is serving his thirty-ninth year.

Probate Judge Durfee of Wayne County, was the oldest judge in point of service at the time of his death a few months ago.

Judge Bush was elected in eighteen eighty-eight and for years, no one in his own party has opposed him for nomination. He is an institution in Shiawasee County.

Judge Bush has another record. He is the father of nine children, eight of whom he has put through college and the ninth now is in college. Never has his salary been more than twenty-eight hundred dollars a year and when he took office it was one thousand, one hundred dollars a years. Asked how he did it he, declared that, when he realized he had a family growing up to educate, he decided not a cent must not be wasted and not one has been wasted.

SEWER BLOCKED TO SAVE GARDEN

Beauty vs Efficiency..

A garden or a sewer.

This is the question that has stirred the Michigan State College and the city of East Lansing during the last two weeks with the alumni of the college arrayed on one side and engineers employed jointly by the college and the city on the other.

The original plans of the engineers would have routed the sewer through the heart of the garden and a strip of twenty feet wide would have been laid bare. Shrubs that have taken many years to grow would have been dug up with no guarantee that they would live when replanted. Furthermore, a layer of soil only seven inches deep would have been left above the sewer, making the growth of some plants there impossible.

Just as the work of taking out the shrubs was getting under way, however, an alumnus discovered what was happening and spread the alarm. Work was stopped until new plans could be drawn that would either spare the garden altogether or, at the worst, route the sewer so as to destroy only annual plants near the edge of the garden

All of which may lead one to suspect that this is no ordinary garden. It is not. Students and alumni cherish it because of the precious associations it holds for them; botanists value it for its two thousand species of plants and flowers it contains; and the public admires it for its beauty..

Tradition says that the botanical garden is the most romantic spot on the campus and that in its moon filled glades and shadowy winding walks, hundreds of love affairs have flowered. At any rate, the garden is a favorite strolling place for dancers from the gymnasium and the armory nearby, and fraternity pins have been known to enter the garden worn by one person and to come out decorating another of the opposite sex.

The garden was started just fifty years ago by the late Dr. William J. Beal, for whom it was named. He was professor of botany for forty years at the M. S. C.

SEWERS, WALKS, TABOO IN TOWN

The brand new fifteen million dollar village of Bloomfield Hills which has been created within the last six months, twenty miles out Woodward avenue, Detroit has little in appearance to suggest the one hundred years of toil which harnessed and subdued its rolling acres Yet in its very avoidance of the usual village aims it is not unlike the two men, who first sought fresh fields there in eighteen nineteen.

The familiar village with its group of homes gathered around a few stores, and its ambitions for sewers, sidewalks, and waterworks has no counterpart there, for sewers are to be installed only when they become inevitable, sidewalks are entirely taboo and each householder owns his own independent water system and desires no other

In the valley where Woodward avenue crosses Long Lake road, a group of business buildings cluster around the corner, not by chance or necessity, but a carefully arranged plan which takes the surroundings into account. The row of stores, the tea room, a township building, the elaborate "Fox and Hound Inn", and even the nifty gas station all are done in English architecture, and the purple and gold swamp which spread through the valley, not long ago, is being replaced by a definite landscape scheme..

In eighteen nineteen, Amasa Bagley, purchased the northwest quarter of section fourteen of the township of Bloomfield" from the government and retrieved the land from the wilderness. The public house which he built of logs on the old Saginaw road gave the place its name. "Bagley's.." It was afterward known for many years as 'The Circle' and over the door of the twenty year old brick schoolhouse on Long Lake road is carved "The Circle School". But the four corners had been generally known as "Bloomfield Center" before it was incorporated five months ago as "Bloomfield Hills Village".

William Morris, who also come to Bloomfield in eighteen nineteen and married Bagley's daughter, established a grist mill on the spot where now the waters flow over an ornamental mill wheel and dam. He later added a store, pottery and pearl ash factory and distillery This versatile gentleman according to local history, raised the first wheat to waive its promise of prosperity in Bloomfield township. On that estate also is the place where William Martin once kept the county poor, sixty of them, for one dollar and a quarter per week each.

The world's greatest highway was then only a path through the swamp and forest over which the Indians travelled on their hunting and fishing trips and to and from Detroit for their government doles

PHANTOM FLIGHT OF SNIPE AWAITED

The first cold wind that litters the sidewalk with maple leaves raises a perplexing question to the hunter. When will the jack snipe arrive.

No bird cloaks its comings and goings with more secrecy than the darting, twisting dodger of the bog. Nothing better deserves the title of "will-o-the-wisp" or "phantom". Sometimes the jacks come sweeping out of the North with a rain. . Some times they drop suddenly and unexpectedly into Michigan on moon light nights when the reeds and rushes are brushed with the faintest suggestion of frost. And sometimes—last year for example— they don't seem to come at all.

The snipe hunter is one whose philosophic makeup insures him to disappointments. He may visit a bog or pasture for six days in succession without finding the tell-tail borings and white markings of the little brown dodger. The seventh day the snipe may be there—hundreds of them—pitching and gyrating over the dun of the earth as they wisk from one choice feeding spot to another. And the great opportunity of the year is lost.

Let's All Pull Together For a Greater Michigan and Greater Nation

By H. G. WELLS

And very civilly he gave them greeting. He talked to them and used his eyes.

"Where does he come from, brother Pedro" asked one.

"Down out of the rocks."

"Over the mountains I come," said Nunez, "out of the country beyond there—where men can see. From near Gobota—where there are a hundred thousands of people, and where the city passes out of sight."

"Sight?" muttered Pedro. "Sight?"

"He comes," said the second blind man, "out of the rocks."

The cloth of their coats, Nunez saw was curious fashioned, each with a different sort of stitching.

They startled him by a simultaneous movement towards him, each with a hand outstretched. He stepped back from the advance of those spread fingers."

"Come hither," said the third blind man, following his motion and clutching him neatly.

And they held Nunez and felt him over, saying no word further until they had done so.

"Carefully," he cried, with a figger in his eye, and found they thought that organ, with its fluttering lids, a queer thing in him. They went over it again.

"A strange creature, Correa," said the one called Pedro. "Feel the coarsness of his hair. Like a llama's hair."

"Rough he is as the rocks that begot him", said Correa, investigating Nunez's unshaven chin with a soft and slightly moist hand. "Perhaps he will grow finer".

Nunez struggled a little under their examination, but they gripped him firmly.

"Carefully," he said again.

"He speaks," said the third man. "Certainly he is a man."

'Ugh," said Pedro, at the roughness of his coat.

"And you have come into the world?" asked Pedro.

"OUT of the world. Over mountains and glaciers; right over above there, half-way to the sun. Out of the great, big world that goes down, twelve days' journey from the sea."

They scarcely seemed to heed him. "Our fathers have told us men may be made by the forces of Nature," said Correa. 'It is the warmth of things, and moisture, and rottenness—rottenness."

"Let us lead him to the elders," said Pedro.

"Shout first" said Correa, "lest the children be afraid. This is a marvellous occasion."

So they shouted and Pedro went first and took Nunez by the hand to lead him to the houses.

He drew his hand away. "I can see"' he said.

"See?" said Correa.

"Yes; see,' said Nunez turning towards him, and stumbled against Pedro's pail.

"His senses are still imperfect," said the third blind man. "He stumbles, and talks unmeaning words. Lead him by the hand."

"As you will," said Nunez, and was led along laughing.

It seemed they knew nothing of sight.

Well, all in good time he would teach them.

He heard people shouting, and saw a number of figures gathering together in the middle roadway of the village.

He found it taxed his nerve and patience more than he had anticipated, that first encounter with the population of the Country of the Blind. The place seemed larger as he drew near to it, and the smeared plasterings queerer, and a crowd of children and men and women (the women and girls he was pleased to note had, some of them, quite sweet faces, for all that their eyes were shut and sunken) came about him, holding on to him, touching him with soft, sensitive hands smelling at him, and listening at every word he spoke. Some of the maidens and children, however, kept aloof as if afraid, and indeed his voice seemed coarse and rude beside their softer notes. They mobbed him. His three guides kept close to him with an effect of proprietor ship, and said again and again, "A wild man out of the rocks."

"Bogota," he said. "Bogota. Over the mountain crests."

"A wild man — using wild words," said Pedro. "Did you hear that—

"Bogota? His mind has hardly formed yet. He has only the beginning of speech."

A little boy nipped his hand. "Bogota" he said mockingly.

"Aye. A city to your village. I come from the great world—where men have eyes and see."

"His name's Bogota," they said.

"He stumbled," said Correa—"stumbled twice as we came hither."

"Bring him in to the elders."

And they thrust him suddenly through a doorway into a room as black as pitch, save at the end there faintly glowed a fire. The crowd closed in behind him and shut out all but the faintest glimmer of day, and before he could arrest himself he had fallen headlong over the feet of a seated man. His arm, outflung, struck the face of someone else as he went down; he felt the soft impact of features and heard a cry of anger, and for a moment he struggled against a number of hands that clutched him. It was a one-sided fight. An inkling of the situation came to him and he lay quiet.

"I fell down," he said; "I couldn't see in this pitchy darkness."

There was a pause as if the unseen persons about him tried to understand his words. Then the voice of Correa said. "He is but newly formed. He stumbles as he walks and mingles words that mean nothing with his speech."

Others also said things about him that he heard or understood imperfectly.

"May I sit up?" he asked, in a pause. "I will not struggle against you again."

They consulted and let him rise.

The voice of an older man began to question him and Nunez found himself trying to explain the great world out of which he had fallen, and the sky and mountains and suchlike marvels to these elders who sat in darkness in the Country of the Blind. And they would believe and understand nothing whatever that he told them, a thing quite outside his expectation. They would not ever understand many of his words. For fourteen generations these people had been blind and cut off from all the seeing world; the names for all the things of sight had faded and changed; the story of the outer world was faded and changed to a child's story; and they had ceased to concern themselves with anything beyond the rocky slopes above their circling wall. Blind men of genius had arisen among them and questioned the shreds of belief and tradition they had brought with them from their seeing days, and had dismissed all these things as idle fancies and replaced them with new and saner explanations. much of their imagination shrivelled with their eyes, and they had made for themselves new imaginations with their ever more sensitive ears and finger-tips. Slowly Nunez realized this; that his expectation of wonder and reverence at his origin and his gifts was not to be borne out; and after his poor attempt to explain sight to them had been set aside as the confused version of a new-made being describing the marvels of his incoherent sensations, he subsided, a little dashed, into listening to their instruction. And the eldest of the blind men explained to him life and philosophy and religion, how that the world (meaning their valley) had been first an empty hollow in the rocks, and then had come first inanimate things without the gift of touch, and llamas and a few other creatures that had little sense, and then men, and at last angels, whom one could hear singing and making fluttering sounds, but whom no one could touch at all, which puzzled Nunez greatly until he thought of the birds.

He went on to tell Nunez how this time had been divided into the warm and the cold, which are the blind equivalents of day and night, and how it was good to sleep in the warm and work during the cold, so that now, but for his advent the whole town of the blind would have been asleep. He said Nunez must have been specially created to learn and serve the wisdom they had acquired, and that for all his mental incoherency and stumbling behaviour he must have courage and do his best to learn, and at that all the people in the doorway murdered encouragingly. He said the night—for the blind call their day night—was now far gone, and it behooved everyone to go back to sleep. He asked Nunez if he knew how to sleep, and Nunez said he did, but that before sleep he wanted food. They brought him food, llama's milk in a bowl and rough salted bread, and led him into a lonely place to eat out of their hearing, and afterwards to slumber until the chill of the mountain evening roused them to begin their day aagin. But Nunez slumbered not at all.

Instead, he sat up in the place where they had left him, resting his limbs and turning the unanticipated circumstances of his arrival over and over in his mind.

Every now and then he laughed, sometimes with amusement and sometimes with indignation.

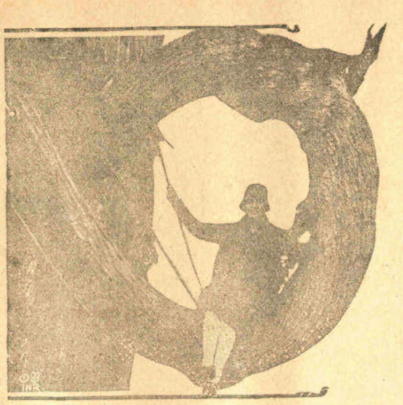
UP IN THE 'DOUHNUT RING'



MOST every town has its curiosities. And in Fryeburg, Maine, it's the famed three pictured above.

One of its sturdiest lower branches has been shaped by Nature into a 'doughnut"—a freak that catches the eye of every visitor to city.

No one really knows how old the tree is.

DISASTER IS FACING CURIOUS AT HANDS OF EATON OIL MEN

Becoming desperate over the experience they have had with many visitors, the drillers who are putting down a test well southeast of Charlotte, have prepared a startling warning to those who persist in asking the oft repeated question.

The gruesome reminder, placed close to the drilling outfit, is an imitation grave appropriately decorated with artificial flowers, a soft drink bottle, tobacco can and electric light bulbs. At the head of the mound is a slab bearing the inscription painted in red letters "Here lies the last man who asked how deep we were."

Drilling for oil was halted temporarily as a large wrench which is used to unscrew the drills was broken, and the work could not be continued until another substituted for use in drilling in place of the heavy rope.

CLUBS JOINING IN CONSERVING GAME

Resort clubs with a hunger for great acreages steadily are biting into the unoccupied forests, lake and brook lands of northern Michigan; and now comes a Detroit-Chicago-Grand Rapids aggregation with a purchase lien of fourteen thousand acres at East Jordan, and six thousand acres more in sight. Leaders in the project say they are going to fence it all in. That will be something more than fifty miles of fence.

Men in the state government talk about two million acres of 'waste' land in this state. It may be waste from the point of view of the agriculturist. But the proletariat axeman, native to the land, who goes in on the frozen swamps and river bottoms and takes out cedar posts gets a good deal out of it..

The city clubman organized to conserve the life of woods and streams and realize upon them as a sporting proposition gets more, in his own estimation, at all events The Huron Mountain club in the upper peninsula, another club on the Au Sable, one on Turtle Lake, another on the Pere Marquette River and many others scattered throughout the northland, all controlling big acreages, are beginning to become pronounced factors in the reclamation of lands laid waste by the lumbermen. That, at least is the aspect to the eye of men, who are familiar with conditions in the north.

By reclamation these observers mean restoration of the "waste" lands to something like their primeval condition when clothed with forests and inhabited by wild life. For the big clubs fight fires on their areas and permit and aid the oncoming new forest growth to progress; and they follow the way of the conservationist in respect to the propagation and preservation of the fish, flesh and fowl that inhabit the wilds.

FALL HELD BEST TO PLANT TREES

As in Milton's time, many think of autumn only as harvest time when all the ripe fruits are taken in, carefully packed and stored away for winter use; and the time when they reluctantly watch the last of the season's flowers and leaves wither and fall, leaving the bare sturdy trees and shrubs to face the cold bleak winter, and the weak plants to be beaten down by the winds and fall rains to rot under the snow. Fall to them is both a happy and a sad season of the year happy in the results of the year's labor and sad that the season is over.

However, the sadness is unnecessary according to many gardners to whom autumn is the most delightful and pleasurable of the four in every way. Why mourn for departing flowers when Nature is merely going to sleep and will awaken next spring with multitudinous flowers even more beautiful if the proper preparation for them is made.

Gardners have found through experience that the planting of trees, shrubs and herbaceous plant can be done in the fall with considerably greater success and with far more ease than in the spring. In the first place there is a much longer season properly to prepare the ground and plant than there is in the spring, when every day's delay as Nature progresses counts as another impediment in the development of the plants. the soil is in better working condition and the weather more favorable if the work is done early enough.

Secondly, the plants are benefited by fall rains and growth is started as soon as spring arrives, which very often is several weeks before planting conditions are favorable. In this way much is gained. Also for the planting of trees and shrub and many of the herbaceous plants the fall season is the best, as the stock is then in a dormant state and is much easier to handle or to move.

Spring weather is often more trying on the plants than the winter is. That is another advantage of fall planting. Plants established in the ground when spring opens are in a position better to withstand the trying spring changes than newly set plants are. After being in all winter, growth will be gradual and normal, resulting in larger plants, and those that flower will have lovelier blooms.

"Well" sighed the Weary Mother of Six, "the children have all gone back to school on my vacation."

EX U.. S. EDUCATOR GOES TO TEACHERS COLLEGE

Dr. William McKinley Robinson who joined the faculty of Western State teachers' college with the opening of the fall term, has just concluded his work with the federal bureau of education, with which he has been associated three years. He has completed an official circular on rural education now being circulated by the bureau which is an authentic statement of what is being done by non-rural schools and teachers colleges for preparing prospective rural teachers.

Charles A. French, retiring editor and manager of the News, during the past nine years, will remain temporarily at Monroe.

What Dr. Caldwell Learned in 47 Years Practice

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for forty-seven years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngesters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of forty-seven years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation. It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health; Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write 'Syrup Pepsin", Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Prohibition Is Making Good

BY GIFFORD GORDON

As an excellent illustration of the great economic waste the legalized liquor traffic has ever proved itself to be, I would like to inform my readers right here that it would only take three of Great Britian's last year drink bills to square her entire war debt with the United States of America, a debt this generous country hasgiven her sixty two years in which to pay, she could pay in three short years if the money that went down the throats of her people could only be diverted to this one specific purpose.

Those who are in a position to know are absolutely unanimous in declaring prohibition to be one of outstanding reasons for America's unparalleled and unprecedented prosperity today.

PROHIBITION AS A HEALTH MEASURE

One of the higher blessings of prohibition is seen in its contribution to the good health of the nation. Eminent physicians have for many years been pointing out to us the very serious pathological consequences of the use of alcoholic drinks. It is not surprising then that the tone of the national health should improve with prohibition. The average death rate in the pre-prohibition years 1913-17 was 13.92 per 1,000 people; in 1924 it had fallen to 11.9. This means the saving of hundreds of thousands of lives every year. The sudden and dramatic decline in tuberculosis with the coming of prohibition is one of the most impressive accomplishments in recent medical history. The average mortality rate from tuberculosis for the ten years immediately preceding prohibition was 150 per 100,000 of the population. With the advent of prohibition there came a sudden drop in the rate, until in 1923 it stood at 94 per 100,000—a decrease of 56 per 100,000. Other diseases and disorders such as cirrhosis of the liver, pneumonia, alcoholic insanity, delirium tremens, have been greatly reduced under prohibition. Subsequent centuries will acclaim prohibition as one of the greatest health measures of history.

But the boon prohibition has been to American babies is to my mind the greatest and most outstanding achievement of the whole reform, and it is certainly right here where I get my greatest inspiration to re-dedicate this life of mine afresh each morning to this great humanitarian and beneficent cause. Children have probably never had a greater enemy than beverage alcohol. It has slaughtered them by the uncountable thousands. Those who today are trying to rehabitate the "personal liberty" defense of the liquor traffic should remember that you can't restore this traffic without walking rough shod over the sacred rights of childhood.

Dr. Isaac D. Rawlings, health director of the State of Illinois, informs that, "Since the Volstead Law went into effect five thousand fewer babies have died in the State of Illinois each year. Where once the beer bottle reigned supreme, the milkman now makes his daily rounds, leaving a bottle of the most perfect food known to man—milk." Thirty thousand babies saved in the state of Illinois alone in six years of prohibition! The question I ask of all American people is this: Which is of greater value to America, beer or babies? The modificationist in asking for the return of beer is wanting to establish upon his throne a most deadly enemy of little children. These are some of the many facts I am using today in an effort to offset the influence of this terrible Wet Propaganda.

I beg, I beseech, I plead, I challenge all those who read this article to re-dedicate their lives this very day to this great humanitarian cause—Prohibition: for the only way to a Dry World is through a Dry America.—The Union Signal

A Country Church yard crowded full of automobiles on Sunday morning is a gratifying sight to those who have looked with alarm at the decadance of religion in America and particularly the waning of interest in the country church which they have considered the backbone of American institutions and the only guaranty of the perpetuity of American government.

The encouraging facts remain that people are still in earnest and come a long distance to hear a sermon that keeps them awake thruout and appeals to the educated high school graduate as well as those who have not had such advantages. A sermon which takes hold of the emotions without shocking the intelligence and stirs one to new courage in life.

Such a stirring sermon was given by Prof. W. H. Roberts of the Department of History, Hillsdale College, being the fourth in the series on "Fundamentals of Christianity", entitled "The Compassion of Jesus."

Attendance at the Sunday school following the 10 o'clock preaching service, has also greatly increased The lesson of the day lead to some interesting discussion of modern problems in the adult bible class. Different leaders are selected each Sunday to direct such discussions, making them practical and helpful.

Next Sunday there will be two soloists at the preaching service and arrangements have been made to have some special music at every service in the future.

CONTESTS AND BETTER FARMING

By D. H. OTIS
American Bankers Association

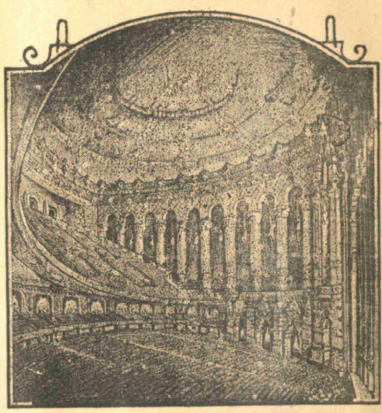
Much interest has been aroused over the country by ton pig litter contests. In a number of instances these litters have even exceeded two tons. If brood sows were developed so as to produce ton litters, it would be possible to obtain from each litter at least 1,500 pounds dressed meat, which would make it possible to cut down the number of brood sows from [illegible],000,000 to 6,000,000, a saving of [illegible],000,000 head.

Egg production per hen is today exceedingly low, amounting to only 56 eggs per year. Under the direction of the colleges of agriculture there have been carried on tests with demonstration farms which show it is easily possible to have flocks able to produce an average of 135 eggs per hen, or more than double the present production. If this were done throughout the United States, we could dis-

CINDERELLA CINEMA FINDS THE PRINCE—AND MICHIGAN GAINS THEATRE PRESTIGE

It's a Far Cry From Vacant Store to New Fox Palace in Michigan; Costs Ten Million Dollars; Fashioned With Richness Undreamed of by Aladdin

By C. Howard Crane, Architect



Aladdin and his marvellous lamp have worked wonders, in taking the Cinderella—motion pictures—from dingy vacant stores, tin pan piano music, flickering smudgy shadows on an old white sheet showing crudely amateurish acting, to the palatial state of affluence at present occupied by "The Cinema."

Many considered motion pictures, fifteen years ago, as the devil's own special contrivance for trapping fools, children, and the unwary, for a non-stop flight straight to perdition.

Now motion picture palaces are becoming the architectural beauty-spots of the world, and "the best people" find an occasional indulgence essential to their comfort and happiness.

Temples to Gods, and palaces for kings, then cathedrals, for long years were the only outlets for architectural dreamings—until the great Industrial Revolution started the ball rolling toward skyscrapers, rich country estates and motion picture theatres.

Every Comfort Provided

With the flourish of industry, bringing gradually shorter hours and more pay, devices for entertainment during leisure hours became increasingly important, and more and more money has been poured into this field.

Always curious about the lives of other people, real or fabricated to resemble real happenings, people have avidly accepted motion pictures for their living of life vicariously. It's so easy to sit comfortably in a pleasant cinema palace and do great and brave deeds, love nobly and selflessly, and display grace and charm and genius and geniality.

Naturally, out of this all-absorbing interest has grown an architectural Renaissance, one might almost say, concerned with theatre designing.

A theatre architect has to stay within reason and see that the palace he's creating doesn't cost so much that it could never be paid for out of the prosaic box office receipts and office rents—but the figure for total expenditures has been constantly mounting.

A cost of $200 per seat—one million dollars for a 5,000-seat theatre—would have been considered extremely high even five years ago. Besides, a 5,000-seat theatre was undreamed of.

No Money Spared

But today construction is swiftly advancing on a theatre that costs over $2,000 per seat. Michigan is now to have a $10,500,000 theatre in the new Fox, Detroit. As the second largest theatre in the world, with over 5,000 seats, the cost will exceed $2,000 per seat or just ten times what would have been considered palatial five years ago. Even $125 per seat on the total cost of a theatre five years ago was considered rather steep.

In adapting the Hindoo Temple style of architecture to a theatre, we've achieved something very distinctive and have struck an entirely new note, as this style has never before been used for theatres and we consider it particularly appropriate. The whole idea in theatres is to take one away from the workaday world into the land of pleasant fantasy and dreams.

Some day, perhaps, we'll have Gothic Cathedrals adapted for theatres, high-spired cinemas, but we start with the pagan temple theme.

Besides, in the India of old their temples were not so much to Gods as to holy men, centers for learning, shelters for pilgrims.

Marvelous in Color Effects

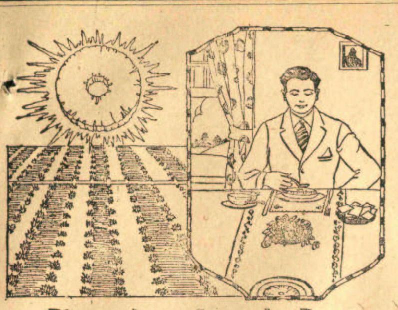
We've utilized the richest colorings, of course, imitating brocaded-silk fabriced walls, hanging tassels and fringes and filigree work from the huge Arabian tent-like dome, and detailing huge red-gold marble columns to sentinel the six-story Grand Lobby and Main Auditorium. Lights will change with the moods of the music, stage presentations, and the silent drama on the screen.

Burmese shrines and Hindoo totem poles, incense burners and gold and silver mirrors, are made much of, and the whole theatre presents a richness undreamed of by Aladdin when he rubbed his lamp and ordered a palace from his genii.

Cinderella never stepped from her mouse-drawn pumpkin coach to a finer palace. It's far cry from the vacant store room Cinderella cinemas to the Hindoo Temple adaptation in Michigan's new Fox Theatre, in Detroit, to be completed early in 1928

William Fox has a 150 million dollar theatre building program on, but the ten million dollars in Michigan's new Fox Theatre will give Detroit and Michigan real prestige in theatredom.

In planning the whole thing we've remembered we're sons of Michigan.



Pineapple to Start the Day

SUCCESS in life depends upon a clear, quick brain and the energy to use it. The ability to think clearly is governed largely by our health, and our health by what we eat. After a heavy breakfast, we are likely to feel stupid all morning, perhaps all day, and if this occurs often we get the reputation of being slow and stupid, and our advancement is equally slow. It pays to consider the menu of the morning meal; to eat those things which give buoyancy and a quick brain.

Of all the energizing foods, pineapple is one of the most effective. A slice or two of pineapple the first thing in the morning, or a dish of crushed pineapple, or a drink of pineapple juice goes "to the spot," and sets one up for the day. There is a scientific reason for this: Pineapple contains mineral salts, an enzyme "bromelin" which acts as a digester of other foods, and also the three most important vitamins in large amounts.

Juice and Fruit Can Be Used

The housewife who wishes to serve pineapple juice in the Hawaiian manner will find on pouring the juice from a large can of sliced pineapple that she has one large measuring cup full. From the number two size can of crushed pineapple she may drain three-quarters of a cup of juice. The juice may be drunk just as it is, from small wine glasses, or it may be diluted with water, and a little lemon or orange juice added.

The sliced or crushed fruit may be used in any way that suits the housewife's whim. Perhaps she will save it for breakfast on the following morning, serving it alone at the beginning of the meal, or heated with a slice of bacon, or mixed in an omelet. Or she may make a jellied dessert with the crushed fruit, or put it into a cake or an icing, or into a fruit cup for dinner; or she may use either the sliced or the crushed fruit in a salad.

An Unusual Recipe

This Pineapple Cream Custard will prove a delightful way to use the drained crushed fruit: Beat the yolks of the three eggs slightly, add one-third cup sugar, one-eighth teaspoon salt, and two cups hot milk. Cook in a double boiler until thickened, stirring constantly, and cool. Beat three egg whites stiff and add three tablespoons powdered sugar. Add three-fourths cup crushed Hawaiian pineapple to the cold custard and fold in one-half of the egg white mixture. Pour into the serving dish and spread the remainder of the whites over the top.

Advocate Business Farmer $2.00

Michigan cattle, entered in the various competitive events at the Dairy Cattle Congress at Waterloo Iowa, early in the month, won high honors for the state. Out of 16 head of Holstein cattle entered in the open classes, for instance, 13 head placed "in the money." Herds from Michigan's institution herds of Holsteins also finished fourth in a strong list of entries in the "institution" class.

More Speed Needed In Liming Program

At the present rate of applying lime, 115 years will be needed to correct the acidity of Michigan soils, according to an announcement of the soils department at M. S. C.

The soils specialists estimate that there are 8,500,000 acres of crops grown in the State and that 6,500,000 acres of these crops are grown on acid soils. One application of lime increased the yield of wheat on a Cass county field 6.4 bushels per acre each year for a ten year period, illustrating the value of correcting soil acidity.

Experience throughout the State has shown that is a better practice to apply lime at least six months before seeding a legume on a field Each farmer is advised to get prices on all forms of lime and use the one that he can obtain at the least expense.

More organic matter as well a lime is required by Michigan soils. The organic matter can be supplied by plowing down green manure crops such as sweet clover, ordinary clovers, or rye.

Now Is The Time To Combat Borer

The fall is the time to combat the European corn borer, M. S. C. specialists advise. By destroying the pest's winter home now, its chances of survival are practically nil, and usual farm operations will not be interfered with in the spring by clean-up work.

The corn borer winters over in stalks and weeds. Sealed up in its pithy palace, the pest is as comfortable as the czar was once in Russian snows. By practicing control measures this fall, however, large numbers of the pest will be destroyed, while those which escape the clean up will perish for want of suitable shelter.

Low cutting of the corn crop, within two inches of the ground, is the first control step, the specialists say. The stalks should then be put in the silo or finely shredded. The action of the silage acids kills the borers while experiments have shown that shredding, with the rollers tightly set, destroys 98 percent of the borers.

On fields where low cutting is not practicable, the remaining stubble should either be plowed under or pulverized with a stubble beater. According to State regulations, small grains should not be seeded in corn stubble which has not been so treated, or cut low.

That the borer is in for a hard winter is evidenced by the clean up work which farmers are doing. Spurred on by demonstrations conducted by the College in cooperation with county agent of the U. S. Bureau of Entomology, accepted control practices are being practiced generally throughout the infested area this fall.

Find Moisture High In State Seed Corn

Seed corn, which this year contains a high percentage of moisture will be seriously damaged by early freezes if the corn is not properly stored, according to an announcement by the farm crops department at M. S. C.

The percentage of moisture in a great deal of Michigan corn runs as high as 45 to 55 percent. Temperatures of 28 to 30 degrees will ruin such corn for seed purposes if the ears are out of doors, it is said.

High priced equipment is not necessary to care for seed corn properly. An unused room in the house may be utilized; brooder houses make excellent places for drying seed corn, and, in some counties, commercial concerns will dry the corn for a small charge per bushel.

Michigan farmers who have a good type of well matured corn this year will make a good profit on the time spent in preparing the corn for seed purposes, according to the crops specialists. Good seed corn is scarce throughout the corn growing State.

It is said to be more economical to dry the corn now than later, when the air temperatures become so low that a great deal of heat is wasted in warming the air in the storage room. The corn should be above the source of heat while dried.

New Method In Handling Automobiles For Export

Several of the big automobile manufacturers are trying a new way of handling cars for export. Instead of "knocking down" the cars and crating the parts the automobiles are shipped to New York in freight cars on their own wheels, are wheeled aboard the ships the same way, and on arrival move under their own power from the wharves to destination in European countries.

The steamship "Schleswig-Holstein", now being loaded at the New York Central Pier K at Weehawken, N. J., for Antwerp, Copenhagen and Christiania, will carry solid cargo of automobiles—about eight hundred cars—on their own wheels, including Studebakers, Willys-Knights, Nashes, Hudsons and Ford tractors.

A box car will hold six autos in cases, but only four on wheels; but the saving in cost of materials and labor for knocking down, casing and re-assembling is stated to more than offset the increased cost of freight and leave a margin for the shipper. In transferring from car to ship estimates place the saving at 50 percent in the cost of stevedoring.

The cars are run from the box car, across the pier to an elevator, thence across a gangplank to the ship's deck and onto another elevator which lowers them into the hold, where they are easily run into position and securely blocked. On the other side the process is reversed, the gasoline tank is filled and they are ready for delivery under their own power.

The autos are loaded at the rate of 200 a day. Present plans provide for a shipload a month.

Most Honey Goes To Local People

Two thirds of the 15,000,000 pounds of honey produced in Michigan annually is used in filling the sweet tooth of local people, in the opinion of the entomology department at M. S. C.

The Thumb is the banner honey producing section of Michigan. It is estimated that 25 carloads of honey are stored each year by the bees owned in the north half of Huron county alone. The honey crop was excellent all through the eastern part of the state this season.

Bees are willing workers, but they must be properly cared for if any profit is to made from their work. Many people believe that bees spend the winter asleep, but, unless 50 or 60 pounds of good white honey are left in each hive for winter food, the bees will starve

The need of winter supplies for the bees probably caused the misconception that honey is often adulterated with sugar. Apiarists often feed bees sugar syrup, and the material is used as food by the insects Sugar is too expensive, however, to be used as an adulterant for market honey.

Colonies of bees should be protected from winter storms by packing the hives. Six inches of insulating material should be packed on the sides of the hives and a foot on top. Tar paper may be used to shed the rain, according to the M. S. C. men.

Seed Yield Is Best From First Alfalfa

Although it is general practice for Michigan farmers to save the second crop of alfalfa for seed, the men who used the first cutting as a seed crop this year secured the best yields, according to a report from the farm crops department at M. S. C.

Irvine Reibling, Elkton, and George Rae, Bay City, secured yields of six bushels of seed to the acre from the first cutting of Hardigan alfalfa. These fields had been seeded for two years.

Alfred Volz, Sebewaing, harvested over 60 bushels of excellent Grimm Alfalfa seed from a ten acre field that has been seeded five years Mr. Volz won first premium at the Michigan State Fair on an exhibit of this seed.

Yields from the second cutting of alfalfa are averaging two bushels to the acre. The weather conditions this year have been abnormal and it is possible that there would be less difference in yields between first and second cuttings during a normal year, according to the college specialists.

The production of alfalfa seed is said to be becoming a profitable source of income for many Michigan farmers.

Somerset Congregational Church

Prof. W. H. Roberts of the Dept of History Hillsdale College, preached his third sermon in the series entitled "Fundamentals of Christianity", the topic for the day being "The Open Mind" which he regarded as the most fundamental of all Christian teachings, because Christ himself said, there is only one sin "which will not be forgiven," the sin against the Holy Spirit, struggling in the human conscience to make a better individual a better society and a better world.

The sermon like its predecessor was a masterpiece, reviewing church and political history, to show his audience the great sin of all time has been the sin of progress, religious and political. Christ said "Judge for yourselves", between right and wrong. He did not attempt to establish a creed or a fixed standard of living.

Miss Charlotte Moore, Hillsdale College Y. W. C. A. spoke on work planned by the Deputation Teams and a Committee of church members was appointed to co-operate with the students in a week end visit to the Somerset church in the near future.

Lucile Herrald sang a solo "The Prayer Perfect" poem by James Whitcomb Riley set to music by Ervine J. Stenson.

Next Sunday Mildred Lane has been invited to sing. Prof. Robert's sermons are carefully prepared each Sunday, are easily worth going a long distance to hear. The fine paved roads in all directions make the services at 10 a. m. Standard time each Sunday, easily accessible to people from the nearby cities who enjoy a country drive on Sunday morning. All such are welcomed by Somerset Church and community.

Michigan Debating League

high school has become a member of the Michigan High School Debating League this year and will compete for the Inter-scholastic Debate Championship of the state according to an announcement by Professor G. E. Densmore of the University of Michigan, the Manager of the League.

The first step in the forensic race for state honors will be taken on November 18th when the local high school debating team coached by Superintendent R. C. Young of the high school faculty will meet one of the neighboring schools in a debate on the subject: "Resolved That the Direct Primary System of Nominating Candidates for Public Office in the United States Should Be Abolished."

This debate followed by three others on December 9th, January 13th, and January 27th, will constitute the four debates of the Preliminary Series in which every high school must participate in order to qualify for the Elimination Series of debates which will culminate in the Eleventh Annual State Championship Debate to be held at Ann Arbor in Hill Auditorium on Friday, April 27th.

The two schools participating in this final debate will each receive a trophy cup presented by the University of Michigan Extension division, and each of the six debaters will receive a gold watch as a testimonial of individual merit.

Every high school that qualifies for the Elimination Series of debates will be presented with the University of Michigan Wall Plague Trophy, which is a mahogany shield eighteen inches high by fifteen wide, upon which is superimposed a nine inch solid bronze medallion with embossed lettering.

A large number of high schools from all parts of the state have already joined the League, and it is expected that by October 22nd, the date when the League enrollment closes, the membership for the year will surpass last year's record membership of 235 high schools.

Any four-year high school in the state may become a member of the Michigan High School Debating League by applying for membership to Professor G. E. Densmore, Manager, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

The Michigan High School Debating League was organized by the Board of Regents of the University of Michigan in 1917, and has for the past ten years conducted debates among the high schools of the state.

After a week of inactivity the Advocate resumes publication, and it is our earnest prayer that the Advocate will never skip an issue as long as we own it. We find that much necessary business has been lost. and failure of one issue means much pucuniary loss to the editor. The heavy machinery which we own is now in place and we hope to gradually eliminate most of the work that is always necessary while making changes about the plant. All our light machinery will be powered with electric motors, and the big press in a room alone will be later electrified. There will also be a radical change in the paper's style before long.

FACTS
—AND THE OPEN MIND

THE MOST important element in business success—and the most difficult—is to be sure that you have all the facts before you act.

TO GET them all, from every possible source, is the first objective in General Motors. The Research Laboratories contribute some. These are nuggets, left in the crucible, after hundreds of ideas that looked good have been burned away. The Proving Ground contributes others. Dealers contribute. The public contributes. Every department contributes. Through the whole organization runs a spirit of inquiry and of rigid insistence on proof.

OUT OF such thinking come the new models announced from time to time by Chevrolet, Pontiac, Oldsmobile, Oakland, Buick, LaSalle, Cadillac—all with Fisher Bodies. And by Frigidaire. Each new model is a tested step forward. Nothing goes into it as a result of habit or guess or pride of opinion.

MOOSE ALONE ARE FOUND TO ABOUND ON ISLE ROYALE

Walt Hastings, the official photographer for the Department of Conservation, sends down word from Isle Royale that moose are thicker than pin feathers on a gosling. They should be. Isle Royale is a game reserve and has extremely few predatory animals. The moose are contented and have nothing to do but eat, sleep and increase in numbers. The time is not far distant when some measures will have to be taken to reduce the moose herds on the island. There is danger of over browsing in winter but plenty of summer forage. This is not essential at the present time, however. Contrary to the general belief there has never been any evidence uncovered to prove that black bear exist on Isle Royale. This also holds true of porcupines and skunks. There may be a few deer but this is doubtful for the last record of deer concerned a herd of nine that were planted by former game officials many years ago. The chances are that these have disappeared by this time. The island has a fair supply of sharp-tailed grouse unknown in any other section of Michigan.

NEGOTIATIONS TO FIX RATE OF GRAND RAPIDS POWER

Upon expiration next months of the Grand Rapids franchise with the Consumers Power company, it is proposed by the city commission that the question of future adjustment of rates in Grand Rapids should be left open to negotiation with the approval of or by the order of the Michigan public utilities commission..

The commissioners now have before them a recommendation of the legislative committee, drafted by City Attorney Ganson Taggart, to this effect and although the report has remained on the table for two weeks, no opposition to the plan has yet developed.

"Princess Rostelle," a Jersey cow owned by Samuel O'Dell chairman of the state utilities commission on his Highland farm has just finished a three hundred five day record made at the age of thirteen years and six months showing seven hundred and five pounds of butter fat. This is the highest record for a Jersey cow over twelve years of age for either the three hundred and five or the three hundred sixty five day class in the state and the second highest record in the United States for the three hundred and five day class in her age..

"Princess Rostelle' made a seven hundred and three pound record in a previous test at the age of seven years. She has two daughters on test at the present time. "Barbara Rostelle", has made five hundred and seventy-seven pounds of fat in two hundred and sixty-two days at the age of eight years and she should qualify for a gold medal with over seven hundred pounds of fat for the three hundred and sixty five day test.. Another daughter, starting test at the age of one year and eleven months has made three hundred and ninety one pounds of fat in two hundred and sixty-six days.

HUGE FISH CATCH IN TRAVERSE BAY

There are long tales to all the fish in Northport.. And the ones that the old men tell are the longest. They tell them on cold days in the fish shanties that line the weather-beaten docks of this harbor village in Northern Michigan—tell them while the net-reels creak in a nor'easter and the gulls scream overhead. They boast of two-ton lifts of trout in November and whitefish running into the thousands in December. And the funny thing about it is that the export figures back them up.

It's all very well, say the old men for city folks to come up here and talk about bringing in a five pounder of a pink-fleshed trout on the end of a fighting copper reel but where'd they be when they got back home if it wasn't for the sooty fish tugs and the men that run them.

For the Andersons and the Nelsons and the Petersons and the Telegaardes are bred-in-the-bone fishermen who've spent generations, fathers and sons and sons after them—all the way back to Norway a hundred years ago—fighting the waters for fish as the farmer fights land for a crop. And they're proud of the fact that Northport alone, out of the waters of Grand Traverse Bay and the upper stretches of Lake Michigan, exports annually to the big cities, some six hundred thousand pounds of fish..

JACKSON COUNTY APPLE TREE IS NEAR CENTURY

On the farm of Wallace E. Kennedy in the southeastern part of Liberty township grows a Baldwin apple tree which, will be a century old in nineteen thirty... The seed from which the tree grew, was planted by Mrs. Allen Kennedy, bride of a pioneer resident.

"I want an apple tree in our door yard," she told her husband, as they sat before their home a short time after their arrival from Connecticut, and digging a hole in the virgin soil with the heel of her shoe, she dropped in the seed.

Trees in the Kennedy orchard have come and gone, but this ancient landmark remains. A tree surgeon saved its life a few years ago when it began to deteriorate. Members of the family hope to keep it alive until it attains its hundredth year.

The recent assassination in Warsaw of Voikoff, the Soviet ambassador to Poland, for his alleged participation in the murder of the Russian royal family, once more has aroused the attention of the world in the ill-fated monarch. Nicholas II, whose meekness and weakness of character are regarded by many a student of political and social affairs as the fundamental cause of Russia's national tragedy.

A character sketch of the czar after the fall of the monarchy was pubblished recently in the New York Forward by Alexander Kerensky, former head of the provisional revolutionary government of Russia. The czar's subjugation to the czarina his indecision became apparent to Kerensky even in the course of a ten minute interview.

What is perhaps the last picture taken of the czar, hitherto unpublished is in the possession of T Borkowski of Detroit. It was taken by one of the red guards appointed to the czar, two days before the assassination of the royal family in Siberia.

Borkowski is a Russion agronomist who had served in that capacity first under the czar and later under the Soviets. In Berlin, in nineteen twenty-three, while on his way to the United States. Borkowski met a German who made him a present of the photograph which he himself had taken under the following circumstances.

This German served as an officer in the Kaiser's army during the war, was captured by the Russians and exiled to Siberia. At the outbreak of the bolshevik revolution this German, of radical tendencies, went over to the reds and enlisted in the Soviet army.

As a member of the red army, he was later assigned to the czar's guard.. One day, while on guard he brought with him a small pocket camera and snapped a picture of the former ruler of one hundred eighty million people, as he sat in a wheel chair by a little table before his bed, all wrapped in blankets, owing to a slight indisposition. Two days later the czar and his entire family were killed.

FIND POLLUTION IN GRAND RIVER

Engineers in the municipal sanitary engineer's office at Grand Rapids are now correlating information obtained during an exhaustive survey of Grand River pollution from a point above Jackson to its mouth at Grand Haven. This information is to become a part of a report upon which will be based recommendations regarding the nature of sewage disposal plant to be built in Grand Rapids.

Among the objects sought was the determination of the amount of oxygen in the river water at various points the quality of bacteria and the amount of suspended solid carried along. The party also noted the effect the pollution has upon the appearance and sanitary conditions of the river banks.

Because Grand river where Jackson empties its sewage into the stream, is only one thirtieth the size of the river at Grand Rapids its pollution is about fifteen times as great as at Grand Rapids. Below Jackson the water is covered with oil and sludge and there is little, if any, oxygen in the stream making it uninhabitable for fish life.

By the time the water reaches Berryville, there is evidence that the oxygen is being restored, and when Eaton Rapids is reached, conditions become fairly normal. Property owners along the river below Eaton Rapids were heard to criticise the woolen mills there for their effect upon the river, but the water is well oxygenized by the time it reaches Lansing where it is again polluted. This condition prevails as far as Grand Ledge where it begins to clear. Some pollution is encountered at Ionia but from Saranac to Grand Rapids the water is said to again become fairly good.

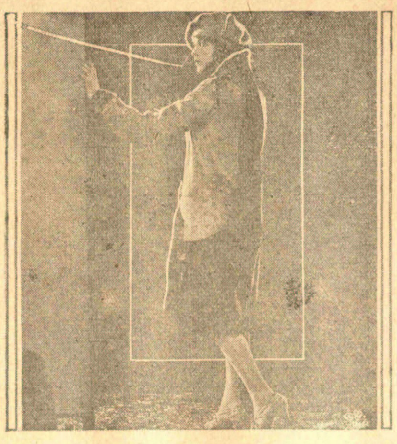
THE LATEST IN FUR COATS



BETTER hide this if the wife has been "pestering" you to buy her a new fur coat for winter. It pictures just what she wants and she's not going to give you any peace until she gets it.

What's more, it's apt to make quite a dent in your pocket-book—for there's nothing cheap about it. You see it's a charming creation of natural pony and beautiful brown Alaskan seal—and it's styled along the very latest lines.

Pretty June Marlowe is the model.

FISHING ENDED ON ST. JOSEPH

The historic St. Joseph River has been turned into a sewer by pollution and its banks are deserted by the angler. It fish are dead—a victim to Indiana industries.

Only a few years ago the river brought plenty of promise to the split bamboo and cane pole gentry as it slipped across the Indiana line into Michigan. It was wide and blue and deep. Sunfish, black bass crappies and perch abounded in its deep holes. Near Berrien Springs the bass fishing was at its best and here in the evening shadows an angler could string a dozen small mouths in a couple of hours by casting over the gravel bottom.

White bass warmed up the river in the spring and anglers say that a bass could be taken with almost every cast when the run was at its height. Wall-eyes, too, were plentiful and it was no trick to catch fifteen to twenty pounds of firm bodied delicious fish in a day. Then, too there were bullheads—thousands of them—for those who preferred the ignoble mudder.

But today fishing on the St. Joseph River is spoken of in the past tense. Rubber and woolen industries at South Bend and Mishawaka have caused the change. Last year the fish began dying, and around Berrien Springs bass could be picked up on shore by the bushel basket. With the bass were the sunfish, crappies and other pan fish patronized by the small boy.

Even the bullheads have left the river, the proprietors of boat liveries declare. The white bass no longer make their spring run, preferring Lake Michigan to the turgid and poisonous water. The only fish are a few stunted wall-eyes, and most of these are caught within a half mile of the mouth.

Acid Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowls and gently urges the souring taste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips". Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

HUNTERS TRESPASS IF PERMIT NOT SECURED

No longer must the farmer see his flocks frightened by hunters shooting at fleeing game, no longer must he suffer his fences to be cut to permit dogs to pass through the hole, no longer is the old brindle cow to be at the mercy of some amateur nimrod seeking something for a target—not since the last legislature passed the non-trespassing law. Now it is necessary for any hunter before entering up on the lands of another to secure the owner's permission. If he fails to secure such permission and is found on such land he is guilty of trespassing and may be prosecuted and fined. It is not necessary for the land owner to seek permission of the prosecuting attorney before a warrant is issued either. Just a trip to the nearest township justice and a signed complaint and the sheriff must arrest and bring said offender before the court for punishment, the penalties being severe and subsequent offenses bearing particularly on heavy fines and jail confinement.

It is not the loss of the game to which most farmers object but the destruction of gates and fences and the general nuisance of having inconsiderate hunter stampede stock and tramp down crops which has brought about a demand for more stringent rules.

Many landowners are pooling their acreage and permitting none to enter upon their premises thus setting aside large areas where wild life may find shelter, it is stated. "No Hunting or Trespassing" signs are selling rapidly and owners of dogs and guns are wondering where they will find a spot to use their new hunting licenses.

If Texas can turn the state upside down with one "vindication campaign" what is Indiana going to do with a hundred.

Old Time Hospitality

Hotel efficiency reached a vanishing point in whittling guest rooms down to hall-room size, while people continue to grow to full height and weight, and ever more expansive in living habits and travelling needs.

So the new and beautiful Detroit-Leland turned boldly back in its architecture, to man-size rooms, to wide, airy corridors, to numerous, ample and inviting public rooms and lobby arrangements.

Here, luxury is homelike. Here is a cuisine that has already become famous as Detroit's finest. Here is a management and service that seems to anticipate the guest's every need, and yet, so quiet and unobtrusive that there is no suggestion of officiousness.

Wins Scholarship

Sidney J. Keys, Elsie, Michigan, was given this year's scholar ship in the Detroit Institute of Technology offered annually by Lieut. Col., Wade Millis to the young man who makes the best record in the Citizens Military Training Camp at Custer.

Keys was graduated from the Training Camp this summer and received a recommendation for a commission as Second Lieutenant in the Reserves of the Army of the United States. As further evidence of his work at Camp he was presented with a silver loving cup for cheerfulness and attention to duty, awarded by the Army and Navy Club of Lansing.

After the close of Camp, Keys worked as a quarantine officer for the Government in its effort to stop the advance of the European corn borer in Michigan. He is twenty years old and is a graduate of the Elsie High school.

Colonel Millis, the donor of the scholarship, is civilian aide to the Secretary of War for Michigan and is Past-President of the Michigan Bar Association. The scholarship entitles Keys to pursue studies in the College of Engineering, College of Pharmacy and Chemistry, or the School of Commerce, all departments of the Detroit Institute of Technology. His preference is for Business Administration.

LAST TRAIN RAN IN 1849 BUT ROAD PAYS DIVIDENDS

The annual meeting of the stock holders of the Erie and Kalamazoo Railway was held in Adrian. Although this corporation ceased operation of trains in eighteen forty-nine, it still earns each year a good return on the capital invested.

The company was incorporated in eighteen thirty-three and began to move traffic in eighteen thirty-six at first with horses and later with steam engines. It ran from Toledo to Adrian and was the first railroad operated west of Schenectady, N. Y. When the road ceased to move trains a part of its right-of-way was leased to the Southern Michigan Railway which later became the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern and still later the New York Central lines. The lease was made in perpetuity and a substantial rental is paid by the New York Central and distributed annually among the stockholders.

EVERY MAN AND WOMAN SHOULD MAKE A WILL

By C. V. KING

This week, we start a new series of articles of more than general interest to every man and woman who reads this paper. A subject regarding which all of our readers wish to be informed, and yet many are timid in seeking the information from attorney's in their locality.

In these articles we will answer the many questions that arise and that our readers wish answered. We will explain why you should make a will, the approximate cost of probating the will, and to whom your property will go whether you make a will or not.

To all readers of this paper who send us an approximate statement of their property, whether real or personal, the names of their children and the persons to whom they would like to provide for in case of death, we will without any charge draw a diagram of how a will should be drawn, give you many valuable suggestions gained from years of experience in the Probating of estates.

It will pay every reader of this paper to cut out these articles and paste them in a book for further references, but in the meantime if a question arises write us and the same will be answered without any charge to you.

When a man dies leaving property, the first step is to ascertain whether he left a last will. If he did, he is said to have died testate; if he left no will, he is said to have died intestate. It is always important to ascertain in the first instance as to the title of the real estate. The title of land is now being taken to a great extent in the name of husband and wife, the survivor taking the whole title. Frequently there have been complete administrations of estates when title was left by so-called joint deed and there was as a matter of law no land belonging to the deceased person.

As hereinafter noted, under recent laws where bank deposits are made or held in joint names, the survivor of such joint depositors is entitled to the fund.

The person appointed by the probate court to take charge of an estate of a person who died leaving no will is called an administrator; one who is named in the will for that purpose, and is afterward appointed by the court, is called the executor; one who is appointed by the court where no executor is named in the will is called an administrator with the will annexed; one who is appointed to complete the work of an administrator or executor who has died or who has been removed from his office, is called an administrator "de bonis non" in the case of an intestate estate and an administrator "debonis non with the will annexed" in the case of a testate estate.

As the duties of these different officials are very similar, for the sake of brevity the word administrator will be used to designate the person who has charge of an estate of a deceased person under appointment of the court.

Next week we will disucuss administration of an estate.

SLENDERER LINES IN NEWEST FROCKS

"More slender than ever," is the rule of all new frocks. Most of the Paris designers have given thot to taking apparent inches off the silhouette.

Since the days kings and queens made velvet the fabric of royalty, you have not seen so many velvet frocks. Transparent velvets, light as the proverbial thistledown, black velvet, as dusky and rich as the sky at night, printed velvet, polkadotted velvet, moonlight blue velvet, wine-red velvet, deep green velvet, tailored velvet frocks with real lace collars and cuffs—formal velvet frocks with a rhinestone ornament emphasizing a distinctive cut or drapery, velvet frocks with metal cloth jumpers—it's right that velvet should be the fabric of royalty, since it's right is to rule.

The two- piece frock, an old friend is especially lovely when the skirt is of velvet and the jumper is of sheer crepe or chiffon, banded with velvet, the satin frock, another old friend is especially smart when its panel tiers bands or circular section are of the dull side of the material.

Frocks of nineteen twenty-seven achieve their slenderness in a variety of ways—the suit-like or coatlike frock, the tiered frock, the frock with swathed or snugly fitted hipline, the frock with circular fullness, the side draped frock for formal wear, the vogue of applied banding of fan shaped tuckings and seamings, the collarless, surplice neckline, the vogue of the woolen frock for all day long wearing, the vogue of "round the clock frocks of the duller, heavier crepes the lavish use of tucks, in patterns in sprays in checks, in diagonal de signs—tucking is a headline in the story of the new fashion.

The shawl collar is flattering to young and mature, alike and appears, the world without end, on fur coats and cloth coats.

Feathers roost high on the top of the mode, and often cover one's ears—a fine fashion for cold weather.

Just as a shrewd fashion authority in Paris predicted, the tunic silhouette in frocks runs in and out of fashion story of Fall like the violin motif in a symphony. One great Paris house built its recent opening around this theme, both in one-piece and two-piece developments. Interesting, too, in sportswear; a typical example is a jersey tunic, extending to the knee and worn over a circular skirt of velveteen. Velveteen bands on the tunic link the two materials smartly.

All-over beaded dresses have boleros that dip in irregular lines to match the irregular hemline.

There's an air of dashing elegance about the Autumn's new stepin pump, as trimly tailored as a French glove, and adorned with pierced metal buckles.

The coats will have a slightly flaring line and this can hardly be accomplished without seams. The designers have made a virtue or rather an embellishment of a necessity and used the seams in carefully worked out designs to decorate the garments. Fur trimmings promise to be very elaborate

MUSIC GETS NEW PLACE IN M. S. C. CURRICULUM

To take music from the dusty shelf of "classical" and "cultural" things and make it significant in the academic and social life of Michigan State College is the object of a complete reorganization of the music department during the coming year under the new head, Lewis Richards, who has just arrived in East Lansing to take up his work.

Under the direction of Richards the department will be expanded by the addition of seven new cours es, and three other new instructors.

ACCIDENT INCREASE BARS DAYLIGHT SAVING TIME

Does daylight saving time during the Winter months increase traffic accidents.

Western Michigan cities contend it does and that is one of the reasons they refuse to adopt it. Two years ago Grand Rapids Muskegon and others decided to continue the daylight saving time throughout the winter. An unusually large number of early morning traffic accidents resulted in Grand Rapids, and there was a demand that the clocks be put back. The demand became so great that city officials acted and later the voters decided they did not want to operate on the fast time in winter.

It was contended the bulk of the workers were forced to go to work during darkness under the daylight time and thus the number of accidents was increased.

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night.

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment. Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

"How best can I trade in my present car for a new car?"

WHEN you are ready to trade in your present car for a new car, you naturally want full value for your present car. But most of all you want full new car value.

It will therefore pay you to consider varying trade-in allowance offers in the light of these basic facts:

1 Your present car has only one fundamental basis of value: i.e., what the dealer who accepts it in trade can get for it in the used car market.

2 Your present car has seemingly different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car.

3 The largest allowance offered is not necessarily the best deal for you. Sometimes it is; sometimes it is not.

4 An excessive allowance may mean that you are paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value.

5 First judge the merits of the new car in comparison with its price, including all delivery and finance charges. Then weigh any difference in allowance offered on your present car.

6 Remember that you are making a purchase—not a sale. You are buying a new car and simply using your present car as a credit against the new car's purchase price.

WE publish this message, believing that the public is entitled to have all the facts. And we invite you to send for the facts about General Motors products by using the coupon below.

Obituary

Addie Jones Taylor, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Jones was born in Somerset township, Hillsdale Co., June 16, 1890, and departed this life October 20, 1927 at her home in North Adams age 37 years, 4 months, 4 days.

After completing school in Moscow she entered the teaching profession and continued until her marriage with Bert Taylor December 23, 1907. To this union were born six children, five of whom Geraldine Maurene, Mary, Louise and Donald survive. Besides the husband and children, a father, mother, a brother Wilbur Jones of Pontiac and a sister Mrs. G. Forest Lewis of Hillsdale are left to mourn the untimely death of a loved one.

She was a member of the Order of Eastern Star of North Adams, of the Townline Grange, West Adams Circle, the Basketry Club and the Ladies Aid of the Congregational church. Her interest in each was evidenced by the faithful and untiring service which she so willingly gave. She was also an active leader of this unit for the Young Women's Christian Association. A host of friends endeared to her by her cheerful, sunny disposition were saddened by her demise, attesting to the high esteem in which she was held:

"Like the petals of a rose,
That drop and fade day by day,
When the last solemn summons comes,
And we stand about in tears,
To think of all the lonesomeness,
Through the sad on coming years,
Some day we hope to meet her,
When all earthly cares are o'er,
On that "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere,"
Where sorrow is known no more."

WHAT DOES
Chemistry prove
It goes to show that vegetables and all fruits contain a high percentage of the best elements necessary to produce bone and blood and tissue. Certain pure Groceries which are found on our shelves also contain vitamins which combined into culinary products. have a tendency to keep the human system in first class health. The present pure food laws combined with chemistry, make it quite impossible for a Grocery or Market to handle anything but the best.

She can't Eat Grass Enough
A cow producing 35 lbs. of milk daily cannot maintain that yield unless she has about 30 lbs. of dry matter in her feed.
Fresh pasture, which is nearly 80% water, contains but a small percentage of dry matter. This means that the cow will have to eat at least 175 lbs. of grass per day if she is to maintain both condition and milk yield.
Will your cows be able to find and crop that amount of pasture every day this summer? That is what you are expecting of them if you rely on grass alone. The result? A loss of milk and money, because few cows can eat more than 90 lbs. of grass in one day.
The remedy is simple. Feed Larro with pasture through the season—at the ratio of 1 lb. of Larro for each 5 lbs. of milk when pasture is plentiful, with a gradual increase as summer advances. Thus you can prevent the summer slump in milk; bring your cows into the fall in better condition for their winter work; and make more profit for yourself.

Old Fences Made New At Slight Expense
IT DOESN'T take much time nowadays to keep fence lines stock-tight and in good repair. Not if you use these quick driven Red Top Steel Posts.
You can drive 20 or 30 Red Tops in an hour. And the fencing is attached in a jiffy so that it will never pull away. This means that you can get a lot of fence repaired even in odd moments.
It's pretty risky business letting fence lines go hang while waiting for a time when work is slack to put them in shape. The damage to stock or crops that can come from just one weak spot may be larger than the entire expense of keeping the fences in good shape. An ounce of prevention is certainly worth while here.
Keep a small stock of Red Tops on hand and get one of these One-Man Drivers. Then when you see a wood post going bad simply drive a Red Top alongside, take out the wood post and fasten the fencing to the steel post. These Red Tops will stop any farm critter you've got on your place.
We personally guarantee Red Tops and we are authorized to make adjustments promptly. Red Tops are not an experiment. They are a proved success and have been giving a good account of themselves in thousands of farm fence lines.
We picked the Red Top line because we believe it is the best value. That's the way we try to buy all lines of goods. We expect our business to grow on the basis of giving you a full dollar's worth for every dollar you spend. Come in and see us when you're in town. Get our prices on posts and the other materials you're needing. Prices are mighty reasonable now on posts and other special items.

VELVETS LEAD IN FASHION PARADE

Velvet for coats and frocks, lead the fabric fashion parade of Autumn and Winter of nineteen twenty seven.

Velvet frocks for daytime wear rely upon beauty of fabric and line for decoration; more formal types of velvet frocks are often combined with gleaming gold or silver metal cloth.

Next in importance, after velvet, for coats, come highly lustrous, deep pile fabrics of a quality that speaks pleasurably thru one's fingertips to a brain that respects and enjoys fine things.

Next to velvet, for frocks, sheer crepes and chiffons, often trimmed with velvet, are important. Sleek and heavy crepes, rich of weight and "feel" create the other frocks in one's wardrobe and there are always these other frocks.

The frock of light-weight woolen appear in every well-planned Autumn and Winter wardrobe—of wool georgette, feather- weight small-patterned tweed or one of the kashmir weaves.

But what's happened to that swashbuckling, wickedly striped or plaided sports coat of a few yesterdays ago. It's not with us at this banquet of fashion. In it's place is plain fabric, or small-patterned tweed.

Wonderful furs, lavishly used, and appearing more often in borders of front-borders, enrich 'dress' coats this year. The dress coat is far more important, this Autumn, than is the sports coat or travel coat. Of velvet, or soft fabrics as lustrous as velvet, these coats are as straight as the proverbial arrow or have a swung-up-at-the closing side fullness, or a circular section set in at the front or sides, like Autumn's new frocks. Decorative seamings and fan-shaped tuckings that hint of a moulded silhouette are used frequently; many coats feel the geometric or modernistic influence in countless tuckings and tiers.

The long-haired shaggy furs are "first in youthfulness, and first in smartness"— wolf, fox, badger, wolverine. Most elegant and less swagger are the softer, shorter furs—beaver, broadtail, kolinsky, squirrel, stone marten, baum or ermine. Dress coats are exactly the length of the frock beneath; sport or travel coats are smartest when two inches shorter than their underlying sports frock.

Observe the ways of the new fur collars on cloth coats—its the way of Paris. Fur collars stand away from the throat—it isn't smart to swathe the throat, and Paris says, "Don't destroy your own lovely neckline. No woman looks right without a proper length of throat. So the new fur collars are tailored to stand away from the throat and

SCREECH OWL MOUSER EQUAL TO HOUSE CAT

The screech owl is up on the records as being a close competitor to the house cat for honors at mousing. And like the cat, the screech owl, too, is nocturnal in its habits by choice. He works on the mice at night and the rodent-eatink hawks work by day, providing a continuous check on the four-footed vermin of the ground.

Throughout most of Michigan this undoubtedly is the commonest owl found not only in thickly wooded regions, but in almost equal abundance in the older settled parts of the state, where it frequents orchards, groves and the fringe of timber along watercourses. It is even found in the small parks or the shade trees along the streets in our largest cities. It is not so plentiful in the Upper Peninsula where its great barred cousin hold sway, but it doubtless occurs in every county in the state and appears to be resident wherever found.

COUNTIES FIGHT CLIMBING TAXES

Retrenchment in the matter of local taxes is to feature the work of the budget-making bodies of the various counties of Michigan it is indicated. Probably the greatest decrease will come in the road budgets. The various county road commissions are holding meetings outlining their year's work.

In addition, many cities prepare their budgets for the coming year in October. All unnecessary improvements are to be eliminated in many cities and counties.

Supervisors do not have direct control over the county road budgets, yet they are able indirectly to regulate them. County road commissioners are named by the supervisors and those officials are likely to listen to suggestions.

The fact that the state has taken over the cost of consructing trunk line highways has eliminated the the greatest item from the county road budgets. Until a few years ago the counties had to pay a portion of the cost.

For several years now, local taxes have been showing a steady increase. During the last year or two there has been a general demand to retrench.

Then, too, the state tax in Michigan is to be greater next year than ever before, and if the total tax rate is to be kept down, there must be retrenchment locally.

One obstacle rises—the school budgets. There has been little retrenchment in the way of school trenchment in the way of the school taxes, and in most counties the amount raised for schools represents around forty per cent of the total tax levy.

ABSENT MINDED PREXY PAYS FOR EARLY SHOT AT WORTHLESS BIRD

Pupils of the Iron River school are enjoying a good laugh at the expense of Dr. Earl C. Tyler, president of the board of education, because with professional absent mindedness he forgot when the duck season opened and was fined fourteen dollars and thirty-five cents as a consequence.

On what he supposed was the opening day of the season, Dr. Tyler bagged a handsome waterfowl on Ice Lake and was so elated that he walked down the main street of Iron River showing his trophy to his friends. But before he had gone half a block he was stopped by Max Jaegers, conservation officer.

"Didn't the season open today." asked Dr. Tyler as he was placed under arrest.

'No its opens tomorrow—Sept. sixteen not September fifteen," replied Jaegers with a grin.

After he paid his fine, Dr. Tyler was informed that his luck was worse than zero. His duck was a merganser, and couldn't be eaten anyhow.

4 PONDS DONATED TO WALTON TO BREED FISH

Anton A. Sustreka has donated four ponds to the Detroit Chapter of the Izaak Walton League for the rearing and breeding of black bass to be planted in lakes.

All four ponds are located near Belleville and are of clear, crystal-like water. It is estimated that they will produce about three million bass for Detroit anglers in nineteen twenty-eight. the propagation program to be in charge of the chapter of the league and the conservation department.

EVERY MAN AND WOMAN SHOULD MAKE A WILL

By C. V. KING

This week we continue with the series of articles and discuss the duties of an administrator. It will pay you to save these articles and remember we will gladly answer without charge any question relative to the subject we are discussing. sing..

In a few issues of this paper we will present a form of a will as a guide for any person to follow, and will duscuss the various feature of a valid will. Watch for these articles.

ADMINISTRATORS

When a person dies intestate, the law provides that upon the application of the next of kin, that an administrator may be appointed by the probate court of the county of which the deceased was an inhabitant at the time of his death, to take charge of the estate, and after the payment of his debts, distribute it to his heirs. If the deceased leaves a widow, she usually makes the petition to the probate court for the appointment, and her selection of an administrator, if he is a suitable and competent person, is as a rule confirmed by the court. In case the widow or next kin neglect for thirty days after the death to make application, a creditor may apply for administration.

The court, on filing the petition, appoints the day of hearing and causes notice of the same and of the time and place of hearing thereof to be given.

It is the duty of the petitioner to see that proof of the publication or of personal service of the notice is filed with the court on or before the time of hearing. An appointment made without such proof is void.

On the day of hearing, any person interested in the estate is entitled to be heard upon the matters set forth in the petition, but if there is no objection offered, it is the usual practice to appoint the person named therein.

The administrator in the order appointing him is required by the court to give a bond, usually in a penal sum double the amount of the personal property. After receiving a bond, the administrator should fill in the names of the sureties, see that it is properly dated, sign on the line following; have the sureties swear to their financial responsibility as provided on the back of the blank and file the bond within twenty days after his appointment.

Upon the filing and approval of the bond the court appoints appraisers limits the time for the settlement of the estate and issues letters of administration, which authorizes the administrator to take charge of, administrater and dispose of the estate of the deceased according to law.

On filing the petition asking for the appointment of an administrator, the court enters an order fixing the date of hearing. A certified copy of this order is then transmitted by the court or given to the proposed administrator, who transmits it to be publisher of some newspaper printed and circulated within the county. The publication is to be for three weeks and the the hearing to be had on date named in order of publication. After the publication is had, the newspaper publisher makes an affidavit of publication and on or before the date of hearing, this proof of publication must be filed with the court. After the proof of publication is filed, the court then determines with relation to the appointment of the administrator and on making the order and appointment, fixes the amount of the bond that he shall give. The bond should then be made out by the administrator or his attorney on blanks which will be furnished by the court and signed by himself and two sureties approved by the court of by a bonding company. If a bond is obtained of a bonding company, the expense of such a bond is borne by the estate. When the bond has been filed by the court, the court will then issue the letters of administration or letters testamentary, as the case may be.

At this hearing for the appointment of the administrator, the court also appoints appraisers to appraise the value of the property owned by the deceased.

In the event that there are no contested claims, or will be no contested claims, a petition may be filed with the court by the administrator, asking that claims be heard by the court. In the event that there are contested claims, the court will undoubtedly appoint commissioners to hear the claims.

It is the duty of the administrator to list all of the property of the estate, which comes into his hands and present the same to the appraisers, who fix the value of the property after they have been sworn in to perform their duty according to law. After the appraisers have fixed the value of the property, the administrator then makes affidavit on the back of the blank, that the property so listed is all of the property belonging to the deceased, of which he has knowledge, and then files the report with the probate court. All this should be done and the report filed within thirty days.

Whether the claims are heard before the court, or commissioners are appointed, in either event, the court enters an order limiting the time for presentation of claims. This is usually four months and one day, but may be longer, within the discretion of the court. All claims filed with the administrator should be granted to the commissioners or court by him, on or before the last day of hearing. The administrator's duty is to ascertain whether or not, all of the claims are just and if they are not, then to resist the allowance of them. After the order is entered, allowing the claims or the report of the commissioner is returned and filed in the court, a period of twenty days is given, in which any interested party can make an appeal as soon as possible. In the event that there is not enough property in the estate to pay the claim then report should be made to the court and a petition filed, asking the court to set a time and enter an order fixing the percentage that should be paid on the claims. After the payment of all claims, ordinarily, the estate is then ready for final settlement. A petition should be filed, asking the court to allow the final account of the administrator (on blanks which the court will furnish) and also asking the court to determine the heirs and assign the residue of the estate. The court thereupon enter an order fixing the time and place of hearing, which order shall be published the same as the order of publication in the first instance. On the day of hearing, any interested party may be allowed to be heard relative to the settlement of the final account, the items therein, as to who are the heirs and all matters that come within the jurisdiction of the court at that time, including construction of the will in the event that the estate is a testate estate. In some jurisdictions, the judge requires that the account be filed with the petition when final settlement, is filed.

Acid Stomach

Better than Soda

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowls and gently urges the souring taste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips". Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

NEWAYGO COUNTY IS NOTED FOR SCHOOLS

Entering Newaygo County on trunk line M twenty from Muskegon, one finds excellent farms and thrifty people, but this same route as it is continued northeastward takes one through lands, where for miles only a few homes are seen. Yet, this county, with twenty-four townships rather than the usual sixteen, has one of the best rural school systems in Michigan.

Much credit is given to a woman, Miss Carrie L. Carter, who for more than twelve years, has served as county school commissioner. Born and reared in Newaygo County, Miss Carter is devoting all her energy to improving the school system.

Newaygo County is believed to be the only one in Michigan where parents set aside one day during the year to visit the schools and study their needs. The event is known as Patron's Day and although it was started thirty years ago by Bert Miller, at present school commissioner in Iron County, it was Miss Carter who succeeded in applying it to all the one hundred twenty-five rural districts.

HARBOR SAVED AT WHITE LAKE

Residents and officials of three states, Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin, have succeeded apparently in saving the White Lake Harbor, where thousands play during the summer months. At least Gen. Edgar Jadwin, chief of the United States Army engineers, has recommended an allotment of fifteen thousand dollars for temporary repairs to the harbor.

The fight to have the White Lake Harbor has been an interesting one and has attracted attention throughout the three states. For years the Government has considered the abandonment of the harbor but interests opposed have pleaded that the future development should be taken into consideration. However year after year, with the lumber industry gone, the freight shipments fell off.

Meantime, the summer resort business increased. Several hundred summer homes are built in the White Lake district. In addition, the White Lake district has become the summer playground of thousands of Boy Scouts from Illinois,, several camps being located in this district.

Two years ago the War Department announced that it proposed to abandon the harbor and that no more appropriations would be needed. A committee was named representing the various interests, and A. E. McCrea, on behalf of the Muskegon Chamber of Comemrce, appeared before the Appeal Board in Washington and made a fight to save the harbor.

Other Michigan harbors have been abandoned, but apparently White Lake is to remain open so that the boats can enter and unload their human cargo. It was a victory of human freight over wheat.

WHITE PEA BEAN CROP CURTAILED BY DROUGHT

There is likely to be no overproduction of white pea beans in Michigan this year, judging by threshing reports. The average yield an acre, indicate the crop will only go about ten to twelve bushels an acre.

The eight to ten week drought in the state greatly curtailed the crop Only in favored sections, on very fertile and moist soil, will yields be near normal. The drought blasted the bloom in many fields, while in others the fill in the pods is only three or four beans where there should be five, six and seven. The crop is of excellent quality and is "picking" only two to four pounds per hundred weight.

In Michigan the development of municipal forests should be a comparatively simple proposition. Seedlings of native trees could be produced in great numbers once a market was created for them. In addition to being valuable as woodlots, or plots from which timber could be sold, they would also become parks and public playgrounds or would help to attract tourists. The community forest idea should be given serious thought as in this way it would be possible to reforest thousands of acres.

JUNIORS 'MAKE' MICHIGAN TEAM

Discussion of sophomore and first year foot ball players is always based upon the high school and freshman record of the player, combined with some idea of the estimation in which the individual is held by coaches under whom he has played. The facts , however, according to coaches at Ann Arbor are that not infrequently the best players of the high school and freshman teams are not the stars of the varsity or the men who win letters in their junior or senior years.

The fight for positions is becoming so intense in the larger schools of the country that, in general, the sophomores do not make the team and it is not until the junior year that the man is considered as a regular, it is explained by coaches at Ann Arbor.

For the nineteen twenty-six season at Michigan, as a reward for playing "above their ability" a large number of foot ball letters was granted. The sophomores who received them were Joe Truskowski, George Squier, Herman Nyland Jr., H.. T. Greenwald and George Rich. Truskowski was the nearest of these to a regular, yet he did not start the final game of the sea son. Of all the experienced men called back for the beginning of the season Captain Bennie Oosterbaan and Louis Gilbert, halfback are the only ones who attained a regular position on the Michigan team as sophomores.

First year tackle candidates are large and powerful, but with some question about their knowledge of the inside play of this important line, they will be watched closely. They include Crego of Saginaw, a former lineman of Eastern High school there; Ketz, the hammer thrower of the track team, Robbins of Highland Park, Ill.,; Walter of Jackson, Mich.,; Poorman of Chicago Heights and Sanderson of Gary, Ind. With the exception of Poorman at one hundred eighty these men all tip the scales within a pound or two of one hundred ninety.

Two freshman centers are listed Shantz of Detroit and Bovard of Ann Arbor. Leading the halfbacks is Geistert, Grand Rapids rated third by the coaches last spring. Geistert comes with high school training and also with a year's experience at Hillsdale, where he was rated as a star in M.. I. A. A. circles. His greatest ability as displayed in freshman and spring work, is in picking holes. He also has considerable speed.

Other halfbacks are Reichman, New York City; Kanitz, Milan, and Sims, Frederick, Oklahoma..

Gembis of Vicksburg, Dansby of Monroe and Drabicki of Detroit are the heavyweight first year men named as fullbacks. Gembis is the best man seen at Michigan's university in some years at the kick-off, as he has great leg power, and is able to drive the ball for unbelieved distance. Dansby gave a good account of himself in spring practice.

Jerry—Do you really want me to come over.

Mae—Yes you must come over. I've been so lonesome since my goldfish died.

REROUTED ROADS MAGNET TO CITIES

"If the mountain won't come to Mahomet, Mahomet will go to the mountain.' runs the historical saying of ages ago.

And so it is today. If improved highways do not run to the towns, the towns move to the highways. It has been true for ages. The settlements in the pioneer days were located on the wagon trails or along the rivers. In later years, the towns moved to the railroads.

Instance after instance of this may be seen in Michigan, where trunk line highways have been located with a purpose of avoiding the heavily populated sections of towns. As a result new business districts are springing up along the trunk line route.

North of Muskegon at various places on U. S. No. thirty-one, this principle of business seeking the most crowded ways of life is more and more evident. At Whitehall, where the trunk line passes directly through the village, the town is prosperous, while over the river at Montague it is different. The trunk line turns a block this side of the business district and as a result of a new business district is springing up along the main road.

Rothbury, too, lost out with the location of the trunk line, but has started to move to the highway. Shelby is another town which is moving to the highway. The same is true on all the trunk lines of Michigan. New stores and business blocks are being erected along the trunk lines, where they fail to traverse through the business districts.

Of course, it is impossible for the larger cities to change their location to meet highways yet even in the larger cities business booms usually follow the route of the trunk line. People today go out where they can obtain the business even if it means the relocation of a town.

1st LAND TRANSACTION IN ST. CLAIR UNEARTHED

A copy of the first land transaction in what is now St. Clair county is in the possession of W. L. Jenks of Port Huron, historian who has just returned from a European visit. Jenks obtained a photographic copy of the deed involving four hundred acres of land on which the city of St. Clair is now located. It was transferred by an Indian to Patrick St. Clair for whom the river and county are named.

OPEN CANAL WHEN RIVER IS PROVEN POLLUTED

Five teams of horses and a crew of men were engaged in opening the mouth of the Black river drainage canal following a demonstration at Port Huron by a member of the state conservation commission which disclosed that Black river is polluted to an alarming extent..

In the exhibition a number of fish were lowered into the waters of Black river and all died within eleven minutes.

FERTILIZER SALES ARE SEEN LIGHTEST IN YEARS

Fertilizer sales have been the lightest in years in August and the first half of September, because of the drought.

Recent rains tended to stimulate business in commercial plant food for use on fall seedings of wheat and rye, but some sections of the state received little or no mositure and fertilizers are not moving. Farmers delayed their fertiizer purchases until the drought was broken.

Very little fertilizer was used with new seedings of alfalfa this summer on account of the drought. The acreage planted to alfalfa in August was the lightest on record, just as the acreage planted last spring was the heaviest on record.

BORER'S GAINS HEAVIEST HERE

A picture of the gains made by the European corn borer in Michigan this year is given in the announcement by Governmet officials, of the counties and township in which the borer has been found for the first time and of the number of borers for each one hundred stalks of corn in the various townships already infested.

The borer was discovered for the first time in seven counties--Barry Eaton, Clinton, Midland, Arenac, Iosco and Alpena. New townships have been occupied also in St. Joseph. Kalamazoo and Ingham Counties.

Scouting work is not completed yet and the officials declare they would not be surprised if it still is found farther north and west.

Not only has the borer taken over considerable new territory; it also has multiplied alarmingly in the districts where it has gained a foothold in past seasons. There now are thirty-three and fifty-six hundredths borers in every one hundred stalks, as compared with ten and seventy-three one hundred ths in nineteen twenty-six and one and five tenths in nineteen twentyty-five.

The heaviest borer population was found along the St. Clair and Detroit Rivers, indicating the increase in number in this state is due directly to Canadian sources. Port Huron township, St. Clair County, has the unenviable distinc tion of harboring the heaviest borer population in the United States, with an average of two hun dred and eighty two borers for every one hundred stalks.

The borer has not yet become sufficiently numerous in Michigan to cause much commercial damage, but unless its tendency to multiply can be checked, say the Government experts, the effects of its depredations are likely to be as serious as in Kent and Essex Countties, Ont., where most of the farmers have quit growing corn.

Speaking of crime prevention honesty is the best policy.

ENERGY, COURAGE AS SUCCESS KEY

The careers of John D. Rockefeller, Charles M. Schwab and Henry Ford belie the conception that there are any formulas for success But there are various techniques which may be classed in three general groups, and in the business world these three are the outstand ing masters of these techniques, asserts William Slavens McNutt in the Shrine Magazine.

Picture Rockefeller the apostle of mathematics. Cold, cautious relentless. Figuring saved pennies and accured interest therefrom in his early youth. Saving a nickel here, a dime there. Living short of his means no matter how small the means were. Driving petty bargains ere he was able to drive big ones.

Working four months as a bookkeeper for fifty dollars and saving something from it. Well into business in his early twenties. Marked with success from his childhood.

The world is full of determined tightwads who started making use of the Rockefeller method and end up in their old age in full possession of a peanut stand on a side street with a mortgage attached to it.

The son of a livery stable keeper in a small Pennsylvania mountain town. Driving a mail and passeng er stage in his early youth. A stocky smiling, cornfed kid with a ready tongue for a joke. Likable. Just a fellow driving a stage. That was all. One day Schwab asked for a job in the steel works.

The captain gave him a job driv ing stakes and dragging chains. In six months he was assistant engine er of the plant. In three years head of the engineering corps at a salary of two hundred and fifty dollars a month. Seven years after he began as an untrained boy he became manager of the Homstead steel plant. Then president of the Carnegie works. A little later J. P. Morgan made him president of the United States Steel Corporation.

He was thirty-five then. Two years later he resigned. There are many stories and reasons why,. Schwab loved all the good things of life. He was fond of gambling. The papers made much of his spectacular play at Monte Carlo. The story persists that Morgan objected to this and that Schwab resigned.

He was then many times a million aire. He lived high and spent free ly and got pinched in the market. His fortune came tumbling around the Bethlehem works. The rest is his ears. Schwab laughed at the ticker telling of his ruin.

"They can take my money away from me," he said "but they can't take away what I know about steel.

He went back to steel making in the Bethlehem works. The rest is history. A gambler always. An exultant, eager gambler. He gambled with money and he gambled with men.

Then Ford. The richest man in the world today. The artist in business. Doing unique things for the sake of getting them done according to his own ideas. Nothing in common with either Rockefeller or Schwab.

He was a Michigan farm boy. Then a mechanic in a Detroit machine shop. His father tried to get him to return to the farm. Ford did not listen.

His father became ill and he went back to the farm to take charge. Marriage. Forty acres and a home of his own. More farming. Occasionally fiddling about with the construction of a gas engine.

His method can be analyzed. It is the method of the artist. He does for the doing. His success, however, is as much of a mystery as the genius of Bernhardt and as impossible to emulate by rule.

I have yet to meet a successful person who lacks either courage or energy. Apparently those two qualities and those two alone are the common character possessions of all who make the grade.

CONCRETE BRIDGE NEAR MEMPHIS NEARLY READY

The work of building the new concrete bridge on the main road from Memphis to Richmond, will be completed in about two months it is said by the contractors. The bridge will span a gully south of Memphis. The cost of about ten thousand dollars will be borne by the state.

SUMMER 'DRY' CAPITAL EXPECTED TO BE MOVED

The recent deaths of Mr. and Mrs Wayne B. Wheeler probably will result in the passing of "Drydock", the summer prohibition capital at Little Point Sable on Lake Michigan.

The resort near Shelby had become the dry headquarters during the Summer, Mr. Wheeler, general counsel and directing head of the Anti Saloon League of America, had his summer home there. F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the League also lived at Little Point Sable in Summer.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious. Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning; it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physician recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtless drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them. Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

The Michigan Business Farmer

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

A Study In Futures-What Pays?

The Hon. Wayne B. Wheeler
J. R. T. Lathrop

We may be too near a mountain to see its bigness. Size and importance are often matters of perspective. Parents, any parents, may be sheltering some inglorious Milton. The unfolding of Child-life is as startling as it is mysterious and often at the fireside sits a youth whose future days may add luster to the home. Who knows?

Wayne B. Wheeler moves no more amid the clash of time and hears no longer the rumbling and grumbling of besotted politicians and reads no longer the criticisms of some diminutive reporter in the morning journal. No. He was among those who had won a right to the Tree of Life and has entered in through the gates into the city. His life is a romance of conquest. Poor as was Lincoln. Ambitious for an education and willing to work as janitor to get thru' college. Within he felt the stirrings of a great purpose and to that he gave attention. Honest, frugal, earnest, self contained, modest, determined. A boy of parts and purpose. Like many another he aspired to the noble profession of law—to be a lawyer—that was his goal. Could anything be better, well thought out and wrought out?

Boys little realize or girls either for that matter who is watching them. A great man got his eye on Wheeler while in college. No less a man than Dr. Howard Hyde Russell, the apostle who under God created the Anti-Saloon League. It was thirty four years ago. As the story goes it was in the janitor's quarters in the tower of Oberlin college, Oberlin, Ohio, where Russell laid upon Wheeler's mind and heart the wisdom and call for him to devote his life to the Temperance Reform movement. More things have been wrought by prayer than the sword, and Russell suggested prayer and at the close of prayer Wheeler said he would do it. He did. He never swerved, but went breast forward. He was ever a fighter. He knew no defeat. His life work is a wonderful story. He became one of the greatest constitutional lawyers in the history of the Republic. He knew, Senators, Presidents, the great of many walks of life consulted him. He dictated to politicians. They called him "the Czar," He never was off his guard. The writer heard his last address at Winona Lake, Ind. at the World League Against Alcoholism. It was a lucid, compact declaration of the legal attitude which should be maintained thruout the nation. Here was a man feared by the wets, revered by the drys. Comprehensive in his grasp of the law, sure of his ground, courageous, alert, compelling, he stood four square to the Constitution. His going marks an epoch. The cause will march forward under the impetus of his direction. His enemies knew he played the game with integrity. He could not be purchased. His name became a household word from coast to coast A patriot of the patriots, he both understood and loved his country. Small of stature, big of brain, strong of heart, certain of victory, he fought with a will and a pluck conscious of the rightness of his cause.

Wayne B. Wheeler puts every boy of the street at a premium. He lays a tribute on every home. His name spells Hope, Courage, Honor. He had the strength of ten because he had an unsullied life. Christian he was; strong, human, earnestly chivalrous, he waves the white emblem of purity to every father and mother to give more generously of their time and wisdom to their children. Wayne B. Wheeler had a goal. He kept his eye on it. He moved toward it. He won and through him the nation won. No braver man has lived. The liquor traffic was the most deadly of all foes. To us who are left he has flung the torch!

The greatest business of the nation is to train for citizenship its youth. The greatest business of the church is to make Christians of its youth. To that end schools and colleges and millions of money and vast energies are furnished. It's the part of youth to respond. To take hold of opportunity and to be lured on by some high goals. It is the task of the home to make real the foundational moralities upon which youth can build. Does it pay? Not anything else pays. The old fashioned moralties without jazz—seeking no thrills but the zest of achievement. High thinking, plain living, forward going, honest and hard work to excel, the fear of God and the love of man. That will produce Christian citizens as sure as water runs down hill or fire burns, or the sun shines.—The Michigan Christian Advocate.

The case of Lee Thompson of Wheatland Twp. was continued, After hearing a number of character witnesses for Thompson, the Court set Monday Oct. 24 and the day on which the case would be disposed of.

Victor Fish, Abe Cramer and Lee Kelley were escorted to Ionia on Monday, these gentlemen all pleaded guilty before Judge Chester of violation of the Liquor law.

The Ford car, stolen from Jonesville during the week was recovered in Clinton on Thursday. The thief is lodged in the Adrian Jail. Three other counties are watching the outcome of his case.

Prisoners in the County Jail 13. Under sentence 10. Awaiting trial 3. Total 13.

Chicago Stock Show To Climax Season

Improved agricultural conditions which have made this a record year for the local and state fairs, are expected to result in a great outpouring of stockmen and farmers and the products of their skill at the 28th anniversary celebration of the International Live Stock Exposition in Chicago from Nov. 26 to Dec. 3rd. The spirit of the Thanksgiving season, aroused by the wonderful display of the bounties of nature, will be the keynote of this gathering, according to Secretary-Manager B. H. Heide.

Over 11,000 of the finest beef cattle, horses, sheep and swine and crops and 5,000 of the choicest samples of 22 crops of grain, small seeds and hay will take part in a thousand different contests for the highest honors of our basic industry. These annuals will include the outstanding individuals of over 40 breeds of livestock which have proven the sensation of the recent fair circuits of the United States and Canada and others which are being fitted solely for the show ring of the International.

Walter Bigg[illegible] of Dalbeattie, Scotland, is coming across the Atlantic to judge the individual fat bullocks and select the grand champion of the show while Lieutenant [illegible] of Australia will make the official awards in the Red Polled breeding classes. Canada, as usual, will send strong entries to compete in many of the contests and this year New South Wales will be represented for the first time in the Grain and Hay show. Practically every state in the Union will take part in the various activities of the Exposition.

Attractive educational displays covering a wide range of timely subjects will be staged by the United States Department of Agriculture and the state experiment stations. Inspection of the exhibits in Meat Shoppe, National Boys' and Girls' Club Congress, individual and carload show and attendance at the numerous contests, student judging competitions and auctions will fill each day's crowded program which will be brought to a fitting close by a brilliant night show and entertainment in the arena.

Reduced railroad fares will be in effect on all railroads entering Chicago and over 40 national farm organizations will take this opportunity to hold their meetings in connection with the International. Chicago, the agricultural capitol of the world, will be the mecca of the livestock and farming industries the week following Thanksgiving.

World's Biggest Boys' Band, Ashland's Claim

The biggest boys' band in the world is claimed by Ashland, Wis., according to the Conn Music Center. Two hundred and sixty-four youngsters, ranging in age from six to sixteen years, make up this juvenile band.

The Ashland boys' band was formed in December of 1924 out of boys who knew nothing of musical instruments, but when the band made its first public appearance on Memorial Day, 1925, it made a decidedly favorable impression. Since then the boys' band has taken in many school, patriotic and civic events. The band has also unearthed some real musical talent.

The coming of the band to Ashland has just about solved the juvenile delinquency problem, says Lew Anderson, chairman of the Ashland band committee. There is no need for a juvenile court and delinquency on the part of the young musicians is rare. It keeps the boys engaged in wholesome activity and out of mischief and serves as a healthy outlet for their surplus energy.

BETTER FARMING AT LOWER COSTS

By DAN H. OTIS

Director Agricultural Commission, American Bankers Association

PRODUCTIVITY of labor in several industries shows a remarkable increase in output per man since 1914. In the iron and steel industry there has been an increase of 59 per cent; boots and shoes, 6 per cent; leather tanning, 26 per cent; slaughtering and meat packing, 27 per cent; petroleum refining, 83 per cent; paper and pulp, 34 per cent; cement, 61 per cent; automobiles, 172 per cent; rubber tires, 211 per cent. These lowering costs of production have made it possible for industry to face the hazards of over-production.

D.H. OTIS

Industry has laboratories that are lowering production costs. In the agricultural colleges the farmers have their laboratories—experiment stations that are constantly working on problems affecting farmers' interests, and in them many methods have been worked out by which it is possible to increase materially the yield, reduce the cost of production and follow the same business principles that have been followed by industry.

Farm costs may be reduced through improved live stock. If there were only pure-bred live stock on the farms and ranges, we could get along with millions less animals, and that would release millions of acres for other purposes.

The accompanying table shows what each of seven items of live stock is producing; what each of these items could be made to produce by improved methods, and finally what the saving would be in each class. It gives a total national saving of over two billion dollars.

United States Livestock Production

Kind	Number	Production	Per Head	Possible by Improved Methods			Cost per Head	Total Saving

Dairy cows	22,290,000	9,198,863,685 gal. 79,105,411,261 lbs.	412 gal. 3540 lbs.	706 gal. 6077 lbs.	13,017,181	9,272,810	90.00	$834,553,729

Total $2,389,729,792

From this table it will be noticed that, if we could obtain a reasonable average production per head, then the number of milch cows could be reduced from 22,000,000 to 13,000,000, or a reduction of 9,000,000, and still maintain the present supply of dairy products. This would involve increasing the production per cow from 3,549 pounds of milk to 6,077 pounds, an increase easily possible through good selection, breeding and feeding.

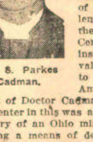
Beef animals vary in age all the way from one to three years. The present number of animals slaughtered and inspected would be sufficient under improved methods to produce the present amount of beef, and feed the animals only one year. Taking the amount of food that could be reasonably obtained from a two-year old we find that it would be possible to keep up the present supply of beef and cut down on the number of animals slaughtered by 3,684,000. This would mean great savings in feed.

In a similar manner our present supply of slaughtered and inspected mutton and lamb could be supplied with 2,661,000 less animals, and it is possible to furnish our present supply of wool and reduce the number of sheep by over 7,000,000.

Our pork products are now produced from swine that average 186 pounds dressed weight. Under improved methods we ought to get pigs that would produce 150 pounds dressed weight at 6 months or 225 pounds at 9 months. At the latter age it would be possible to maintain the present supply of slaughtered and inspected pork and cut down nearly 17,000,000 on the number of hogs to produce it. Similar analyses apply to the other items listed in the table.

DR. CADMAN PRESCRIBES BAND TO RID TOWN OF BOY PROBLEM

Forming the "youthful scapegraces" of a community into a band as a means of ridding the town of "nightly pests" is the advice of Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, eminent New York divine, and this solution of the boy problem is cited by the Conn Music Center as another instance of the value of the band to the youth of America. The interest of Doctor Cadman and the Music Center in this was aroused through a query of an Ohio minister who was seeking a means of dealing with the unruly element of his community.



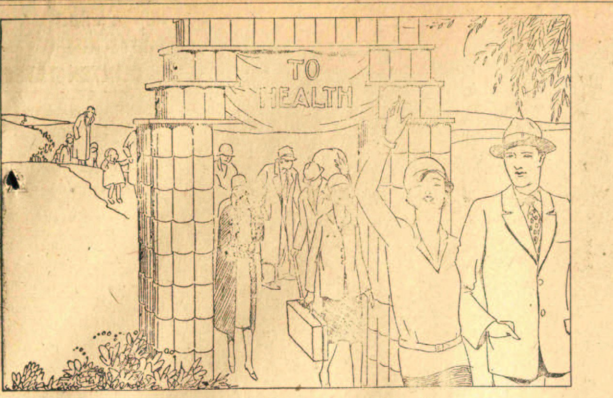
Dr. S. Parkes Cadman.

The minister from Ohio had asked: "We have forty or fifty youths ranging from sixteen to the twenties in our town who are its pests. What can I do as a pastor to help them behave decently?"

And this was Doctor Cadman's reply: "Since they are getting beyond the age for Boy Scouts, why not start a band for them?" . . . Our numerous high school orchestras and town bands represent a fine educational move in the same direction. 'Music hath charms to soothe the savage breast.' Try it on these youthful scapegraces in your locality. I predict that 90 per cent of them will respond. Get the citizens to subscribe for instruments and an instructor. . . . Promise the boys handsome uniforms when they are capable of playing 'The Stars and Stripes Forever.' Then look out for results." Doctor Cadman's statement is in line with the slogan recently adopted by the music industry that "The boy who blows a horn will not blow a safe."

This viewpoint is still further accentuated in a book on "Music As an Educational and Social Asset," by Dr. Edwin N. C. Barnes, director of musical education in the public schools of Washington, D. C., and a nationally known authority on music. This book, just published by the Theodore Presser Company of Philadelphia contains the following remarkable statement from Henry T. Finck's "Golden Age of Music":

"Positive proof that music is the best mind trainer has come from Magdalen College, where all the musical instruction at Oxford University is given. There are many prizes and scholarships. Only 10 per cent of the students at Magdalen take music; yet this 10 per cent take 75 per cent of all those prizes and scholarships, leaving only 25 per cent for the other 90 per cent of students. This is not a record of one year, but the average of thirty successive years."



Tomatoes Versus Pellagra

AMONG the sufferings following in the wake of the flood waters of the Mississippi were an alarming number of pellagra cases. Red Cross workers, in co-operation with state and public health authorities, exerted every effort to end the epidemic and to prevent a recurrence of the disease. It is interesting fact, made authentic by no less an authority than Dr. Joseph Goldberger, nationally known pellagra expert, in charge of the hygienic laboratory of the United States Health Service, that tomatoes, either fresh or canned, are the most valuable of all foods for preventing and counteracting this disease

Dr. Goldberger, whose studies of pellagra and its prevention have given us the greater share of our knowledge of it, with Dr. G. A. Wheeler, another surgeon in the public health service, recently reported upon a demonstration of the prevention of pellagra by appropriate foods, which has been carried on for ten years in the Georgia state sanitarium. Dr. Goldberger says: "Pellagra is due to a special form of deficiency in diet. To cure a patient it is necessary that he eat enough of the right foods to correct this deficiency. And to prevent a recurrence it is essential that he continue to eat sufficient quantities of these foods. Liberal use of tomatoes, fresh or canned, will prevent pellagra." One quart of the juice of canned tomatoes daily, Dr. Goldberger asserts, is sufficient to counteract the especial deficiency of diet responsible for the disease.

Tomatoes a Cure

Pellagra is not always readily diagnosed. It has borderlines of indistinctness, and the direct cause of it is not actually known. Characteristic manifestations of the disease are disturbances of digestion, discomfort after eating, depression, belching, etc., burning sensation of the mouth, nervousness, irritability, disturbed sleep, breaking out of skin, and in exceptional cases, mental disturbances. Foods found to be common in the diet of pellagra victims are corn meal, red beans, fat salt pork, white flour bread, syrup, sugar and black coffee. "Add Irish potatoes," says Dr. Goldberger, "and you may get off with a case of scurvy. But add enough tomato juice, and pellagra will be prevented entirely."

Dr. Elwood Hendrick, eminent scientist, writing in Harper's Magazine, says, "Owing to the acid nature of tomatoes, the canned product is also rich in Vitamin C, and this makes canned tomatoes one of the most useful food accessories known to man. It maintains the health of sailors on long voyages, or armies in the field, and of children fed on pasteurized milk. Canned tomatoes are the great and convenient enemy of scurvy."

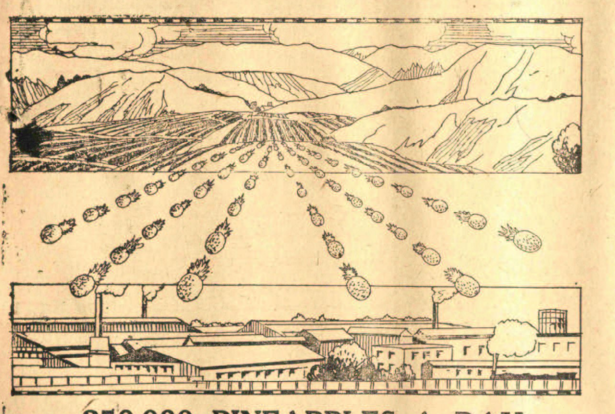
How fortunate for the public at large are the findings of these eminent men can be realized when you think how available canned tomatoes are at all seasons of the year. From vines to cans, so to speak, go the finest tomato crops grown, retaining all the rich vitamin properties of curative and preventive value, and obtainable everywhere at low cost.

Some Simple Recipes

Tomatoes, besides being easy to obtain and inexpensive to buy, offer a great variety of dishes, as palatable as they are rich in tonic value. From the humble accessory to the meal, known as stewed tomatoes, have been evolved many recipes, any one of which will prove a welcome addition to the most carefully planned menu. Scalloped tomatoes are delicious and easy to prepare. Remove contents from one can tomatoes and drain off part of the juice. Season tomatoes with salt and pepper and a few drops onion juice. Cover the bottom of buttered baking dish with buttered bread crumbs. Cover with tomatoes and sprinkle top thickly with buttered crumbs. Bake in hot oven till crumbs are brown.

Tomatoes and mushrooms are a favorite with many, simple to prepare and dainty to serve. Place contents one can tomatoes in saucepan with two tablespoons butter. Bring to boil and add contents one small can mushrooms, chopped. Add one-half teaspoon chopped parsley, pepper and salt to taste. Boil twenty minutes, stirring constantly. Serve on toast.

To obtain tomato purée, simmer one can tomatoes, reduced one-half, then force through strainer, and again let simmer until reduced to one cup.



250,000 PINEAPPLES A DAY

THATS the number of ripe pineapples that travel down from the foothills daily, during midsummer, to keep the biggest fruit cannery in the world running full tilt. This is the cannery of the Hawaiian Pineapple Company located in Honolulu, the principal city of the Hawaiian Islands. Pickers, men and women, pass down the mile-long rows in the uplands, and break the pineapples off. They are carried to the ends of the rows in bags, and there workers cut off their spiky tops, and pack them into field crates, according to size, because each diameter of pineapple fits a certain diameter of can.

These pineapples are shipped to the United States, and nobody in Hawaii, where they came from, gets finer fruit than that put in the cans. Even in the public markets of Honolulu the fresh pineapples are seldom as good, because they often wait two or three days for a purchaser, while the canned pineapples are put up on the day they ripen. The pineapple cannery people know this, and often buy the canned fruit in preference to the fresh, right in Hawaii where it grows.

Many Ways to Use Pineapple

There are so many ways to use this popular, sun-ripened fruit it is hard to select from so many outstanding recipes. But, in addition to eating the pineapple or drinking the juice just as it comes from the can previously chilled in the ice-box, here are a few ways in which to serve it.

Pineapple Marguerite: Bring one and one-half cups of sugar and one-half cup of water and the juice of one lemon to a boil and add one can of crushed Hawaiian pineapple. Cool and freeze. Serve in sherbet glasses with whipped cream on top. Fresh sponge cake makes a delectable accompaniment for this.

Pineapple Mousse: Whip one pint of cream and one-half cup sugar until they are very stiff. Add half a cup of pineapple juice. Put in a mold. Pack the mold in the ice-cream freezer with ice and salt for three hours or until it freezes. Turn the mousse out of the mold and sprinkle chopped English walnuts over the top just before serving.

Brown Cream Mold: Put one quart of milk in a double boiler. When hot add two cups of brown sugar. Mix four tablespoons cornstarch with a little milk and add. Stir until it thickens. Cook for half an hour. Take from fire and add one teaspoon of vanilla flavoring and half a cup of chopped walnuts. Put in a mold and chill. For a sauce use chilled crushed pineapple.

Some Hot Pineapple Dishes

Pineapple Turnovers: Drain a can of sliced Hawaiian pineapple. Roll out rich pastry and cut in sheets three by six inches and lay on a baking tin. Lay a slice of pineapple on one end of the pastry, fill center with strawberry or other preferred jam. Wet edges of pastry, bring together over the pineapple, press firmly together, trimming away extra pastry. Bake in hot oven until pastry begins to brown, then reduce heat and finish baking.

Ham and Egg Special: With the old-fashioned but ever popular ham and eggs, fry rings of sliced canned pineapple. The ham, eggs and pineapple not only look well together but taste good too.

Desserts and a Salad

Pineapple Souffle: Melt two tablespoons shortening, add four tablespoons flour and stir till smooth. Add one-quarter teaspoon salt, one-third cup sugar, one cup milk, and bring to a boil, stirring constantly. Pour sauce over beaten egg yolks and mix well. Add one can crushed pineapple. Fold in stiffly beaten whites. Pour into a greased baking-dish, set in pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven.

Date Goodies: Stuff pitted dates with pieces of sliced pineapple and roll in ground walnuts or powdered sugar.

Pineapple Marvel: Soak two and a half tablespoons gelatine in one-quarter cup cold water for ten minutes. Add one cup boiling water, one cup sugar, and two tablespoons lemon juice and stir till all is dissolved. Add one and a half cups crushed Hawaiian pineapple and juice. When mixture begins to thicken, beat till frothy. Pile lightly into sherbet glasses. Serve with crushed strawberries or whipped cream or both.

Olives with Pineapple: A salad green and pale gold in color, is cool-looking on a hot day. Such a one is this combination: Crisp lettuce leaves as a foundation, then a slice of canned pineapple, then a row of asparagus tips, and lastly sliced olives stuffed with pimiento. Serve with mayonnaise.

Pineapple Pastry: Some cooks introduce various flavorings into their pie crusts with excellent effect. Fruit pies with sweetened crusts flavored with lemon, spices, or the fruit that is in the pie are much more delicious than when made with plain crusts. For a pineapple filling use this crust: Sift together two level teaspoons baking-powder, three level cups flour, one level teaspoon salt, and cut into it with a knife one-quarter cup each of lard and butter. Rub lightly into it with the fingers three level tablespoons sugar, one well-beaten egg, and half a cup of pineapple juice. This makes enough for two large covered pies.

Michigan Club Witters

The Michigan team that judged dairy cattle won sixth place in competition with 27 other states. The Wolverine team in dairy demonstration work stood third in a class of 19 states.

Cyril Spike, Ypsilanti; Emil Kober, Conklin; and Max Ross of Ypsilanti were the members of the dairy judging team. The boys who demonstrated 'the proper way to fit cattle for the show ring were Kenneth Kline, Casnovia; and Norman Holben, Kent City.

In addition to the team prizes Cyril Spike placed second in the individual judging of Guernseys; and Emil Kober ranked sixth in selecting the best show types in the Jersey ring.

These Michigan boys won the right to represent their State in the national contests by defeating all entrants in elimination contests conducted at the Michigan State Fair, under the supervision of the M. S. C. boys and girls club department.

Many Wells Unsafe Shown By Analyses

That the water supply in many Michigan rural communities is contaminated, is shown by analyses made at the State laboratories in Lansing.

The water samples were submitted for analysis by farmers from six counties that were visited by specialists from the agricultural engineering and home economics departments of M S. C. These specialists urged that farmers take advantage of modern means of disposing of household sewage.

In one Michigan county, the samples of water analyzed showed that 64.5 percent of the wells tested were contaminated. In another county, only 19.1 of the wells showed contamination.

Members of the agricultural engineering department believe that the deeper wells furnish a safer supply of drinking water. The analyses made show that the largest percent of unsafe wells were in counties that are low and in which there are many shallow wells.

Reports made by county agricultural agents show that farmers are installing many septic tanks, which furnish an inexpensive and safe way of sewage disposal.

Judge Walter H. North of Battle Creek has been appointed by Governor Green as Justice of the Supreme Court of Michigan to replace Judge Snow deceased. This appointment will come as a surprise to some of our citizens but it will be remembered that Judge North has been on the District Bench of Calhoun County for several years and he is one of the oldest men of the state besides having been a particular friend of Governor Green's in College. Walter is a former Moscow Township lad who grew up in our midst, attended Knowles school, graduated from North Adams High school, Hillsdale College, and U. of M. in a law course. Practically all of us know about him and a few of us are familiar with his career during the past 30 years. This high office probably comes as a reward for faithful obliging service and a keen insight into the workings of Justice courts and civil law. Walter while old in service is still comparatively young in years, and it looks as if his progress in high offices had just begun. We see no reason why they cannot go on furthur up. We understand Detroit was hopeful of placing a man for this office but failed to make the goal which is another indication that Gov. Green does not believe city municipalities should have their say entirely in the trying of important cases such as find their way into high courts. It might be further said that Judge North represents the great mass of common law abiders, the rank and file of country citizens who want law and order to be uppermost which is not always the case in the courts.

New York Central Will Tour Michigan

Following its usual custom the New York Central Railroad system will put on its regular Potato Special train which will make its appearance successively in Jackson, Calhoun, Kalamazoo, Allegan, VanBuren, Berrian, Cass, St. Joseph, Branch and Hillsdale counties for one day stops in the principal cities. Last spring this train preached the gospel of good seed as it progressed and left something like 3,000 bushels of certified seed potatoes in its wake for planters to start their crops. It is claimed over $1,000 is up for premiums alone made possible by the State Department of Agriculture at Lansing, divided into $100 sums for each county. Varieties especially concerned are Russets, Rurals, Irish Cobbler, White Rurals, Green Mountain, and contests will be provided in various counties.

Potato grading and marketing will be especially dwelt upon and a potato specialist will accompany the train to explain to the growers the science and theory of producing better tubers, grading, marketing, shipping. Not only the producers but the town people who consume the crop are also invited to take in this show and post themselves up on potato points. The housewife will be especially welcomed on this train and there will be exhibits and talks calculated to help home economics and buying of tubers for the table. Most of this is put out by M. S. Agricultural Department in connection with the Railroad Company. The dates of the trip will be December 5th to 15th 1927. More definite announcements are going to be made later. Here is an opportunity for the men engaged in raising Michigan's brag crop to learn much for their own benefit as well as to inspect the best certified seed it is possible to obtain and we believe Hillsdale County's potato growers wont be far behind in using this means of improving their knowledge of spud culture.

Detroit Has A Wet Mayor

Down at the metropolis of the state there is a constant warfare between "wet" and "dry" factions and to the average city dweller who has never been outside the city limits it probably seems absolutely nonsensical to claim temperance has any chance in prevailing. We don't wonder that Detroit citizens at times despair of enforcing the Prohibition laws, because as they look at them they see only the soul and body of the wet element. Mayor John Smith who is rated as a sensible keen politician and a thinker is said to have stated that it was as impossible to enforce the dry law as for a camel to pass through a needle's eye, and no doubt he had good reasons for making this remark. Possibly these were not his exact words, but he insinuated something of the kind. Whole wards of the City of Detroit probably are as wet as in the antobelium saloon days, simply because the whole mass of population are almost entirely composed of ignorant foreigners, aliens—low castes or criminals whose principal aim in life always has been and always will be violation of all law including the prohibition amendment. For a city man who has been reared and graduated from such surroundings to make this assertion is not particularly alarming. Mayor Smith may sympathize with the wet class, but the chances are he does not. He probably is giving his honest opinion of conditions as he sees them, therefore it is not entirely proper to condemn the Mayor. If he should come down into Hillsdale County we could show him one real sure enough Sheriff who has proven to anybody's satisfaction that the right man gets the wet bunch and gets them hard just as often as they show their heads. Of course one lone Sheriff marooned in a group of counties supplied with officers who are indifferent or openly neglectful, is up against a hard proposition and a trying one, but we hardly believe all the investigations in Christendom and all the insults it is possible to put upon his shoulders will make it appear he is crooked or doing anything contrary to the laws of Michigan although he may be assailed by a hundred automobile clubs whose shiny sides may have been scratched by his authority. How the conscientious temperance people of this county can stand by and see these gross injustices heaped upon our Sheriff is more than we can comprehend. We won't say church people because the word "church" at present has no bearing on the subject. We verily believe there are a certain proportion of church members here as in other counties who object to enforcing the 10th amendment. A few of them honestly admit they are whisky men and a few others dare not declare themselves but actions speak louder than words.

As stated in our columns some time ago the only objectors to the Sheriff who pulls off his coat and goes to work are men who are in some way caught in the dragnet. We know nothing of the by-laws or the principles of the Detroit Automobile Club but chances are their members are engaged either indirectly or directly in violating the laws of Michigan, otherwise they could have no hard feelings for a Sheriff who was trying his level best to make the public highways of his county safe and sane.

OWOSSO MAN BEST SHOT IN U. S. GUARD

The best rifle shot in the National Guard of the United States and her possessions is Sergt. Richard D. Boerem, twenty-two years old Co. G. one hundred twenty-fifth infantry of Owosso.

Sergt. Boerem earned his title by finishing twelfth in the national individual match at Camp Perry Ohio., during the recent national shoot. He was shooting against regular marines, the Navy team, and the team of the Citizens Military Training Camps of the United States. He finished higher than any other National Guardsman.

Sergt. Boerem's score was two hundred eighty-seven out of a possible three hundred. More than four thousand marksmen competed The Navy team of ten men hung up a record of eight hundred and ninety-one out of a possible nine hundred to one thousand yards.

Sergt. Boerem also was the only Michigan Guardsman to land in the President's One Hundred. Those who finish in the one hundred receive a special medal to be worn on the wrist. Sergt. Boerem finished thirty-fifth in this match.

Sergt. Boerem has been shooting ever since he was old enough to hold a gun. His mother tells that he used to sit on the back porch when he was just a child, shooting flies with an air gun. Probably the biggest disappointment of his life, was when after he had saved enough money to buy a rifle, and took it home, his father made him take it back because he didn't believe he was old enough to have a real gun.

UPPER PENINSULA IN DOUBT ON BEST ROUTE FOR HIGHWAY M-94

Controversy over a definite location for M ninety-four which connects U. S. No. two paralleling the southern shore of Lake Michigan, with M-twenty-eight which pierces the Lake Superior country, is still engrossing the attention of upper peninsula residents. Sentiment over a re-location of the highway is divided, Delta county being the only contingent solidly backing the re-routing of the trunk line Alger, Schoofcraft, the other interested countics are still undecided.

Gordon Wolfe, of Cooks in Schoolcraft county, is sponsoring a movement to have M-ninety four altered from its present route between the city of Manistique and the village of Shingleton, to a proposed route running from Wetmore on M twenty-eight to a point four miles west of Cooks on U. S. No. two.

DECIPHERS RARE BIBLE MANUSCRIPT

Greek manuscript copied not later than the middle of the Twelth Century by a Byzantine scholar and perfectly legible is being deciphered by Dr. Herman H. Severn of Kalamazoo College by whom it will be edited for publication. It is at least eight hundred years old and possibly older. It is the first time the manuscript has been revealed to the public. It is one of the oldest in existence.

It is a copy of the four gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. The pages are of goatskin, bearing their text in a permanent brown ink that has survived eight hundred years of handling.

This history of the manuscript is an interesting one. Prof. Long discovered it in the ruins of what probably was an old library, in Constantinople forty-two years ago. It was inspected by the famous scholar, Dr. Caspar Rene Gregory, who at once pronounced it genuine and a rare relic of the Middle Ages The book was purchased by Caroline S. Reid in eighteen eighty-six and presented to the University of Syracuse, where it reposed neglected until it attracted the attention of the Greek scholar. Dr. Severn hopes it may prove an important source of information concerning the text of original gospels

The work of translating the book has been completed by Dr. Severn that is, with the exception of one page, which apparently was written in a language at present unknown. Dr. Severn has submitted it to a number of the best einguists in the United States, but none has been able to decipher it. The great Gregory believed the page was written in what he called Church Slovenic. Its characters are Russian, but Russian scholars have attempted to decipher it without success.

The pages are stained with grease marks, the drippings of tallow which fell upon it as patient readers pored over its text in bygone centuries.

SECOND BADGER SEEN IN BERRIEN IN 6 YEARS SLAIN

The second badger to make its appearance in Berrien county in six years and the first to be killed by dogs is dead after having waged a losing fight with three collie dogs belonging to William P Cauffman a farmer residing five miles from Buchanan.

About nineteen twenty a badger the last one seen in this vicinity, was killed near the Indiana state line. This animal was victorious in its battle with dogs and had to be shot after it had killed several.

The Cauffman dogs-- Bud, Queen and Belle—seem proud of their achievement and have adopted a swagger of accomplishment. They are exhibiting many scars of the terrific battle which lasted an hour.

The badger a five months old female, weighs twenty pounds and is thirty inches in length. Its claws are over two inches long. It was passing in the road in front of the Cauffman home when attacked by the dogs.

In the life of the usual bandit, it is a short stretch from the pay-roll to the parole.

U. OF M'S SPECIAL COP ENFORCES BAN ON STUDENT AUTOS

The University of Michigan has its own private mortorcycle patrolman to run down and bring to the bar of academic justice all violators of the university's automobile ban.

He is Kenneth Withrow and already has become a prominent figure on the streets.

Let a snappy roadster with a collegiate-looking person at the wheel flash down State street and, unless the vehicle bears the aluminum disk signfying exemption from the auto ban, Withrow is up and at 'em.

Only two hundred of the two thousand students who once drove automobiles have been able to convince university authorities that their need for driving is pressing. It is Withrow's job to see that the disappointed eighteen hundred do not circumvent the university law. He is armed with the badge, uniform and prerogatives of a member of the Michigan State Police. He is on the university payrole as a member of its administrative staff.

CLOVER SEED CROP PROJECTS GOOD

Weather conditions permitting Michigan farmers have prospects of harvesting a large crop of clover seed this fall. The bloom in the second growth of red clover was exceptionally heavy and the set of seed was equally as large.

Conditions in midsummer were ideal for clover seed. The drought caused a heavy bloom and there were no rains to interfere with the bumble bees in their pollination work.

For some reason, however conditions were not equally as favorable for the production of alfalfa seed. The seed pods stripped from the plant and a light crop is in prospect.

Reports from other states indicate the production of clover seed was light, while the alfalfa yields have been light, clover seed will be cheaper next spring and alfalfa seed higher than last spring, it is expected, and this difference in price is likely to result in heavier sowing of clover and lighter planting of alfalfa than in nineteen twenty-seven.

HENRY FORD BUYS NOTED CLINTON TAVERN

There is a woman in the town of Clinton who is deeply glad and yet strangely sad.

She is glad because Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ford have purchased the old stagecoach tavern in which she has lived all her life, her dream of many years has been realized. And she is sad because she is leaving the historic building, that for her is crowded with a thousand memories.

Miss Mary Ella Smith is her name. She is a gentle woman whose thoughts are like the thoughts of lavender and lace.

The motorists passing on the new concrete Detroit -Chicago road, she tells of the time when the tavern was the stopping place for travelers on the old Detroit-Chicago turnpike nearly one hundred years ago. She recalls the gayety of earlier days. She herself becomes gay as she thinks of them. Then she falls silent, and looks caressingly at the weathered walnut timbers to which she must say farewell.

Records of the land on which the inn stands go back to eighteen twenty-three the date of the abstract given Mr. and Mrs. Ford by Miss Smith.. Just when the inn was constructed is not clear, but the date is believed to have been around eighteen thirty.

It was one of the first of the road side hotels that were built to accommodate travelers between Detroit and Chicago.

This route had been the "Great Sauk Trail" along which Indian feet of hundreds of years had padded silently on their way from the Detroit River to the southern end of Lake Michigan. With the coming of settlers from the East it had become a route for white men, too'.

So, in eighteen thirty five a survey had been authorized by Congress with a view to turning the rude Indian trail into a good turnpike road. By eighteen thirty work of construction was begun. But an "Indian scare" developed in connection with the uprising of Black Hawk, and there was a delay. Then came an epidemic of Asiatic cholera that took its toll in the lives of hundreds of Michigan settlers,. and there was more delay..

In spite of the difficulties stagecoach service along the route was begun. First there was a semi-weekly stage line running from Detroit to Ypsilanti and Tecumseh.. In eighteen thirty two it was extended to Niles, and in eighteen thirty three to Chicago.

By eighteen thirty-five there were daily stages running directly between Detroit and Chicago and the demand for passage was so great that reservations had to be made in advance.

Seats in the stage-coach became objects of speculation—one of the first instances on record of "ticket scalping". Soon there was a double daily stage. Extra wagons were frequently put on. Towns sprang up all along the route.

Traveling in eighteen thirty-five was in some respects not unlike motoring in nineteen twenty-seven, but it was far more arduous. Part of the road was corduroy and therefore rough. . Vehicles broke down The side of the road would be strewn with them. Frequently, too, the stage-coach passengers had to get out and walk. Some of the time the coach had to leave the road and follow a blazed trail thru the woods.. The pedestrian passengers would hop and jump over, or perhaps into the mud puddles, pick their way along logs and push through thick underbrush..

The inn at Clinton, then known as "The Eagle" was crowded nightly with travelers..

He also holds offices in the Masons and Knights of Pythias.

THE COUNTRY OF THE BLIND

By H. G. WELLS

For five minutes he watched the slow extension of the cordon, and then his vague disposition to do something forthwith became frantic. He stood up, went a pace or so towards the circumferential wall, turned, and went back a little way. There they all stood in a crescent, still and listening.

He also stood still, gripping his spade very tightly in both hands. Should he charge tnem.

The pulse in his ears ran into the rhythm of "In the Country of the Blind the One-Eyed Man is King."

Should he charge them.

He looked back at the high and unclimbable wall behind—unclimbable because of its smooth plastering, but withal pierced with many little doors at the approaching line of seekers. Behind the others were now coming out of the street of houses.

Should he charge them..

"Bogota" called one. "Bogota' where are you".

He gripped his spade still tighter and advanced down the meadow toward the place of habitations, and directly he moved they converged upon him. "I'll hit them if they touch me," he swore; "by Heaven, I will. . I'll hit".. He called aloud, "Look here, I'm going to do what I like in this valley.. Do you hear.. I'm going to what I like and go where I like."

They were moving in upon him quickly, grouping yet moving rapidly. It was like playing blind man's buff with everyone blindfolded except one. "Get hold of him" cried one. He found himself in the arc of a loose curve of pursuers. He felt suddenly he must be active and resolute.

"You don't understand', he cried in a voice that was meant to be great and resolute, and which broke. "You are blind and I can see. Leave me alone."

"Bogota. Put down that spade and come off the grass."

The last order, grotesque in its urban familiarity, produced a gust of anger. I'll hurt you," he said, sobbing with emotion. 'By Heaven I'll hurt you. Leave me alone."

He began to run— not knowing clearly where to run. He ran from the nearest blind man, because it was a horror to hit him. He stopped and them made a dash to escape from their closing ranks. He made for where a gap was wide and the men on either side, with a quick perception of the approach of his paces, rushed in on one another. He sprang forward, and then he saw he must be caught, and swish, the spade had struck.. He felt the soft thud of hand and arm, and the man was down with a yell of pain, and he was through.

Through. And then he was close to the street of houses again, and blind men, whirling spades and stakes, were running with areasoned swiftness hither and thither He heard steps behind him just in time, and found a tall man rushing forward and swiping at the sound of him. He lost his nerve, hurled his spade a yard wide of his antagonist, and whirled about and fled, fairly yelling as he dodged another.

He was panic stricken He ran furiously to and fro dodging when there was no need to dodge and, in his anxiety to see on every side of him at once, stumbling.. For a moment he was down and they heard him fall. Far away in the circumferential wall a little doorway looked like Heaven and he set off in a wild rush for it. He did not even look arouund at his pursuers until it was gained, and he had stumbled across the bridge, clambered a little way among the rocks, to the surprise and dismay of a young llama, who went leaping out of sight, and lay down sobbing for breath.

And so his coup d' etat came to an end.

He stayed outside the wall of the valley of the blind for two nights and two days without food or shelter, and meditated upon the unexpected. During these meditations he repeated very frequently and always with a profounder note of derision the exploded proverb; "In the County of the Blind the One-Eyed Man is King". He thot chiefly of ways of fighting and conquering these people, and it grew clear that for him no pracable way was possible. He had no weapons, and now it would be hard to get one.

The canker of civilisation had got him to even in Bogota and he could not find it in himself to go down and assassinate a blind man. Of course, if he did that, he might then dictate terms of the threat of assassinating them all. But—Sooner or later he must sleep.

He tried also to find food among the pine trees, to be comfortable under pine boughs while the frost fell at night, and—with less confidence—to catch a llama by artifice in order to try to kill it—perhaps by hammering it with a stone and so finally, perhaps, to eat some of it.. But the llamas had a doubt of him and regarded him with distrustful brown eyes and spat when he drew near. Fear came on him the second day and fits of shivering. Finally he crawled down to the wall of the Country of the Blind and tried to make his terms. He crawled along by the stream, shouting until two blind men came out to the gate and talked to him.

"I was mad," he said. "But I was only newly made."

They said that was better.

He told them he was wiser now, and repented of all he had done.

Then he wept without intention. for he was very weak and ill now, and they took that as a favourable sign.

They asked him if he still thought he could "see'.

"No", he said. "That was folly. The word means nothing. Less than nothing."

They asked him what was overhead.

'About ten times ten the height of a man there is a roof above the world —or rock— and very, very very smooth. So smooth—so beautifully smooth" He burst again into hysterical tears. "Before you ask me any more, give me some food or I shall die."

He expected dire punishment, but these blind people were capable of toleration. They regarded his rebellion as but one more proof of his general idiocy and inferiorty, and after they had whipped him they appointed him to do the simplest and heaviest work they had for anyone to do and he, seeing no other way of living, did submissively what he was told.

He was ill for some days and they nursed him kindly. That refined his submisison. But they insisted on his lying in the dark, and that was a great misery. And blind philosophers came and talked to him of the wicked levity of his mind, and reproved him so impressively for his doubts about the lid of rock that covered their cosmic casserote that he almost doubted whether indeed he was not the victim of hallucination in not seeing it overhead.

So. Nunez became a citizen of the Country of the Blind, and these people ceased to be a generalised people and became individualities to him and familiar to him, while the world beyond the mountains became more and more remote and unreal. There was Yacob, his master, a kindly man when not annoyed; there was Pedro, Yacob's nephew; there was Medina-sarote who was the youngest daughter of Yacob. She was little esteemed in the world of the blind, because she had a clear cut face and lacked that satisfying, glossy smoothness that is the blind man's ideal of feminine beauty, but Nunez thot her beautiful at first, and presently the most beautiful thing in the whole creation: Her closed eyelids were not sunken and red after the common way of the valley, but lay as though they might open again at any moment; and she had long eyelashes, which were considered a grave disfigurement. And her voice was weak and did not satisfy the acute hearing of the valley swains. So that she had no lover.

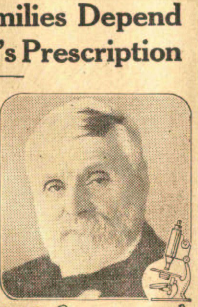
Millions of Families Depend on Dr. Caldwell's Prescription

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine back in eighteen seventy-five the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal quiet lives, at plain, wholesome food, and got plenty of fresh air and sun shine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So, he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in eighteen ninety-two under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a liquid vegetable remedy, intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild safe, gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful management this prescription has proven its worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion, loss of appetite and sleep, bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.



W. B. Caldwell M.D.

AT AGE 83

Millions of families are now never without Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to your and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin", Monticello, Illinois and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

MOTHER OF TWENTY-FOUR DOES OWN SHOE REPAIRINIG

LONDON, ENGLAND, has amongst its inhabitants one of the most exceptional of the world's Mothers. She is Mrs. Jane Lucas wife of a traction engine driver and the mother of exactly two dozen children.

Mrs. Lucas was married twice.

All of her offspring are living —save three sons who died in the war. Which, also incidentally constitutes somewhat of a record. The family income is small, there are many things Mrs. Lucas has had to do to make ends meet, not the least of which has been doing the family shoe repairing.

LOWELL PLANT SHOWS PROFIT

Although the village of Lowell markets its electricity, generated in its own municipal plant, at a two cent rate, said to be the lowest in the state it has been able to return a profit on its investment.

With a population of only eighteen hundred, Lowell claims to have in daily use the third largest number of electric ranges in its homes of any city in the state. The municipality handles electric appliances and its light plant has been in operation thirty-two years

Power is obtained at a dam on Flat river near Smyrna which supplies six hundred horse power. In the village is reserve equipment consisting of a new three hundred horse power Deisel engine and a one hundred and twenty-five kilowatt generator.

The village also has its own water plant which is of sufficient capacity to supply the community for many years to come. A large Kelly well was sunk three years ago to eliminate nearly forty driven wells and a thirty foot open well.

There are some people who would even put such a serious matter as death off until the last moment.

FEARS DRAINAGE TO FILL UP RIVERS

There are major drainage projects at this time under way in Michigan, the money cost of which aggregates more than nine million dollars. These are the largest projects, the big drains that traverse each of them in several counties One of them, originating in Oakland County, is so large that an inspector for the State Department of Agriculture the other day drove his automobile into the concrete bore to take a look at the inside of it. In hundreds of localities, county and township drains and ditches and private drains are being laid in, that they may pour their waters into the major drains.

This nine million dollars of major drains to be added to the existing artificial waterflow systems of the state and with more, if necessary to be added as the years go by, will pour into the state's increasing flood into the state's natural trunk line drains—the rivers. And then what; what.

Disaster.

Prof. Clarence T. Johnson of the University of Michigan a drainage engineer of many years experience in many lands agrees with the State Department of Agriculture, the State Department of Health and the State Highway Department that something ought to be done about it and soon. But what. All are agreed upon the answer.

Because existing and projected artificial drainage systems are regional, partial and incomplete, because the practical effect of them is to run surplus water off from one area on to another; because they drain in many places to dump in fewer places; because the rivers are dumps and are filling up; and more important still, because the systems and the situation are what they are of necessity because of an antiquated legal system, all are agreed that the problem of the runoff of surplus water should be taken out of the hands of local authorities and made a state enterprise.

The phrase surplus water runoff is used advisedly. It does not become drainage until it runs off and away, not from any county or any natural drainage area into some other area within the state, but—out of the state. That means into the Great Lakes and so on into the universal dumps, the oceans. The rivers that empty into the Great Lakes can be depended on under existing engineering practice and existing legal regulations to receive the waters of the many natural drainage areas, but the fall of the rivers is so little and their current so sluggish—all of them in the lower half of the lower peninsula—that they cannot carry off enough of the silt and sewage and sludge that pours into them to prevent a gradual filling up. And thus deteriorating, becoming shallower, spreading their waters and backing up into the drains and sewers already completed, they are beyond the legal pale.

A county drain commissioner can clean out a drain, but the state cannot clean out a river. For that would be a work of "internal improvement," and the state constitution prohibits works of internal improvement unless specifically provided for by special exemption from the inhibitory effect of the basic law. That is what the engineers, the agriculturists and the health officials of this state, as represented by their spokesman at the state capitol and the state university, at all events , want— a specific exemption in favor of state enterprise to effect the final runoff of drainage waters by cleaning out the slower running rivers.

Because of the extension of drainage systems in Michigan, waters are now returned to the natural channels more rapidly. This increases the flood discharge of streams and each year more material is carried toward the Great Lakes. This is deposited at the mouths of streams, and gradually the beds of rivers are elevated. Lands lying adjacent to river mouths are overflowed each spring season as a result of this change.

ELIMINATION OF CARP IN WILD FOWL BAY PROPOSED

The state conservation commission is studying the carp situation in Wildfowl bay with the view of finding some means of eliminating this species.

It has been said that not more than a dozen game fish have been caught in the bay this year, while it teems with carp.

The game fish have fled because of the carp, it has been reported.

SILVER TROPHY AWAITS RECORD SPUD GROWER

The farmer obtaining the largest average yield of potatoes in Montcalm County this year will be awarded a silver trophy at the Greenville Potato Show, November ten to twelve. The cup is being offered by the Greenville Rotary Club.

To compete for this cup, the average yield must be computed from a field of five or more acres, and the grower must make application for entry prior to digging the crop

Who remembers when you could keep a small boy in his own back yard for a week at a time by slight reference at the sad case of Charley Ross.

U. OF M. PROFESSOR NAMED TO AID IN LAW REVISION

Prof E. R. Sunderland, of the law school at the University of Michigan, has been appointed a member of a commission of five lawyers to revise rules of legal procedure in the state and submit them to the Michigan Supreme Court. An act providing for this commission was passed by the last Michigan Legislature. The other members of the commission are; Alva M. Cummings, Lansing; Alexis C. Angell, Detroit; John M. Dunham, Grand Rapids and Kelly Searl, St. Johns.

There will be no more rest during a five day week, but it will all come at one time.

Music and Crime Found to Be Poor Bedfellows

That music and crime do not go together is indicated in the report of D. E. Munal, music director of the Southern Illinois penitentiary, says the Conn Music Center. Only one trained musician has been sent to this penitentiary in the last eight years. But one bandsman has been returned for parole violation in the history of the prison.

The prison band was organized seven years ago. Only five of its original members had elementary training of any kind, and but two had played in brass. Now band rehearsals are held every afternoon except Saturday and Sunday. During the summer months, rehearsals are held in an outdoor pavilion inside the walls. Short concerts are played for visitors.

To gain admission to the band, a prisoner must have ten years or more to serve, not be too old, and have an eighth grade education or better. These conditions are hard to meet, says the director, and the band never has enough students.

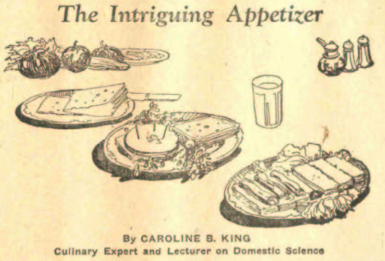
The Intriguing Appetizer



By CAROLINE B. KING
Culinary Expert and Lecturer on Domestic Science

AN appetizer—just a mere bite of something especially pungent and tasty, attractively served and made as inviting as possible, is now served by most hostesses as the first course of the dinner, whether the latter be just a little dinner for friends, or a more formal affair. The appetizer may be of fruit, fish or vegetables, as one desires. Genuine Switzerland cheese, because of its aromatic alpine flavor and its peculiar adaptability for harmonizing with other foods, makes a most inviting appetizer.

Switzerland Pigs in Blankets:

Cut Switzerland cheese in strips one-fourth inch square and two inches long. Brush lightly with mustard and wrap each in a wafer thin slice of bacon. Place on a hot griddle or under the broiler and grill until the bacon is crisp. Serve on strips of freshly made toast, garnishing each strip with a sprig of watercress.

Cheese and Tomato Canapes:

Cut thinly sliced bread into rounds, toast one side and butter the untoasted side. Lay a slice of tomato on the buttered side, cover with a disk of Switzerland cheese, sprinkle with paprika and [illegible] place under the broiler or in a [illegible] oven until the cheese is [illegible] slightly brown. Garnish [illegible] minced green pepper and [illegible]

Fringed Celery:

Cut celery stalks into [illegible] pieces and fringe each end one-half inch deep. Place in ice water for an hour, then drain and wipe dry. In the cavities of the celery place strips of Switzerland cheese which have marinated in French dressing for a few moments. Sprinkle with paprika and serve very cold.

Apple Sandwiches:

Slice a tart red apple very thin without peeling it, and cut each slice across; remove seeds; cut thinly sliced Switzerland cheese in the same way and put together between the apple slices, sandwich fashion, the pale yellow of the cheese showing between the red skin of the apple. Fasten with toothpicks and serve at once.

Toasted Cheese:

Toasted cheese make a tempting appetizer served before a Dutch lunch. Slice Swiss cheese in square pieces one-quarter inch thick, and toast under the broiler. Meantime heat saltines in the oven, place a square of cheese on each, brush lightly with mustard and top with a disk cut from canned pimiento.

Sardine Rose Canapes:

On six rounds of buttered graham bread, place a slice of tomato and a slice of Switzerland cheese. Skin and bone six sardines, mash well and then add one hard-boiled egg, finely chopped. Season with salt, pepper and paprika and moisten with mayonnaise. Place this pulp in a pastry bag and press through the rosette tube, placing a sardine [illegible] on each round of cheese. Garnish with chopped parsley.

NOW FLY TO ME!

THE above cartoon was published in the Newark, N. J., Evening News before those two thousand miles of ocean which separate us from Hawaii were spanned through the air. This feat somehow gave the feeling that the tropics were just around the corner and that a journey which once took four and a half days might soon seem no more of an adventure than a trip on the Twentieth Century Limited.

The spell of Hawaii has a tenuous fairy-like quality, a charm and beauty that are almost unreal. Memories of its enchantments come crowding into mind—a gorgeous big garden dropped down in the Pacific; a tropical growth with fern trees sixty feet high; a belching volcano; combers breaking over coral reefs, bearing surf-boat riders ashore with the speed of a lightning express; moonlight at Waikiki; luaus or native feasts where one tried to eat one-finger poi and saw a much expurgated hula. And pineapple fields the like of which are seen nowhere else.

Hawaiian pineapple for breakfast, sugar-sweet and luscious. Supper in the crater of Kilauea; cooking coffee and scorching post cards over the steaming crevasses, or sitting on the edge of the pit, a cauldron of seething, boiling lava—waiting for the darkness to intensify the ominous, red glow.

The full, throaty voices of the Hawaiians singing, to the twinkle of the ukelele and the taro-patch, the women in holakus. Departure and regret, with more leis than one could wear and always one dropped in the water to insure a speedy return.

This is Hawaii—paradise of the Pacific—where everything flourishes in tropical splendor, where bananas grow in twenty different varieties; where fields of sugar plantations tint the landscape a brilliant green and mile after mile of orange colored spikey pineapples ripen in the golden sunshine of Hawaii, are picked and canned the very day they reach perfection, with only a rare cane sugar to augment the delicious flavor. There is no spot in the world where this fruit is produced so successfully and in such colossal quantities. One marvels at the fecundity of these small islands, eight very important "dots" on a blue expanse of ocean, which produce and ship to the mainland annually 1,752,776,646 pounds of sugar and 200,000,000 cans of pineapples.

She can't Eat Grass Enough

A cow producing 35 lbs. of milk daily cannot maintain that yield unless she has about 30 lbs. of dry matter in her feed.

Fresh pasture, which is nearly 80% water, contains but a small percentage of dry matter. This means that the cow will have to eat at least 175 lbs. of grass per day if she is to maintain both condition and milk yield.

Will your cows be able to find and crop that amount of pasture every day this summer? That is what you are expecting of them if you rely on grass alone. The result? A loss of milk and money, because few cows can eat more than 90 lbs. of grass in one day.

The remedy is simple. Feed Larro with pasture through the season—at the ratio of 1 lb. of Larro for each 5 lbs. of milk when pasture is plentiful, with a gradual increase as summer advances. Thus you can prevent the summer slump in milk; bring your cows into the fall in better condition for their winter work; and make more profit for yourself.

Why the Sheetrock way is the quickest way

QUICK construction is one of the important advantages you get in using Sheetrock, the fireproof wallboard.

For Sheetrock comes all ready to use. You simply nail the wide, ceiling-high sheets to the supports. The trim and decoration can follow without waiting for the walls to dry.

Besides being ready for immediate decoration, Sheetrock walls are proof against cold and damp, fire and sound. They are non-warping, non-buckling and permanent.

VALUE OF FARMS DROP DURING YEAR

A decline of farm real estate values during the crop year just ended to one hundred and nineteen per cent of the pre-war level from one hundred and twenty-four in nineteen twenty-six, is reported by the department of Agriculture, the present values being about the nineteen twenty-seven level. The decline is part of a continued depreciation during the last seven years from the peak of one hundred and sixty nine per cent of pre-war in nineteen twenty says the report.

The decrease during the year in the price of certain major farm products, the sharp drop in farmers' incomes, and a generally inactive farm real estate market are given as the reasons for the decline.

The largest decline last year was in the South Atlantic states, for which the department's index is one hundred and thirty seven compared with one hundred and forty-eight in nineteen twenty-six. The index for the East North Central states is placed at one hundred and three against one hundred and ten in nineteen twenty-six, West North Central states ,one hundred and fifteen against one hundred and twenty-one East So. Central states one hundred and thirty-three against one hundred and forty-four; Middle Atlantic states, one hundred and eleven against one hundred and thirteen; Mountain states, one hundred and one against one hundred and three New England one hundred and twenty-seven against one thousand 1 hundred and twenty-eight and Pacific states one hundred forty-three against one hundred and forty-four.

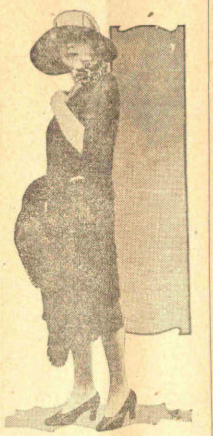
The greatest depreciation in values since the nineteen twenty peak has occurred in the West North Central states, where the index is now one hundred and fifteen per cent of pre-war against one hundred and eighty-four per cent in nineteen twenty.

BUILDING HONORS WON BY THREE MICHIGAN CITIES

Three Michigan cities placed in the honor roll of twenty-five leading building centers of the nation. These cities were Detroit, which placed sixth; Lansing, eighteenth. Flint, twenty-second The state was seventh in building volume out of the forty-eight states of the union.

Lansing of all the cities reporting made the largest gain, or five hundred, forty-seven per cent. For high percentages, Muskegon took second place with a rating of three hundred, ninety-six per cent.

'FRINGE' COMES BACK FOR WINTER FROCK STYLES



THIS unusual navy blue woolen gown is from Worth of Paris. It's the fore-runner of fashion ideas for the nearing Winter season.

The skirt is heavily pin tucked with a fringe hanging down both from the skirt and the sleeves.

A fringed sash, caught by a jeweled motif, adds a lively touch to the neat creation.

SIMPLICITY MARKS WINTER'S STYLES

What joy there is in a well turned knee covered disappointingly with lisle.

The lisle top has gone the way of longer skirts, except for very active sportswear, and then it's more correct to wear all-lisle stockings.

Our grandmothers may rail about the short skirts we wear nowadays, but in their hearts they must envy us the pleasure we take in pulling on lovingly the two lengths of airy sheerness we call our stockings And now that knees no longer draw a crowd when playful winds blow, the same lovely lengths of silk must be silk to the top.

Remembr above all things, that it's a season of greater simplicity than ever before. Remember that exquisite quality of materials and perfection of line are more important than decoration; that accessories, though simple, were never so chic, and never before were you able to harmonize costumes and accessories so perfectly.

Skirts must be longer, only an inch or two, but it's an important "small addition" and the difference between the new and the old.

Skirts must be wider, but they must be even more slender than ever with pleats, circular sections, tiers, panels and draperies.

Hemlines are uneven in afternoon and evening dresses we must accustom our eyes to the lengthened skirt and the uneven hem accomplishes this.

Velvet is the season's most important material—in coats and dresses—it's a season of femininity, and velvet is the most feminine of fabrics.

Hats are small, but their 'lines' were never more important.

Metallic materials and laces pay tribute to a season determined to have more luxury of fabric and fashion.

Wear crepe satin trimmed with its dull, reverse side for daytime.

Wear wool frocks—they are softer to the touch and so much lighter in weight than formerly, and nineteen twenty-seven knows no smarter costume than the one of wool.

The light evening scarf, meant to be thrown over bare shoulders and backs has taken on the proportions of a real cape, but it is no heavier and no more concealing than the scarf. The new capes are of tulle, embroidered with flowers in vivid colors, edged with silver or gold ribbon and ended with a long silk fringe.

RAILROADS PREPARE FOR STATE GRID CROWD

Both the Ann Arbor and the Michigan Central Railroads are making extensive improvements with a view to having facilities to handle the crowds expected at the Michigan football games this fall. Officials of both roads have visited Ann Arbor frequently inspecting the ground. The Ann Arbor, linked with the Wabash, is constructing three new sidings and lengthening three others in its yards, which run within one thousand feet of the entrance of the new stadium..

The road will have sufficient track to handle fifteen large trains The first siding already is under way and with the two others, to be started soon, will be completed within thirty days. Equipment for lighting and watering the cars also will be installed and new surfacing material laid to provide hard ground for walking to the stadium.

The bootmakers of the three fashion centers, Paris, London and New York, declare the vogue for gold and silver kid evening shoes is over. But the shoemakers still lay special stress on the satin slippers for evening, in colors to match or contrast with the gown, but on no account to match the stocking.

In bags, the velvet bags shares its importance with antelope leather, both brushed to a luster almost mirrorlike. The black bag—the brown bag —both smart. The envelope —the pouch— both from Paris.

The discus bag, the flat pouch with snake- jewelry handle, the large, flat bag with huge ballclasp

It's smart to wear "sunburn" powder if you don't acquire a real coat of tan on the beach this Summer. And there is a new fur color that seems to have stayed out under the midnight sun too long, for it's the loveliest sunburn shade imaginable. In evening wraps and coats of ermine and fox— "honey beige" is the newest shade known to the family of furs this season.

The coat silhouette follows the same soft, graceful lines as the dress models that are worn beneath them—though in both the fundamental idea is slenderness. This world has a passion for slenderness.

CHINESE SUICIDE ROPE IS ADDED TO KENT'S SCIENTIFIC MUSEUM

A Chinese imperial suicide rope is contained in a group of oriental antiques. Henry L Ward has added to the collection at the Kent Scientific museum where he is curator.

The rope is of imperial Chinese yellow silk, one of those kept by the late empress dowager to present the undesirable officials near her throne as an invitation which was practically equivalent to a command to commit suicide. It is about fifty feet long and three-eigths of an inch thick and was obtained by Edward Barrett from the imperial palaces in Pekin in nineteen twenty-five.

Other articles in the collection include a bronze Buddha eight and one half inches high, which was used by the monks on one of the altars of a small shrine along the great wall of China near Ching Ling Chau; a Korean wooden carrier taken directly from one of the Hodyas or burden carriers on the streets of Keijo, capital of Korea, in nineteen twenty-five and a Mongolian conch horn obtained by Barrett in nineteen twenty-four at the palace of the "Living Buddha" the spiritual leader of Mongolia.

FERTILIZER BRINGS BIG PROFITS

Striking example of the profit from fertilizing for wheat has been demonstrated by the Michigan State College soils department at the Cass County Farm during the last year.

"High grade complete fertilizer and lime applied to the soil on which the wheat was grown gave a return of fifty-nine dollars and forty-five cents an acre more than similar soil where no lime or fertilizer was applied.

The profit obtained from the fertilizer on this farm this year agrees with the results obtained in other localities in other years.

Lime and complete fertilizer used on rye on the same farm paid a return of thirty-four dollars and twenty-one cents more than rye on unfertilized land.

Use of high-grade fertilizers is recommended for wheat and rye because the units of plant food in this type of fertilizer are cheaper than they are in low-grade fertilizers. The filler used in fertilizers has very little value as plant food.

For both wheat and rye, the soils department recommends at least two hundred pounds an acre of fertilizer of two-sixteen-two analysis or one of similar composition for light soils of low fertility. Sixteen per cent acid phosphate has proved profitable for better soil types.

DOOMS HOME ONCE MECCA OF YOUTH

The other day a workman in Detroit took a final vigorous thump with a hammer on a final nail in a new and gaudy sign and then stood back to look at his handicraft. He was pleased with the glaring colors and the neat lettering. There was nothing incongrous to him about its wording, its brief and bustling shout to who soever might wish to read;

"FOR SALE"

There were other things on the sign, data, on size and dimension, a telephone number and the name of a realty company. In the busy uproar of the street corner. The sign stood firm, and scarce a head was turned. It was a block in the modern mosaic of car and tram and truck of shrieking tire store sales, and tangled wires and [illegible]tling traffic, of mouldy rooming houses and dry cleaners shops, of all the moving and all the still life of a great city reaching out to wipe away the adornment of a different age, a quieter, mode kindly sedater age.

The sign pointed its stiff nose at the old brick house that stands on the corner, and that, before another month rolls by may bury its memories in the dust of the wrecker, the old "Benson house" a landmark that is doomed. Many things has the old house seen in the half century and more that it has stood in wind and weather and watched the surge of life about it, many strange things and sad things and wonderful things.

It was built away back when the Civil War was tearing the vtials of the Nation and men in blue uniforms tramped by its tall windows. Detroit was very small and very lovely, back in the sixty's, a city resting among great trees and beside a river whose waters were gay Broad old Jefferson avenue was ample wide for team and buggy and the passing to and fro of crinoline and frock coat. Henry E. Benson looked on that corner for the beauty of the neighbrhood and the stillness of the nights. The Benson home was a mecca for youth, and on gala nights the carriages rolled up to the iron-grilled porch by dozens with the lamplight streaming on glittering silver-mounted harness and on silken shawls and on the gilt of officers' uniforms.

Between the old house and Woodward avenue were broad, empty acres and scattered houses; almost the old house took on the air of an estate with baronial grounds, although it sits so close to the city street today.

BORERS ATTACK WEEDS PASS UP CORN FIELD

European corn borers in the stalks of burdock and other weeds are reported by Claude Stevens, a farmer near Imlay City, Lapeer County. His cornfield is free from the pest, he says.

Possibly the popularity of air castles is due to the fact that they are not taxable.

THE COUNTRY OF THE BLIND

By H. G. WELLS

There came a time when Nunez thought that, could he win her, he would be resigned to live in the valley for all the rest of his days.

He watched her, he sought opportunities of doing her little services and presently he found that she observed him. . Once at a rest day gathering they sat side by side in the dim starlight, and the music was sweet. His hand came upon hers and he dared to clasp it. Then very tenderly she returned his pressure. And one day, as they were at their meal in the darkness, he felt her hand very softly seeking him and as it chanced the fire leapt then, and he saw the tenderness of her face.

He sought to speak to her.

He went to her one day when she was sitting in the summer moonlight spinning. The light made her a thing of silver and mystery. He sat down at her feet and told her he loved her, and told her how beautiful she seemed to him. He had a lover's voice, he spoke with a tender reverence that came near to awe, and she had never before been touched by adoration. She made him no definite answer, but it was clear his words pleased her.

After that he talked to her whenever he could take an opporutnity The valley became the world for him, and the world beyond the mountains where men lived by day seemed no more than a fairy tale he would some day pour into her ears. Very tentatively and timidly he spoke to her of sight.

Sight seemed to her the most poetical of fancies, and she listened to his description of the stars and the mountains and her own sweet white lit beauty as though it was a guilty indulgence.. She did not believe she could only half understand, but she was mysteriously delighted, and it seemed to him that she completely understood.

His love lost its awe and took courage. Presently he was for demanding her of Yacob and the elders in marriage, but she became fearful and delayed. And it was one of her elder sisters who first told Yacob that Medina-sarote and Nunez were in love.

There was from the very first great opposition to the marriage of Nunez and Medina-sarote; not so much because they valued her as because they held him as a being apart, an idiot, incompetent thing below the permissible level of a man. Her sister opposed it bitterly as bringing discredit on them all and old Yacob, though he had formed a sort of liking for his clumsy, obedient serf, shook his head and said the thing could not be. The young men were all angry at the idea of corrupting the race, and one went so far as to revile and strike Nunez. He struck back Then for the first time he found an advantage in seeing, even by twilight, and after that fight was over no one was disposed to raise a hand against him. But they still found his marriage impossible.

Old Yacob had a tenderness for his last little daughter, and was grieved to have her weep upon his shoulder..

"You see my dear, he's an idiot He has delusions; he can't do anything right."

"I know," wept Medina-sarote "But he's better than he was. He's getting better. And he's strong, dear father, and kind—stronger and kinder than any other man in the world. And he loves me—and father, I love him."

Old Yacob was greatly distressed to find her inconsolable and besides what made it more distressing, he liked Nunez for many things. So he went and sat in the windowless council chamber with the others elders and watched the trend of the talk,, and said at the proper time. "He's better than he was. Very likely, some day, we shall find him as sane as ourselves."

Then afterwards one of the elders who thought deeply, had an idea He was a great doctor among these people, their medicine-man, and he had a very philosophical and inventive mind, and the idea of curing Nunez of his peculiarities appealed to him. One day when Yacob was present he returned to the topic of Nunez. "I have examined Nunez", he said," and the case is clearer to me. I think very probably he might be cured."

"That is what I have always hoped," said old Yacob.

"His brain is affected", said the blind doctor.

The elders murmured assent.

"Now, what affects it".

"Ah," said old Yacob.

"This", said the doctor, answering his own question. "Those queer things that are called the eyes, and which exist to make an agreeable depression in the face are diseased, in the case of Nunez in such a way as to affect his brain They are greatly distended, he has eyelashes, and his eyelids move. and consequently his brain is in a state of constant irritation and distraction."

"Yes", said old Yacob. "Yes".

"And I think I may say with reasonable certainty that, in order to cure him complete, all that we need to do is a simple and easy surgical operation—namely, to remove these irritant bodies."

"And then he will be sane."

"Then he will be perfectly sane, and a quite admirable citizen."

"Thank Heaven for science", said old Jacob' and went forth at once to tell Nunez of his happy hopes.

But Nunez's manner of receiving the good news struck him as being cold and disappointing.

"One might think,' he said, 'from the tone you take that you did not care for my daughter".

It was Medina-sarote who persuaded Nunez to face the blind surgeons.

"You do not want me," he said, "to lose my gift of sight."

She shook her head..

'My word is sight.."

Her head drooped lower.

'There are the beautiful things, the beautiful little things—the flowers, the lichens amidst the rocks, the light and the softness on a piece of fur, the sky with its drifting dawn of clouds, the sunsets and the stars. And there is you.. For you alone it is good to have sight, to see your sweet, serene face, your kindly lips, your dear beautiful hands folded together—It is these eyes of mine you won, these eyes that hold me to you, that these idiots seek. Instead, I must touch you, hear you, and never see you again. I must come under that roof of rock and stone and darkness, that horrible room under which your imaginations stoop—No, you would not have me do that'.

A disagreeable doubt had arisen in him.. He stopped and left the thing a question.

'I wish",' she said, "sometimes—She paused.

"Yes" he said a little apprehensively.

"I wish sometimes—you could not talk like that."

"Like what."

"I know it's pretty—it's your imagination. I love it, but now—'

He felt cold. "Now." he said, faintly.

She sat quite still.

"You mean—you think— I should be better, better perhaps—'

He was realising things very swiftly. He felt anger perhaps, anger at the dull course of fate, but also sympathy for her lack of understanding—a sympathy near akin to pity:

'Dear," he said, and he could see by her whiteness how tensely her spirit pressed against the things she could not say. He put his arms about her; he kissed her ear, and they sat for a time in silence.

"If I were to consent to this" he said at last, in a voice that was very gentle.

She flung her arms about him, weeping wildly. "Oh, if you would,", she sobbed, "If only you would."

For a week before the operation that was to raise him from his servitude and inferiority to the level of a blind citizen Nunez knew nothing of sleep, and all through the warm, sunlit hours, while the others slumbered happily he sat brooding or wandered aimlessly, trying to bring his mind to bear on his dilemma. He had given his answer he had given his consent, and still he was not sure. And at last worktime was over, the sun rose in splendour over the golden crests, and his last day of vision began for him. He had a few minutes with Medina-sarote before she went apart to sleep.

"Tomorrow", he said, "I shall see no more".

"Dear heart,' she answered and pressed his hands with all her strength.

"They will hurt you but little," she said. 'a'nd you are going thru this pain, you are going through it dear lover, for me. Dear, if a woman's heart and life can do it, I will repay you. My dearest with the tender voice, I will repay."

He was drenched in pity for him self and her.

He held her in his arms, and presed his lips to hers and looked on her sweet face for the last time. "Good-bye" he whispered to that dear sight, "Good-bye'.

And then in silence he turned away from her.

She could hear his slow retreating footsteps, and something in the rhythm of them threw her into a passion of weeping.

He walked away.

He had fully meant to go to a lonely place where the meadows were beautiful with white narcisus, and there remain until the hour of his sacrifice should come, but as he walked he lifted up his eyes and saw the morning, the morning, like an angel in golden armour, marching down the steeps.

It seemed to him that before this splendour he and this blind world in the valley, and his love and all, were no more than a pit of sin.

He did not turn aside as he meant to do, but went on and passed through the wall of the circumference and out upon the rocks, and his eyes were always upon the sunlit ice and snow.

He saw their infinite beauty, and his imagination soared over them to the things beyond he was now to resign forever.

He thought of that great free world that he was parted from the world that was his own, and he had a vision of those further slopes, distance beyond distance, with Bogota, a place of multitudinous stirring beauty, a glory by day, a luminous mystery by night, a place of palaces and fountains and statues and white houses, lying beautifully in the middle distance. He thought how for a day or so one might come down through passes drawing ever nearer and nearer to its busy streets and ways. He thot of the river journey, day by day, from great Bogota to the still vaster world beyond, through towns and villages, forest and desert places the rushing river day by day until its banks receded and the big steamers came splashing by and one had reached the sea—the limitless sea, with its thousand islands, and its ships seen dimly far away in their incessant journeyings round and about that greater world. And there unpent by mountains, one saw it here, but an arch of immeasurable blue, a deep of deeps, in which the circling stars were floating.

His eyes began to scrutinize the great curtain of the mountains with a keener inquiry.

For example; if one went so, up that gully and to that chimney there, that one might come out high among those stunted pines that ran round in a sort of shelf and rose still higher and higher as it passed above the gorge. And then. That talus might be managed. Thence perhaps a climb might be found to take him up to the precipice that came below the snow; and if that chimney failed, then an other farther to the east might serve his purpose better. And then Then one would be out upon the amber-lit snow there, and half-way up to the crest of those beautiful desolations. And suppose one had good fortune.

He glanced back at the village, and then turned right around and regarded it with folded arms.

He thought of Medina-sarote, and she had become small and remote.

He turned again towards the mountain wall down which the day had come to him.

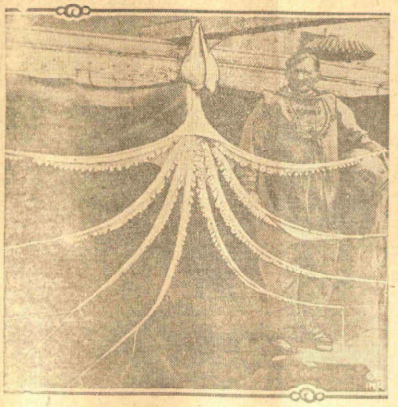
Then very circumspectly he began his climb.

When sunset came he was no longer climbing, but he was far and higher. His clothes were torn his limbs were bloodstained, he was bruised in many places, but he lay as if he were at his ease, and there was a smile on his face.

From where he rested the valley seemed as if it were in a pit and nearly a mile below. Already it was dim with haze and shadow they were things of fire and light, and mountain summits around him were things of light and fire and the little things in the rocks near at hand were drenched with light and beauty, a vein of green mineral piercing the grey, a flash of small crystal here and there, a minute, minutely- beautiful orange lichen close beside his face. There were deep ,mysterious shadows in the gorge, blue deepening into purple, and purple into a luminous darkness, and overhead was the illimitable vastness of the sky. But he heeded these things no longer, but lay quite still there, smiling as if he were content now merely to have escaped from the valley of the Blind, in which he had thought to be King. And the glow of the sunset passed and the night came, and still he lay there, under the cold clear stars.

The End.

CONQUERS GIANT OCTOPUS IN DEATH BATTLE



LIKE the hero of Victor Hugo's gripping story, "Toilers of the Sea," Capt. Eliasen— pictured above—slew a great devilfish in an underwater battle to death. The fight took place in the submerged hulk of a romantic old squar rigger, the "Muriel" which the captain was searching to reclaim properties within its hold.

Captain Eliasen was armed only with a knife when the octopus suddenly encircled his waist with one of its powerful tenacles. Quickly unsheateing his dagger, he slashed himself free after a hard struggle. While slaying the monster, he simultaneously beheld a second and larger octopus and five small ones, within the submerged hulk from which he narrowly escaped.

PUMPKIN STAYS GOOD AS NEW CROP COMES IN

Fresh pumpkin pie the year round is a possibility since O. E. Ollman, Grand Rapids grocer, has discovered a variety of long-keeping qualities.

Ollman bought a huge pumpkin last fall from a nearby farmer. It weighed in at seventeen pounds and eight ounces. It was a perfect specimen of the pumpkin family, but green as grass. Ollman said he put it in the display window to ripen but it didn't turn yellow until Christmas. Then he decided to see how long he could keep it.

The new crop now is moving to market and Ollman's sample of the nineteen-twenty-six crop still is in good condition but it has lost a lot of weight while on exhibition. It has shrunk eighty-one inches.

CITIES ON TRUNK LINES GET TWO THOUSAND DOLLAR REPAIR AID

Property owners on trunk line highways in cities will receive aid in the future in the maintenance of the pavements The aid comes as a result of the new state law providing that two thousand dollars is to be paid annually on every trunk line highway in the cities.

Under the law, the two thousand dollars must be placed in a special fund by the cities to be used only in the maintenance of the trunk line highways The money can be used for no other purpose.

QUITS AT 73 TO LEARN OF FARM

A robust and immaculate gentleman nearly seventy-three sitting in graying shadows of an illustrious career, painted a vivid, colorful picture of the pioneering future he has charted for himself.

Mortimer E. Cooley, student scientist, lecturer, statesman and dean of the college of engineering of the University of Michigan, is about to enter one of the most active periods of a singularly vigorous and fruitful existence. He has purchased a farm of more than one thousand two hundred acres in Worth County, Georgia, and has made plans to spend the next ten years in a serious, practice study of the science of agricultural engineering.

"I was down in Georgia visiting my friend, Chas S. Osborn in March, and while we were driving around the country one day he suggested that I buy a farm near his. 'It is cheap' he said, 'and just the sort of place you want. It is only four hundred ninety acres and it's in first class condition.' Well, I did not think I wanted the thing, but it ended up by my taking an option. I finally bought it and then the fun began. I decided to get another piece next to it, to sort of straighten my fence lines. There were thirty acres in that piece, but I found out then I needed another good road and I bought one hundred acres more. You might not believe me, but I kept that up three months and when I got through I had eight separate farms, one thousand two hundred and thirty-five acres altogether.

"It is beautiful rolling country and remarkably fertile. I have a big creek running through my ranch and I suspect that the creek was largely responsible for my choice. And right here I am going to tell you a secret," he laughed.

"The big fly in the ointment down there is water. There is a chance always to raise remarkable crops if the rainfall is heavy enough—pecans, watermelons, cattle, tobacco and timber. Trees grow faster there than any place I know of. But you can not depend on water for the other things and I intend to employ irrigation.

"And that brings me to the real underlying reason for this project of mine. I have been dreaming for years of a time when I could devote myself to agrieultural engineering. The great countries of the world are moving swiftly toward a condition of such unstable equilibrium that they will soon be unable to feed themselves. Every one knows of the rush from the farms to the cities. It is not slowing up and it evidently will not soon be discontinued.

"The engineers have created much of the wealth of the world. They have been largely responsible for the gathering of millions of men and women in the cities. They have built railroads, skyscrapers, and machines of every sort. But they have devoted little time to agriculture and I think it is time that some of their creative and inventive genius should be turned in that direction.

REVISED STATE TAX METHOD PLANNED OVER FIVE YEARS

John H. Morgan, chairman of the State Tax Commission, plans a reorganization of the methods of assessing similar to the plan used in Detroit. The re-organization will take about five years.

Land and building values will be separated and the same method of valuation will be used in each county under the Morgan plan. He holds that the value of land changes but little except in the larger cities and by such a separation the valuations can be brought up to date annually by assessing the new buildings plus or minus any increase or decrease of land values.

To carry out this plan the State will be divided into three districts Mr. Morgan will be in charge of the southern part of the Lower Peninsula, Melville, B. McPherson will oversee the northern part of the Lower Peninsula while Alvin Richards of Marquette, will direct the Upper Peninsula. Local assessing officers will be asked to cooperate. Mr. McPherson and Mr. Richards are members of the tax commission.

Mr. Morgan has designated Houghton, Monroe, Livingston, Roscommon and St. Joseph Counties as the first to be re-valued. The work will begin sometime this fall.

Where there is a man's will, there is always a way to break it.

Doctor Tells What is Best for Thin, Constipated People

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half of his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature, colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of his forty-seven years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in eighteen seventy-five), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In eighteen ninety-two he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in his private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. Millions of bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are bing used a year.

Its great success is based on merit, on repeated buying, on one satisfied user telling another. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have gotten many hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us that it helped them when everything else failed.

Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Keep a bottle in your home,—where many live someone is sure to need it quickly.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin", Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

W. C. T. U. Column

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

"Wear the white ribbon, my sister
O wear it abroad!
You can not tell how its whiteness
May speak for the Lord;
Somebody's eye may be caught,
Someone may ponder in thought
Some lesson of purity taught.
Is this no reward?

The editor of this column has just taken for the first time in her 20 years of married life a vacation with none of the family along and she will endeavor to tell in a style somewhat like the popular travalogue a few of the important things that happened from October 25—28 at Battle Creek during the State Convention of the W. C. T. U.

To begin with, I said when I was elected delegate that I could not leave home with all my family of six—three in school and one going to work at 6:30 each morning—to be looked after but all things seemed to adjust themselves and on Tuesday morning at 8:00 I started in an auto driven by Joel Stiverson of Wheatland who carried also Mrs. Maud Stiverson Mrs. Lillian Hawley of Wheatland and Mrs. Mable Bennett of Hillsdale. We went through Jonesville, Litchfield, Homer and Marshall arriving in Battle Creek in time for a cafe' dinner before going to First M. E. Church where the Convention was held. Upon entering the church we were met by small Girl Reserves and Boy Scouts who were attentive to our every need, showing us where to register where to put baggage, etc.

The Convention was formally opened by Mrs. Elizabeth Perkins State President, and all joined in the Flag Salute led by Mrs. Jeanette Pearing. Then the entire audience sang the "Crusade Hymn" —"Give to the winds thy fears" and united in reading the 146 Psalm the Crusade Psalm. Devotionals were by Mrs. Tasker who read the Faith chapter. Then came appointment of committees followed by 7 minutes speeches by 7 department heads concerning the work in their departments A few statements made were these: The W C. T. U. has put 2000 free Bibles on teachers desks in our schools and the moral condition at the present time shows that the teachings of the Bible are being ignored—robberies, divorces, immorality, and other evils are shocking us on every hand. Education is the only cure. We must study Christian Citizenship and the star of hope stands over the school-house so we must have Christian teachers and all should be members of the W. C. T. U. Mrs. French of Hillsdale conducted the Memorial hour for over 200 members who have gone in the past year, speaking much of Wayne B. Wheeler who was the well known lawyer for the Anti-Saloon League of Michigan.

Here we adjourned until the evening meeting at the Sanitarium.

The constant attention of the little pages, the beautiful flowers, the white ribbon badges given to each one all helped to give things a good send off.

The kind people of the city entertained us for lodging and break fast free and Maud Stiverson and I went to the home of Dell Fuller and wife known to North Adams and vicinity in years gone by. They took us in their car to the Sanitarium where we were met by order lies in uniform and told to make ourselves at home in the recreation rooms until the elevator should take up to the 6th floor where the banquet was to be furnished by Dr. Kellogg's force at $1.50 per plate. This proved to be a great affair with 34 different articles of food and 25 dishes for each one also a waiter for every four people. We did not know what we were eating most of the time as all was strictly vegetarian though so skillfully camouflaged as to resemble meat dishes. The most beautiful thing was the ice cream made to look just like a lily, the W. C. T. U. flower, the yellow center being candy. Mrs. Perkins as toastmistress introduced the speakers. Mayor Bailey, serving his 5th term, was the first to welcome us saying that it seemed to him that the women knew just where, when, how and why to talk so he was going to say only that the prohibition law was part of our Constitution and must be enforced; the foreign element causes trouble because "it was not wrong to drink in our country"; the solution of the liquor question is the education of our youth; Dr. Kellogg in his work had always taught temperance and refused to use alcohol as a medicine long before prohibition days. Dr. Coburn, head of the city schools declared there was never a better age in which to bring up children than ours and that bootlegging can be suppressed like any other crime. Young people are growing up without any idea of what a saloon is like and they must be educated to know value of organization like the W. C. T. U.

Report of the Sheriff's Office, Week Ending October 29th 1927

Clyde Wooster, serving a 10 day sentence for assault, was released Sunday.

At midnight, Sunday, Oct. 23rd, Tim Straub, Hillsdale was arrested and brought to jail in an intoxicated condition. He plead guilty before Justice Aldrich the next day and was fined $25 and $9.90 costs, or 20 days in jail. He took the days and here he is.

Bert Murdock, Ray Harlan and Carl Thrall, all of Allen, were arrested and brought before Justice Fitzsimmons, charged with intoxication. Each plead guilty and paid a fine of $35 and costs of $8.50.

On Tuesday, Cleason Fish was transferred to the State Psychopathic Hospital at Ann Arbor.

The same day, officers transferred Carl Spaulding and Vale Price to Ionia and Lee Thompson, James Baker and Otto Zeigler to Jack on Prison.

Bernard Buel, Scipio Twp., was arrested on a Body Attachment for Contempt of Court on Wednesday and later released on $300 bond to appear before the Circuit Court at a future date.

F. M. Spangler, Morenci, was arrested Wednesday on a warrant charging him with issuing a worthless check. He was taken before Justice Fitzsimmons and released on bond, pending the date set for his examination.

On Thursday, Walter Chismas, of Detroit arrested for bootlegging on U. S. 112, appeared in Circuit Court and plead guilty to the charge He was fined the costs of $75 and sentenced to 6 months in Jackson Prison, where he was taken Saturday.

Orson Kunkle, held in the County Jail for the past month on a charge of intoxication, was released Friday and the charge against him dropped.

Otis Macklin, Coldwater, appeared before Justice Fitzsimmons Friday and plead guilty to a charge of driving while drunk, He was fined $100 and costs of $21.17 or 60 days in jail. The money has not yet appeared.

Ralph Welch, a 16 year old boy who has been staying around Hanover, was arrested Friday, charged with stealing a bicycle from in front of the Jonesville school several days previous. He admitted the "job", produced the bike and also confessed to several other petty thefts. He was placed on probation by Judge Guernsey Saturday and turned over to his sister in Jackson.

Luis Castendo, a Mexican beet worker living near Waldron, was arrested Friday night on a warrant charging him with V. P. L. Previous investigation developed the fact that the bulk of Luis' customers were Waldron schoolboys, and those in charge informed the officers as to the situation. Castenedo will be arraigned before Justice Aldrich at an early date.

On Saturday October 16th, Deputy Vern Cole arrested 3 young men at the Bird Lake dance, quite drunk. He obtained a statement from all three as to where they had purchased the booze. The 3 boys were from West Unity, O. and the liquor had also been purchased in that State, so the affidavit was turned over to the Ohio authorities who raided the joint in question, and brought the owner into Court where he plead guilty and was heavily fined. The Sheriff is unable to touch such places "over the line", and yet the closing of one of these "border" hangouts improves the situation in this County, in this case considerably so, since half the customers of this particular place were from Michigan.

Col. Earl [illegible]. Kerr, Sheriff and its owner is still a mere farmer. Experts in oil don't seem to bite off our bait for notoriety.

As we go to press, oil wells are reported as afact at Saginaw, Mt Pleasant, Conway, Decatur. This would indicate Michigan was going to be switched onto the band wagon as a producer. Oil showing itself in these holes, is however not the absolute guarantee of a producer. Oil has been struck at Osseo, but nobody thinks there is any bonanzas tied up in Charlie DeWitt's farm, in fact he has never been offered even a fair price

They Make Easy Money

All along the lines of State roads in this country you will now find the farmers are making the best of their opportunities and are using the roadside for a market for their produce and they are getting good prices for what they raise without the trouble of trucking it to town. Here is where the American farmer is slightly on top of the game. He can place his stuff on his own premises and the customers must come to him. therefore he makes his own prices and sells as he wishes. As far as we know this is the only instance where he can do it. As far as marketing his produce in town is concerned he is at the mercy of his customer entirely, because his produce is often something which wont keep for long, and after the expense of harvesting and hauling to town he positively must sell at once for any old price. But the motorists of this state are becoming a wonderful factor in the trade conditions. They are constantly navigating our highways and always looking for the freshest chickens, eggs and fruits, and they know that right on the home place where they are produced is the proper place for this. City dwellers now make a practice of driving out on the country side when they need supplies, and can pick and choose at their leisure, also at the same time the farmer is benefitted by the process.

pense with 239,000,000 hens, and still maintain the present production of eggs.

The importance and significance of quality production in our live stock is well illustrated in some figures taken from Wisconsin, where over 5,000 cows belonging to cow testing associations have made definite records. Results are shown in the following:

No. of Cows	Av. Lbs. Butterfat	Total Cost	Profit
1,111......	203	$98.60	$ .33
1,476......	250	107.00	16.00
1,226......	298	115.00	32.00
747......	346	125.00	47.00
333......	396	132.00	65.00
122......	445	146.00	78.00

It will be noticed that with each increase of about 50 pounds per cow of butterfat, there is an increase of $15 to $18 per cow in net profit.

The 250 pound cow, which produces $16 profit, represents 6 per cent interest on $266. The 445 pound cow producing $78 profit represents 6 per cent interest on $1,300. In other words, one 445 pound cow will produce as much net profit as five 250 pound cows. Any surplus in dairy products can readily be taken care of by simply eliminating unprofitable or low-producing cows.

Rises From Penny Arcades in Vacant Stores to Filming And Showing World Record Pictures in Fox Palaces

Mainly because he was cheated in the purchase of a penny arcade and wished to recoup in some amusement enterprise, William Fox 20 years ago got into the motion picture industry, with the same aggressiveness, vision, and industry he had shown in business in New York.

His leasing of his first two movie playhouses was considered one of the biggest theatrical coups up to that time in New York City, just when the film business was beginning to attract attention. From distributor of films Mr. Fox turned to producing thirteen years ago, forming the Fox Film Corp. which at present has agencies all over the world, and films such pictures as "What Price Glory," "7th Heaven," and "Sunrise." A half million people viewed the Glory picture in "The Roxy," New York in two weeks recently, breaking all world records.

Twenty producing companies can work simultaneously in the Fox Studios in New York, and the Hollywood Fox Studios are mammoth.

Fox Theatres Corp., formed a year ago, is building Michigan's new ten-million-dollar Fox Theatre in Detroit, largest theatre in the world except "The Roxy," a Fox theatre, in New York.

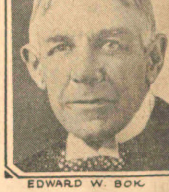
ATWATER KENT NATIONAL RADIO AUDITION

RADIO AUDITION MEDAL

MADAM LOUISE HOMER

MRS. EDGAR STILLMAN KELLEY

A. ATWATER KENT



EDWARD W. BOK

TEN young American singers—presumably the best in the country—will face the microphone at Station WEAF in New York City early in December to sing for fame and fortune. They will be the finalists in the National Radio Audition of the Atwater Kent Foundation of Philadelphia.

This nation-wide quest for radio voices has already revealed hundreds of young singers of promise, who have entered the contests eagerly because the auditions offer them recognition at home and a chance to compete for prizes aggregating $17,500. Distinctive figures are sponsoring the undertaking as a National Audition Committee. They are Madam Louise Homer, the Metropolitan Opera star; Mrs. Edgar Stillman Kelley, president of the National Federation of Music Clubs; Edward W. Bok, former editor of the Ladies' Home Journal, and Mrs. Otto H. Kahn, wife of the world-famous New York banker and music patron.

Winners of state auditions—one boy and one girl—receive silver medals and are taken to their district auditions at the expense of the Foundation to compete with young singers from their neighboring states. Winners of each of the five district auditions—one young man and one young woman in each—receive gold medals and are taken to New York by the Atwater Kent Foundation for the finals, which will be broadcast over a nation-wide network of stations. The awards for these will be as follows:

Winners of first place — one young man and one young woman—will each receive $5,000 cash and two years' tuition in a musical conservatory.

Winners of second place will each receive $2,000 cash and one year's tuition.

Winners of third place will each receive $1,000 and one year's tuition.

Winners of fourth place will each receive $500.

Autumn Fancies

Autumn in Michigan is usually associated with rain, dust, early frosts corn shocks, pumpkins and turnips but this season the circuit is different. A comparatively small amount of rain and practically no dust on account of good roads has seemed to put us many years in front of the times. Oh Boy! Who don't remember the old sodden days of mud and frequent rains, as the poet sings, the "Melancholy Days, Saddest of the year, of wailing winds and leaves brown and sear" and then we read on "It Rains and the wind is never weary" How dear to our hearts are the remembrances of childhood when fond recollection presents them to view. The old orchard down on the farm with its hundred and one different varieties of apples. How we did delight in the shortening sunny days of Indian summer to wander through orchard and climb into the crotches of gnarled trees in search of some mealy ripe fruit which as everybody knows Michigan climate makes more perfect than any other climate on earth. How we did enjoy the "husky rustle of the corn in the wind and the sound of the clover huller, the real harvest days of the year rather than in wheat time when the farmer rounds up his last preparations for winter and battens down his open spaces to house the stock against January and February blasts from the Northland. Apples in those days included such well known stand bys as "greasy pippin", "Tolpa Holkins", "Bell flowers", "Gillflowers", "Seek nofurtherrs", "Baldwins", "Sheepheads", "Pumpkin Sweets", "Sweet Russets", "Rambos", "King Tompkins" and some sort of monstrous sweet apples dark red and often as large as a croquet ball. All these and "Greenings" we used to consume in large quantities, but now its so different. Modern Michigan farmers raise in their clean well-kept scientifically sprayed orchards only such trees as will produce apples of good shipping quality and so hard you can knock a cow down with them. We find "Ben Davis", "Northern Spies", "Wagners" and a lot more we don't just recall which color highly on the tree look awful nice in the barrel and are about as palatable to eat from hand as a fried pine knot. Spraying and love of filthy lucre has deprived the Michigan small boy of one of his favorite diversions—apple eating. In place of the luscious varieties of olden times we have bright clean healthy looking trees pruned to desperation on top and most any of them can be half picked from the ground hard stony apples and not enough real juice to produce the amber fall drink of all true Wolverines. Away with it! Let's get back to the good old days of 1875.

Henry Ford's Product Is Delayed

The much-talked of Ford car has not yet appeared and critics are standing on tip-toe waiting for the great crash and the bang which will ensue when the new creation makes its debut. Hundreds of reports are afloat concerning this little car and some of them no doubt are the wildest imaginings while others may be in a measure true. At any rate we have it authoritively that both Henry Ford and Edsel have been driving the new model and testing it out personally This shows the true metal of Henry Ford. He is a multi-millionaire and has many and varied interests yet with all his business connections he is vitally interested in the latest mechanical masterpiece of the Ford factories. He is resolved nothing shall be put out until it is absolutely faultless mechanically. Report has come to this office that Mr. Ford himself was seen not long ago in the village of Clinton driving a new Ford car and to one of his friends he gave a demonstration which if the friend tells the truth was a stunner.

The man states that Mr. Ford took him to a rather long grade near the town and stopped the machine at the foot of the hill and then started off up and by the time he reached the top the machine was making close to 90 miles an hour. We are of the opinion this should have been about 70 and even if it was that speed, the little child of Henry's brain certainly is a winner among the small fry and ahead of most of the big ones. Another report comes to us that Edsel drives a new model each day going to his business and wherever he appears on the streets of Detroit people gather in great mobs and congest traffic in such a way it is necessary to call out the police reserves. This might also be taken with a grain of salt, but no doubt there is excitement. Professional connisseurs of the motors want to test its speed and they follow like a flock of crows behind, others want to know how it accelerates and how quick the mechanical four-wheel brakes function and so it goes and between curiosity seekers and newspaper cubs the Fords have a hard trying time. So much has been said, true or otherwise about it at this time that if it should not come up to expectations the results might be disasterous to the Fords, but at all events the great motor-buying common people are waiting and longing and holding up business to know and see for themselves what the new "animal" is like. General Motors have got in the first heavy repudiation of small motors by a bunch of country advertising spread pretty generally over this state for which they have paid a fair price but Henry's advertising seems to come entirely free in the way of jokes, jibes and slams at the "flivver". As the saying goes there is never any great calamity without its advantages somewhere, so it may prove with the new Ford cars, and we have faith in the great mechanical genius of a man who built 25 years ago the most practical, simple and durable engine that ever was sold, faith to believe his latest product will be no parody on popularity. Popularity because of great durability and wonderful ease of maintenance, low cost of repairs and general advantages to the average country dweller who is often away from centers of repair and supply. It is not unlikely that something about the gears or some minor defect may have to be corrected before this model will be put on the market, and the Fords with their usual business ability know that the whole motor business is at stake.

The remarkable open fall and suitable weather has worked miracles with the corn crops of this section. Whereas, farmers who complained early in the fall that their corn crop could not possibly pay to husk, now wear expansive grins and seem mighty optimistic. We visited a field shortly be fore Fair time and found ears in abundance—and we say confidentially, the crop will go over big.

When the pesky gophers are busy in the fields throwing up mounds that make haying inconvenient and boring from within to the roots of the plants, it is difficult or impossible to get rid of them. But in the fall when they are making new burrows storing food, and getting ready for the winter it is possible to make a clean up. One of the best baits is wheat poisoned with strychnine dropped into the burrows. Wheat is particularly convenient because it can be dropped through a small hole punched into the top of the tunnel. With vegetable baits, more digging is required to locate the tunnel and make a hole large enough for the insertion of the bait. Also the poisoned wheat keeps well and it is not necessary to prepare fresh bait each day. A bushel of wheat is likely to kill 600 to 700 pocket gophers if carefully applied. Sometimes it is possible to kill 1,000 pocket gophers to a bushel of wheat. Under average conditions a man may expect to cover from 30 to 40 acres of alfalfa in a day and kill nearly all if not all, the pocket gophers. In summer, when new mounds are made only occasionally, and when growing crops cover the field, it is necessary to go over the field repeatedly if the pocket gophers are to be exterminated.

He Talked Too Much

Mayor John Smith of Detroit evidently lost his head and said too much on the premier question of the day, when he insinuated the dry laws could not be enforced. Now the Anti Saloon League is after him and they are going to clean up the border town in regulation style. Here's what the River Rouge Herald published by Mason & Boyd, has to say about it.

"When the Hon. John W. Smith, piqued at his primary defeat, bellered out the command for the hordes of the blind piggers to rally to his support at the coming election, he apparently did not know that the federal authorities in Washington would be interested. Now it is evident that the campaign cry of the Mayor's was in reality an invitation to the prohibition enforcement heads to pay Detroit a personal visit. So they are all here this week and their answer to the Mayor is that the Detroit riyer is to have a patrol such as never existed before. Also the army of federal officials in this city is to be doubled and the courts filled just as fast as the cases can be put through the grand jury.

"No city can defy the federal authorities in the way it seems to be the desire of your Mayor to do, so we will pay Detroit quite an extended visit," the Chief remarked upon arrival.

Mayor Smith is to be asked to tell the federal grand jury just what he knows about liquor selling in socalled fashionable clubs which he mentioned in his after primary pronouncement."

PRODUCE CO-OP, GROWERS' HOPE

Vegetable growers near Detroit and other large cities must organize to market their crop co-operatively to meet the increasing competition from southern states, such as Texas and Florida. Government experts agree.

McKay of the United States Department of Agriculture presented statistics showing that production of vegetables in recent years has increased from three to four times as fast as population.

California alone shipped about twice as many cars in nineteen twenty-six as were shipped in the entire country in nineteen twenty.

"The man who can load his produce on a truck and deliver it at the door of a commission merchant in a large city has little need for the kind of co-operative organization that now i s general among the eastern vegetable growers", Mr. McKay explained.

"But this man as an individual can do nothing to improve marketing conditions. If the growers at the doors of the city markets are not satisfied, despite their advantages over those who are farther away, if they believe that the market can be stabilized further and returns made higher and more certain, they must admit I think, that such improvements require the co-operation of strong marketing agencies which they control."

Mr. McKay declared that, under present conditions, the vegetable growers can not overcome retailing wastes and high costs that discourage consumption. They can however, put the product in the best possible condition for sale, standardize grades and packs eliminate undersirable varieties and encourage better production under a pooling system that makes returns according to quality.

Sour Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowls and gently urges the souring taste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips". Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

KING OF WILD BIRDS FINDS TRAVEL THRILL IN TOURISTS' VISITS

"I don't need to travel", says Bill King, Michigan's king of the wild birds, "all the world comes to my cabin door here in the north woods."

Among the frequent visitors to drive the narrow forest path to the King cabin near Indian River is Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, base ball executive. The judge comes at sundown to see King call the wildest of the wild birds, the grouse, to his hands and shoulders for twilight feeding.

King homesteaded his land on Burt Lake forty years ago. His people ten years before had emigrated from Trumbull County in northwestern Ohio. The journey was made by boat from Cleveland to Cheboygan in May, eighteen seventy-seven. The party was ten days in the Lake Huron ice. They went to Burt Lake from Cheboygan in the first trip made by the old side-wheeler.

Mr. King lives in the depth of the woods with his son, Guy now forty four years old. It is fifty years since he was in Detroit. In forty years the farthest north he has been is Munising, in the Upper Peninsula; the farthest west is Beaver Island and Menominee, and the farthest south is Gaylord, thirty miles away. But as he says, he does not need to travel. All during the summer the resorters from the nearby lakes, attracted by his fame as a bird tamer, wear a path to his cabin door. And in winter he and Guy do without company.

The sight which rewards the visitors, if they arrive at sundown, is sixty-five year old Bill King-white hair falling over his collar—coaxing the shy partridge to alight on his head and shoulders and to cluster about his feet in dozens while he throws grain to them.

TAX SEIZURES TO REACH RECORD

Because of delinquent taxes, the state this year will seize four hundred, four thousand acres of land which is half as much as has been acquired in this manner in all the years of the state's history, according to a compilation completed by Auditor-General O. B. Fuller.

At the present time the state owns 800, twenty-four thousand acres, and with the nineteen twenty-seven addition total area will grow to one million two hundred, twenty eight thousand acres. And there is no indication that the present rate at which delinquent tax land is reverting to the state will subside in the futures.

State officials, particularly Fuller and Edwin R. Havens, who is in charge of the land division of the conservation department are becoming alarmed. They point out that the state already owns large sections of a number of the poorer counties and that these counties gradually are being consumed. They agree that something must be done to prevent these counties from being erased from the map, but as yet there has been no suggestions or plans proposed.

It is due principally to the fact that the timber has been stripped that acre after acre is being surrendered in lieu of taxes. The timber was cut some time ago, but for years the owners held the land, hoping to sell to homesteaders. Success in this was meager, and it is believed the owners have been influenced by conservation propaganda intimating that the conservation department would reforest the land and propagate game if it were surrendered.

Land on which taxes have not been paid for five consecutive years is deeded to the state. It is examined by the auditor-general's department to make certain that there are no squatters before it is signed over to the conservation department.

According to Fuller the intent of the legislature was that the conservation department should sell the property to obtain the overdue taxes and thus return it to the tax rolls. The state has an interest averaging only twenty-four per cent in these lands, and the remainder of the overdue tax belongs to the counties and townships. This is refunded when the land is sold.

The conservation department, however, has refused during the last few years to dispose of the choicest tracts. Only minor pieces are sold to homesteaders.

Administration Where Estate Consists of Less Than Five Hundred Dollars

The Judicature Act provides that where application shall be made to the probate judge for the appointment of an administrator on an intestate estate, the petition may contain an inventory of the estate, appraised under oath by one or more freeholders, at its true cash value, and bond of not less than three hundred dollars, with sureties, to be approved by the Court, conditioned for the payment of the funeral expenses of the deceased within one year from the date of his death.

Upon receiving such petition the judge shall make an investigation of the facts set forth in the petition, and if it shall appear that the deceased left surviving him a widow or children under the age of sixteen years; that he had no real estate, and that the personal estate amounts to less than the sum of five hundred dollars, the court may thereupon grant administration of the estate without notice and without further bonds.

Whenever it shall appear to the satisfaction of the probate judge that an administrator, appointed under the provisions of this act, has, paid the funeral expenses of the deceased, and has paid over to the widow of said deceased, or in case there should be no widow, to the guardian of the minor children of said deceased, all the balance of said estate, the court may forth with discharge such administrator without further accounting and without notice.

WARN POTATO TRUCKERS WARES MUST BE GRADED

Potato truckers in Western Michigan were warned that they now are liable under the new potato grading law which the State Department of Agriculture proposes to enforce rigidly.

The statute makes it unlawful for truckers to have ungraded potatoes in their possession. In offering their tubers for resale, the law requires the package to bear a tag giving the grade, and name and address of the trucker or shipper.

The only persons exempt under the law are growers who are selling their own potatoes direct to consumers, retailers or dealers.

MICHIGAN MEN FIGHT U. S. TAX ON EIGHT HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLAR GIFT

Federal gift taxes were attacked as unconstitutional in the supreme court in an appeal by John W. Blodgett, of Michigan who in nineteen twenty-four made gifts of more than eight hundred and seventy-two thousand dollars on eight hundred thousand dollars of which the federal government sought to levy tax.

Counsel for Blodgett maintained that the tax was direct and prohibited by the constitution.

In opposing the application of the gift tax in the nineteen twenty-four revenue act, counsel asserted that the law was invalid because it was retroactive and had been applied to gifts of state securities which were exempt from federal taxation.

GENIUS 'DICTATES' HER PLEA

GUNS ARE BARRED IN MICHIGAN WOODS OUT OF GAME SEASON

Michigan does not allow a gun of any kind to be carried in the woods out of season. Occassionally a tourist from anther state traveling in the Upper Peninsula will be caught with a gun in his possession and will try and excuse himself by saying that it is intended only as protection against wolves, coyotes and other predatory animals that, he has been given to understand, throng our northern forests.

The aswer to that is that Michigan hires professional trappers to catch the wolves, coyotes and other prowling pests of the north. It found long ago that it was being "stung" by paying bounties, the award frequently being paid two or three times for the killing of the same animal. Sometimes the dead marauder was imported from another state.

FREEZES EARS TO WORSHIP HIS HERO

If you visit a hero's shrine, you're just a tourist—but if you freeze your ears for him, you're pretty near a hero yourself.

Frosted ears were the tribute A P. Johnston, Grand Rapids writer and lecuturer paid to his favorite American hero he admitted recently when a return to Boston reminded him of an ordeal by cold there years ago.

Back in Sweden when the Grand Rapids man was an irrepressible small boy, with a nervous tutor, the pedagogue, after desperate experiementation discovered that young Axel Johnston would sit still and study for the reward of a hero story or two The discovery simplified the tutor's life considerably till his available supply of heroes ran low. Then a Longfellow revival in Stockholm saved the day for him He got hold of a copy of Longfellow's poems in Swedish and for a whole month kept his young pupil on good behavior with the promise of brand new super hero.

At the expiration of the time he acquainted young Johnston with the history of Paul Revere.

Though plenty of travel and lots of experience in North America and South America, too, awaited the young Swedish American, he didn't get back to Boston for a long time. Starting in as newsboy, he had gone through the ranks of newspaper organization and was managing editor of one of the largest Chicago papers when one day in the dead of winter in nineteen ten, business called him to Boston. He got off the train at South Station with a minimum of time to spare and sallied out into a zero day to look up Paul Revere's last resting place.

I took off my hat and recited the poem in English and then repeated it in Swedish for good measure.'

While this went on, the cabby sttod and beat his chilled hands. He listened in silence while his passenger, as he returned to the vehicle, explained that he had fulfilled a sort of chivalric vow to visit Paul Revere's grave first of all the first time he was in Boston

Then I found I had frozen both my ears."

FEAR FAMINE OF LAKE FOOD FISH

Food fish in Lake Michigan may virtually become extinct in the next ten years or so unless stringent action is taken to remedy their present scarcity, commercial fishermen declare.

This means that broiled lake trout, planked whitefish and smoked herring may pass from the epicure's diet and those who undertake a strict Lenten fare may find themselves up against it for something to eat. And that fried perch, the delicious wall-eye and other fresh water species retailed over the counters are also threatened with the limbo of the departed and forgotten.

Over fishing, catches of undersized fish, the use of small-mesh nets, which not only capture the infants of the desirable species but kill off the food supply of their parents—these are some of the reasons attributed for the ever growing scarcity of the ichthyic table article in the Great Lakes.

In some sections of Michigan the commercial fishermen have been hard hit this year. The tugs operating out of Marquette have not lifted enough trout in the last few weeks to supply the local demand. Sometimes it is necessary to lift the nets twice a day to keep the butcher shops in stock. Whitefish seem to have vanished from the waters. Conditions are the same at Ludington and at St. Joseph the nets are rotting in piles and boats are moored to the wharves because it is difficult, almost impossible, to catch enough fish to pay expenses.

What will you be doing at 65?

Statistics show that out of one hundred average men reaching the age of sixty-five, six are wealthy and are able to retire or enjoy the niceties of life without worry. Nine are self-supporting but are compelled to work. Eighty-five are dependent upon children, relatives or charity.

This is a sad state of affairs and could, in most cases, be avoided.

Our booklet "Building An Income Fund" shows how easy it is for a man, during his active years, to lay by a fund which will provide a certain income in his old age. Your name and address written on the margin of this advertisement and mailed to us will bring you a copy of this very interesting booklet.

The company, composed of Richard Cowen and Henry Walters of Chicago will manufacture raincoats, with a possibility of later developing into other rubber goods lines.

The firm will employ about forty persons at the start, most of whom will be girls, with the possibility that within a short time a considerably larger number will be added to the payroll.

IONIA— The Hayes-Ionia plant here has been closed for a ten day period according to word issued at the plant's offices, to allow the Menle mills in Louisville Ky., to produce sufficient wood stock ahead to again warrant the place here being put in operation.

A short time ago the wood working division was taken out of the Ionia plant to clear the way for expansion of the metal working division, the former work being transferred to the Mengle mills. Inability of the latter to keep apace of the increased metal division's output is given as the reason for the shutdown.

However, prospects are bright for a busy winter season, it was said at the plant. Several hundred employes are affected by the lay-off.

The new plan is to have a fifty-fifty division between the county and the township. The resolution was passed by the supervisors but they decided to give the voters of the county an opportunity to pass on the change and will be voted on at the April election.

turned backward to
Old Time Hospitality

Hotel efficiency reached a vanishing point in whittling guest rooms down to hall-room size, while people continue to grow to full height and weight, and ever more expansive in living habits and travelling needs.

So the new and beautiful Detroit-Leland turned boldly back in its architecture, to man-size rooms, to wide, airy corridors, to numerous, ample and inviting public rooms and lobby arrangements.

Here, luxury is homelike. Here is a cuisine that has already become famous as Detroit's finest. Here is a management and service that seems to anticipate the guest's every need, and yet, so quiet and unobtrusive that there is no suggestion of officiousness.

DIRT ROADS LURE TO MOTORISTS ON WEEK END DRIVE

Winding dirt roads possess a charm which is very keen, and which more and more city dwellers are learning to appreciate every year. To follow such a road is to escape the tedium of the main traveled route. with its unbroken procession of cars, its ever-present refreshment stands, and its many other reminders of the matter-of-fact world which we like to forget on our week end drives.

How often in driving along the main highway, do we catch a glimpse of alluring scenery, as we flash past the exit from one of these roads. Our imagination is stimulated by the very suddenness with which it twists from sight, after revealing just enough of its tree arched loveliness to rouse deesire. There is always the temptation, at such times to turn back and pursue the beckoning unknown and we are seldom disappointed if we yield.

The network formed by these unimportant roads is more extensive than the main highway system itself; yet to date so few have discovered them that they are all but deserted, even on Sundays. They are a new and unknown world ours for exploring.. And they are well worth exploration. They offer a diversity of scenery, and a contact with elemental things, which are all the more enjoyable because different from our everyday experience.

U. S. ASKS STATE AID DUCK CENSUS

Sportsmen throughout Michigan are requested by conservationists to assist the Bureau of Biological Survey in its recently instituted duck census,.

It is the purpose of the census to determine whether ducks are increasing or on the wane. Observers all over the country will note the approximate number of ducks and the various species they see in a certain territory on certain days, and forward their observations, to Washington. By this method the bureau will be able to gain some idea of the numerical strength of wildfowl at various months of the year for comparison with future seasons.

MONTCALM POTATO MEN IN GREENVILLE CONTEST

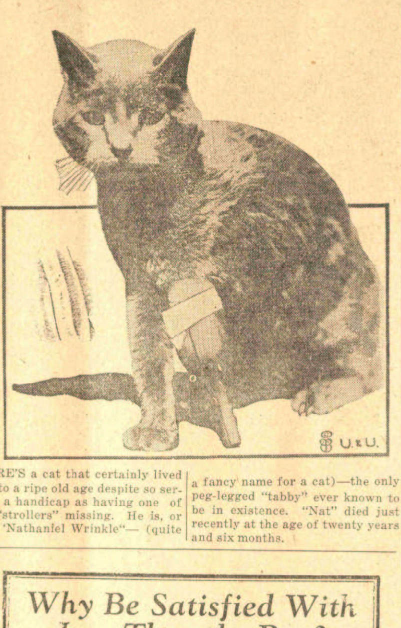
PEG-LEGGED CAT LIVES 20 YEARS



HERE'S a cat that certainly lived to a ripe old age despite so serious a handicap as having one of its "strollers" missing. He is, or was 'Nathaniel Wrinkle"— (quite a fancy name for a cat)—the only peg-legged "tabby" ever known to be in existence. "Nat" died just recently at the age of twenty years and six months.

'U' EXPERIENCES MAGIC GROWTH

With a building program of ten million dollars completed and with more buildings under construction and still other projected, the University of Michigan has expanded rapidly during the last decade. The growth during this period has been the most rapid in the history of the institution, and it is only this year with its enrollment slightly below that of nineteen twenty-six that administrative officials are being given a breathing spell.

Building for the future, the administrative officials, backed by the state legislature, have proceeded carefully. The result has been a series of imposing structures, strong, masisve yet architecturally beautiful. A ride along State street and a glimpse of Angell hall, its massive pillars, suggestive of strength of the institution never fails to thrill the Ann Arbor visitors. In like manner, the Lawyers' club, the big library, the University hospital, the Martha Cook building and others leave their impress.

By January, fifteen, nineteen twenty-eight the new nine hundred thousand dollar museum of zoology will have been completed and another large unit will then have been added to the university group A Women's league building is being projected and work is to start next year on a new elementary school.

Among the new buildings are the James B. Angell hall, the building of the College of Literature, Science and Arts; the William L. Clements library; the new Physics building; half of the present Dental building; the university storehouse and shops, part of the heating and power plant; the Couzens nurses' home; the mommoth new University hosiptal; the Thomas Henry Simpson Memorial Institute for Medical Research; the Lawyers' club; the Martha Cook building; the new Architecture building; the University High school, the East Engineering building. the Medical building. These are exclusive of the strutures being erected under the athletic expansion program, which numbers the stadium, the Yost field house, the Palmer field house, and the intramural sports building.

MUSKEGON VET FIREMAN NOW IS ON POLICE FORCE

Back in the days when fireman were known as "runners", Frank Curry was a member of the Muskegon fire deparment. That was more than fifty years ago, long before the days of the modern motor driven fire apparatus. Today, however, Mr. Curry still is serving the city, although not in the role of fireman. Mr. Curry is a member of the police department and walks a beat.

When the last horse drawn fire wagon was dicarded in favor of the motor driven apparatus, the city looked around for the veterans of the department. Various men, came forward as veteran fireman, yet the veteran of them all was found walking a beat as a patrolman and as a result Mr. Curry held an honor place in the parade.

FISH SWITCH DIET IN HOUGHTON LAKE TO FOOD FOR DUCKS

One of these days the fish in Houghton Lake will rise to the surface, flap their fins and quack like ducks, the anglers, a sadly disillusioned crew, declares.

Something has happened to Houghton's fish—a balance wheel in their makeup is loose—for they are no longer fish, in the true sense of the word, but ducks, the same anglers add. All they need is feathers and a few other avian accoutrements to complete the metamorphosis.

Houghton's wall-eyes and pickerel, justly famed throughout Michigan for their ferocity pecularily all year. They have steadfastly refused to bite. Minnows, angleworms, crawfish, plugs, spinners, spoons, wabblers, all these have failed to tempt their appetites. Finally the conservation department was called upon to discover why the fish refused to be fish, and bite.

A gill net was set out by conservation officers and the stomachs of the captured fish were examined carefully. Though the waters swarmed with minnows and other natural food, all these had been rejected. The fish had been eating wild rice and wild celery, which is duck provender. Each and every stomach was crammed with rice and celery—nothing else.

MICHIGAN TECH FAILS TO SEE NEED FOR AUTO BAN

While many institutions of higher education throughout the country are banning the use of the automobile by students, in an effort to eliminate joy rides and raise scholastic standards, no such need is felt at the Michigan College of Mining and Technology, now popularly known as Michigan Tech

The use of automobiles by students of Michigan Tech has not been abused. Automobiles in fact, have been found most convenient, particularly by members of classes engaged in field work, surveying and study methods employed at the mines, mills and smelters of the district.

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night.

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment. Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

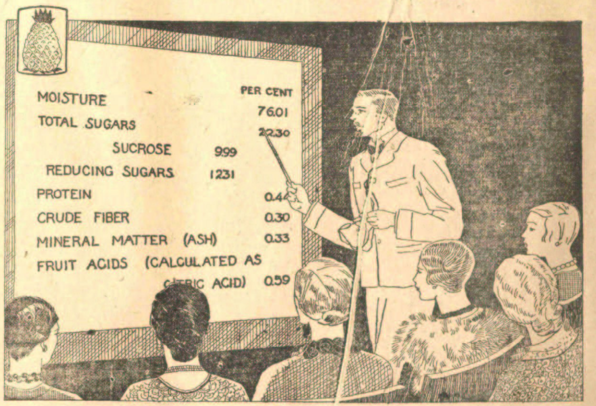
A FRUIT OF HIGH FOOD VALUE



THE modern housewife has progressed many stages beyond the mere taste of things in determining what foods she will provide for her family. She wants to know about the food values, the calories and carbohydrates, the vitamins and digestive qualities.

Pineapple is a food the consumption of which has grown rapidly in recent years, owing to the fact that it is being canned on its native heath, Hawaii, in constantly increasing quantities. The investigations of its food value have kept step with this increase in production.

"There are better sources of a single vitamin," says a bulletin of the University of Hawaii, "but as an all around source of vitamins the canned pineapple takes an unusually high place. No other canned product, except tomatoes, is rich in vitamins."

Must Ripen in the Field

There is a marked difference in the sugar content of the pineapple, depending upon whether the fruit has been allowed to ripen on the plants or is removed for shipping after it has reached its full size but has not yet ripened. In the latter event it may be kept for a number of days or weeks and will turn yellow so that it resembles the naturally ripened fruit to the casual observer, but this yellowing of the picked fruit is not then accompanied by the formation of sugar, and the composition of the artificially ripened fruit is never the same as that of the naturally ripened product. Analysis shows, according to this same authority, an average of 12.06% in the naturally ripened fruit, against 3.66% in that picked green and allowed to "ripen" off the plant. As a matter of universal practice in Hawaii the fruit is allowed to ripen in the field.

The sugar content of pineapple is of a type which is ready for human assimilation, according to Dr. A. L. Dean, Director of the Experiment Station of the University of Hawaii, and pineapple has a higher food value than most fruits, largely because of its high sugar content and its vitamins.

The analysis for this table was made on a composite sample of both fruit and syrup made by comminuting and mixing the contents of six cans of "Fancy" sliced pineapple taken at random from the 1925 pack of six different canneries.

In Memoriam

To the brave boys living and dead, who struggled on Flanders Field and the Argonne, Chateau Thierry, we this day extend the hallowed honors of the civilized world. Their heroic sacrifices on the field of battle, their untold sufferings in the hospitals, and their uncomplaining cheerful demeanor amid the hardships and horrors of shell-racked and shot-torn battle fronts, in the loathsome prison dens and before the barage laid down by '75's' and "whizz bangs" has been the pride and amazement of mankind. Their conduct in the World War is merely the repetition of the spirit of 1776, when the reverses of the Battle of Long Island and Valley Forge afflicted the Patriots. We feel that to bow the head in silent reverence for their sainted dead and to offer the hand of sympathizing fellowship to the survivors is the bounden duty of the American people under the Stars and Stripes

State Debating League

North Adams High School will again take part in the State Debating League. The question this year is: Resolved, That the Direct Primary System of Nominating Candidates for Public Office in the United Statss Should Be Abolished.

Note: This question shall not include the Presidential Primary or the Presidential Preferential Primary or any Primary which might be used to nominate a candidate for President of the United States.

The first debate will be held with the Homer High School at North Adams, Friday evening at the Congregational Church at 7:45 p. m. North Adams has the Affirmative, and the team will consist of the following: Harold Gordon, Gladys Holkins and Ione Young. The judges will be from Hillsdale College.

The question is an interesting one and educational. It is a question that every voter should know more about. We hope to have a large attendance at this first debate The admission will be 15c for students and 25c for others.

On this same date 240 high schools in every part of the state will meet in 120 debates, in which 720 high school pupils are participating.

Every high school that qualifies for the Elimination Series of debates will be presented with the University of Michigan Wall Plaque Trophy, which is a mahogany shield eighteen inches high by fifteen inches wide, upon which is superimposed a nine inch solid bronze medallion with embossed lettering.

Only 64 high schools can qualify for the Elimination Series which will culminate in the Eleventh Annual State Championship Debate to be held at Ann Arbor in Hill Auditorium on Friday April 27th.

The two schools participating in this final debate will each receive a trophy cup presented by the University of Michigan Extension Division, and each of the six debaters will receive a gold watch as a testimonial of individual merit.

Obituary

Nathaniel Albert Daniels was born in Niagara County, State of New York January fifteenth in the year 1832. He came to Michigan with his parents when three years of age and settled in the township of Adams.

In the year 1860 he was united in marriage with Sarah Ann Hard To this union four children were born, two passing away in infancy and two surviving, Mrs. W. A. Barker and Mrs. Eugene Mallory both of North Adams.

He has made his home for the last fourteen years with his daughter Mrs. Mallory. He has enjoyed most excellent health until very recently, his mind and memory being unimpared till the last.

He has always been of a most cheerful disposition, bearing the loss of eyesight and other infirmities of old age with great patience.

His last illness was of but a weeks duration he passed away Tuesday November 8th at 10:30.

Nathaniel Daniel of North Adams celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday anniversary on Saturday Jan. 15, 1921. He was in fair health but his wife was quite poorly.

For over 80 years Mr. Daniels has been a resident of Hillsdale county His ancestors were connected with the early history of this country. His grandfather, Captain Carl Daniels, was for several years with George Washington during the Revolutionary War. His grand mother Patience Richardson, lived near Boston at the time of the "tea party." She saw the tea thrown over board. She had ridden in on horse back and she managed to get a small portion of the tea and conceal it on her person. Her mother would occasionally go down into the cellar, where the tea was kept in a concealed place, and make and drink it, a little at a time. There was a heavy fine for any one caught with any of the tea in their possession.

Israel Daniels, father of Nathaniel Daniels, was in the war of 1812. The mother of Nathaniel was born in the state of Maine, but her parents moved to Vermont when she was three years old, and a little later to New York state. The family came to Adams township in 1836, when the township was a wilderness.

RESOLUTIONS

The committee appointed to draft suitable resolutions of the death of our late member Mary Culbert would respectfully submit the following as their report:

WHEREAS: Mary Culbert, a member of "The Country Woman's Improvement Club", was removed from this life September 4, 1927:

BE IT RESOLVED: That while words are inadequate to express our great grief, and any attempt to eulogize her worth as a member of this club are idle, yet we deeply feel that her death should receive more than passing notice at this time.

We had come to love her as a sister and friend, and as such we shall mourn her untimely death.

BE IT RESOLVED: That these resolutions be spread upon the records of this Club and that the secretary of this club, be instructed to transmit a copy of the same to the husband and son of our dear sister, to whom we extend our deepest sympathy at this time.

She can't Eat Grass Enough

A cow producing 35 lbs. of milk daily cannot maintain that yield unless she has about 30 lbs. of dry matter in her feed.

Fresh pasture, which is nearly 80% water, contains but a small percentage of dry matter. This means that the cow will have to eat at least 175 lbs. of grass per day if she is to maintain both condition and milk yield.

Will your cows be able to find and crop that amount of pasture every day this summer? That is what you are expecting of them if you rely on grass alone. The result? A loss of milk and money, because few cows can eat more than 90 lbs. of grass in one day.

The remedy is simple. Feed Larro with pasture through the season—at the ratio of 1 lb. of Larro for each 5 lbs. of milk when pasture is plentiful, with a gradual increase as summer advances. Thus you can prevent the summer slump in milk; bring your cows into the fall in better condition for their winter work; and make more profit for yourself.

TABLET RAISED BY CADILLAC'S KIN TO FOUNDER OF DETROIT

It is far from Montauban in Southern France under the shadow of the Pyrenees, to Detroit, and an even more impressive jump from sixteen fifty-eight to the present, but the barriers of distance and time pale beside the accomplishments of such a man as Antoine Lamothe-Cadillac, founder of the city of Detroit.

Cadillac was born March, fifth, sixteen fifty-eight in the old Chateau of St. Nicholas-le Grave, near Montauban. He spent his boyhood years there before joining that immortal company of French explorers, who as Steward Edward White of Grand Rapids, said-- "have laughed in more far corners of the earth" than the men of any other nationality.

The old Chateau still belongs to the family, not extraordinary in France where family feeling is exceptionally strong and family property is held through the centuries as a matter f pride, and then it was announced that the American Legion was coming to France to hold its convention the family decided that the occasion offered a good opportunity to unveil a tablet to their illustrious ancestor.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLAR FIRE AT CLARE

A two-story frame tool building with all its contents, was destroyed by fire belonging to W. E. Currie of Detroit, and which is located on his one thousand acre farm one mile south and three miles west of Clare. The building housed tractors, hay machines, threshing machines and many other farm implements.

The fire was caused when Clair Walter an employe went into the building to get some gas from the drum. He was using an open pail but left his lantern setting in the door of the building. As he came out some of the gas was spilled and the fumes came in contact with the lantern and caused the fire.

The Clare rural fire truck was summoned but nothing could be done to save a thing. The fire spread rapidly to the oil and gas which was housed in this building.

MARKETING BUREAU PAYS DIVIDENDS OF 7 PER CENT

Agriculture,, as well as Wall St., has its melon cutting parties.

The Berlin Farm Bureau Association, a co-operative organization engaging in marketing farm products, has just declared a five hundred per cent stock dividend. It has issued five shares of common stock for each common membership certificate held by its members.

The association has paid dividends regularly on its seven per cent investment notes since it was organized five years ago, but this is the first distribution of membership certificates. The stock dividend passes the company's surplus along to the stockholders.

After the dividend was declared, the stockholders voted to recognize and incorporate under the co-operative laws of Michigan as the Berlin Co-operative Co. The new company assumes the assets and liabilities of the Berlin Farm Bureau. D. R. Edgerly of Jenison is retained as manager.

REED CITY'S GIFT WINS OSCEOLA COUNTY SEAT

The board of supervisors of Osceola County adopted a resolution accepting the court house, jail and sheriff's residence which Reed City provided without cost to the county in consideration of the removal of the county seat from Hersey to Reed City.

This action was the final legal step to be taken to assure Reed City that the county seat would be located there permanently.

OLD FORT PARK TO BE IMPROVED

Although situated on the extreme tip of Keweenaw peninsula of Michigan, the furthest outpost of Michigan's frontier, the Fort Wilkins State park enjoyed a splendid patronage this summer. Plans are under way to enlarge the park increase its facilities and prepare to accommodate a large crowd of visitors in nineteen twenty-eight, according to Charles Beatty, who has been in charge of the ancient fort since it was taken over by the state.

During June, July and August, seven thousand, four hundred fifty-eight automobiles brought campers and tourists into the park with a total of thirty -seven thousand three hundred and thirty three persons. Many pitched tents in the park and spent from one to five weeks in the open. The largest number of cars for one day was three hundred and fifty-six.

Persons who knew the old fort as it was five years ago before it became a state park would not recognize it today. Under the careful eye of Beatty, who went into the park service from a job as state trapper, the dilapidated stockade and barracks have been restored to their original condition Even the shingles on the buildings are hand hewn exactly like the original pine shucks.

The stockade of tall pointed poles which once surrounded the fort and kept away hostile Chippewa Indians has been rebuilt.

To get rid of rats and mice begin by closing up all openings through which they are likely to get into the house. Store all supplies in tight metal or glass containers. Dispose of waste garbage in tightly covered receptacles, regularly emptied. Set traps. Get some barium carbonate, a poison, and distribute it according to the directions given on the package, by mixing it with foods frequently eaten by rats and mice, and placing it where it will be eaten.

DR. WENLEY FINDS HATRED FADING

The American has arrived.

To Britian this appears phenomenal, yet this feeling is general in the British Isles, according to Dr. Robert M. Wenley, professor of Michigan who has just completed a two year stay in England, during which time he was director of the American University union.

The war brought about conditions which so accelerated the forward movement of the United States that its position is about a quarter of a century ahead of what it would have been had no war taken place, is the view Dr. Wenley has taken since residing in England.

America's position among other nations today is similar to that held by Great Britain at the close of the Napoleonic wars, Dr. Wenley believes, yet he is of the opinion that these post-war difficulties will straighten themselves out, and that definite results in this direction will be obtainable within the next five years. Going back to the Napoleonic wars, he points out that conditions in Europe did not adjust themselves until eighteen thirty-five or twenty years after the close of the conflict. And he states, the wars of that period were fought on a considerably smaller scale.

Anti-American feeling noticeable in spots in the British Isles in the summer of nineteen twenty-five, the time that Dr. Wenley went to Europe, and at the same time strong in France, has died out considerably, he believes, with the result that conditions are becoming better.

LARGEST APPLE TREE IN LAPEER 63 YEARS OLD

What is probably the largest apple three in Lapeer county stand on the premises of John N. Dee at North Branch. The tree measures ten feet and four inches in circumference one foot from the ground, and just below the spreading branches it measures nine feet and ten inches around.

The tree is a member of the rather numerous Pippin family, and was set out sixty-three years ago by the late Charles Dee, father of the present owner. The fruit from this huge tree is of excellent flavor.

SLAYER OF BEAR TO SAVE HIS CHILDREN IS FREED

Black bear may be killed to protect life and property in spite of the law prohibiting the killing of these animals, a jury in Delta county has ruled.

It was the first time, according to conservation officials that this law has been tested.

Albert Proehl, of Rapid River, was arrested there for killing two bears. He pleaded not quilty to violating the law because, he said the man killers threatened the lives of his children on their way to school. Proehl was acquitted.

32 STATES HELP TO EAT MICHIGAN ONION CROP

Michigan's record breaking onion crop last year was widely distributed, according to the summary of the nineteen twenty six deal as compiled by R. H. Shoemaker, representative of the State and Federal departments of agriculture.

The crop was shipped to two hundred and thirty two cities in thirty two states and sales averaged two dollars and forty five cent a hundred weight. Hooper ,in Allegan County, was the leading shipping point, loading seven hundred and ninety six of the two thousand, one hundred ninety three cars shipped from the State. Michigan advanced from eighth to seventh place as a producer of onions in the United States.

PARTRIDGES SCARCER IN NORTH THAN WOLVES

The sharp decrease in the partridge population in the woods of Michigan, with a possibility of extinction within a few years, is observed by Dr. John N. Lowe, of Marquette, biologist for the Michigan Department of Conservation. "In six thousand miles of travel by automobile and on foot over the side roads and through the forests of the Upper Peninsula this summer, I have seen more wolves than partridge," he says.

"Partridges are near extinction —so near, in fact, that it is entirely up to the sportmen of the district whether the bird can ever be restored. I have made a careful record of every partridge I have seen.

These birds, native to the spruce woods of the Keweenaw Peninsula have been plentiful until a few years ago. Almost overnight they seem to have disappeared and only occasionally is a covey observed, even in the densest forest.

Your Prosperity Hinges on the Prosperity of Your Home Town

The Mark of The Beast

By RUDYARD KIPLING

East of Suez, some hold, the direct control of Providence ceases; Man being there handed over to the power of the Gods and Devils of Asia and the Church of England Providence only exercising an occasional and modified supervision in the case of Englishmen.

This theory accounts for some of the more unnecessary horrors of life in India; it may be stretched to explain my story.

My friend Strickland of the Police, who knows as much of natives of India as is good for any man, can bear witness to the facts of the case. Dumoise our doctor, also saw what Strickland and I saw. The inference which he drew from the evidence was entirely incorrect He is dead now; he died in a rather curious manner. which has been elsewhere described.

When Fleete came to India he owned a little money and some land in the Himalayas, near a place called Dharmsala. Both properties had been left to him by an uncle and he came out to finance them. His knowlerge of natives was, of course, limited, and he complained of the difficulties of the language.

He rode in from his place in the hills to spend New Years in the station, and he stayed with Strickland On New Year's Eve there was a big dinner at the club, and the night was excusably wet. When men foregather from the uttermost ends of the Empire, they have a right to be riotous. The Frontier had sent down a contingent o' Catch-em-Alive-O's who had not seen twenty white faces for a year, and were used to riding fifteen miles to dinner at the next Fort at the risk of a Khyberee bullet where their drink should lie. They profited by their new security, for they tried to play pool with a curled-up-hedge-hog found in the garden and one of them carried the marker round the room in his teeth. Half a dozen planters had come in from the south and were talking "horse" to the Biggest Liar in Asia, who was trying to cap all their stories at once. Everybody was there, and there was a general closing up of ranks and taking stock of our losses in dead or disabled that had fallen during the past year. It was a very wet night, and I remember that we sang "Auld Lang Syne" with our feet in the Polo Championship Cup, and our heads among the stars, and swore that we were all dear friends. The some of us went away and annexed Burma and some tried to open up the Soudan and were opened up by Fuzzies in that cruel scrub outside Euakim, and some found stars and medals, and some were married, which was bad, and some did other things which were worse, and the others of us stayed in our chains and strove to make money on insufficient experiences.

Fleete began the night with sherry and bitters, drank champagne steadily up to desert, then raw, rasping Capri with all the strength of whisky, took Benedictine with his coffee, four or five whiskies and sodas to improve his pool strokes, beer and bones at half-past two, winding up with old brandy. Consequently, when he come out, at half-past three in the morning into fourteen degrees of frost, he was very angry with his horse for coughing, and tried to leap-frog into the saddle. The horse broke away and went to his stables. so Strickland and I formed a Guard of Dishonor to take Fleete home.

Our road lay through the bazaar close to a little temple of Hanuman the Monkey-god, who is a leading divinity worthy of respect. All gods have good points, just as have all priests. Personally, I attach much importance to Hanumen, and am kind to his people—the great grey apes of the hills. One never knows when one may want a friend

There was a light in the temple, and as we passed we could hear the voices of men chanting hymns In a native temple, the priests rise at all hours of the night to do honor to their god. Before we could stop him, Fleete dashed up the step patted two priests on the back, and was gravely grinding the ashes of his cigar-butt ito the forehead of the red, stone image of Hannman. Strickland tried to drag him out, but he sat down and said solemnly;

"Shee that. "Mark of the B—besaht. I made it . Ishn't it fine.'

In half a minute the temple was alive and noisy and Strickland who knew what came of polluting gods, said that things might occur. He by virtue of his official position, long residence in the country, and weakness for going among the natives, was known to the priests and he felt unhappy. Fleete sat on the ground and refused to move. He said that "good old Hanuman" made a very soft pillow.

Then, without any warning, a Silver Man came out of a recess behind the image of the god. He was perfectly naked in that bitter, bitter cold and his body shone like frosted silver, for he was what the Bible calls 'a leper as white as snow". Also he had no face, because he was a leper of some year's standing, and his disease was heavy upon him. We stooped to haul Fleete up, and the temple was filling and filling with folk who seemed to spring from the earth when the Silver Man ran in under our arms, makng a noise exactly like the mewing of an otter, caught Fleete round the body and dropped his head on Fleete's breast before we could wrench him away. Then he retired to a corner and sat mewing while the crowd blocked the doors.

The priests were very angry until the Silver Man touched Fleete. That nuzzling seemed to sober them.

At the end of a few minute's silence one of the priests came to Strickland and said, in perfect English. "Take your friend away He has done with Hanuman, but Hanuman has not done with him.' The crowd gave room and we carried Fleete into the road.

Strickland was very angry. He said that we might all three have been knifed, and that Fleete should thank his stars that he had escaped without injury.

Fleete thanked no one. He said that he wanted to go to bed. He was gorgeously drunk.

We moved on, Strickland, silent and wrathful, until Fleete was taken with violent shivering fits and sweating. He said that the smells of the bazaar were overpowering and he wondered why slaughterhouses were permitted so near English residences. "Can't you smell the blood, said Fleete.

We put him to bed at last, just as the dawn was breaking, and Strickland invited me to have another whiskey and soda. While we were drinking he talked of the trouble in the temple, and admitted that it baffled him completely. Strickland hates being mystified by natives, because his business in life is to overmatch them with their own weapons. He has not yet succeeded in doing this, but in fifteen or twenty years he will have made some small progress.

"They should have mauled us," he said, "instead of mewing at us. I wonder what they meant. I don't like it one little bit."

I said that the Managing Committee of the temple would in all probability bring a criminal action against us for insulting their religion. There was a section of the Indian Penal code which exactly met Fleete's offense. Strickland said he only hoped and prayed that they would do this. Before I looked into Fleete's room and saw him lying on his right side scratching his left breast. Then I went to bed cold, depressed and unhappy at seven o'clock in the morning.

At one o'clock I rode over to Strickland's house to inquire after Fleete's head. I imagined that it would be a sore one. Fleete was breakfasting and seemed unwell. His temper was gone, for he was abusing the cook for not supplying him with an underdone chop. A man who can eat raw meat after a wet night is a curiosity. I told Fleete this and he laughed.

"You breed queer mosquitoes in these parts." he said. "I've been bitten to pieces, but only in one place."

"Let's have a look at the bite, said Strickland. "It may have gone down since this morning."

While the chops were being cooked, Fleete opened his shirt and showed us, just over his left breast a mark the perfect double of the black rosettes—the five or six irregular blotches arranged in a circle—on a leopard's hide. Strickland looked and said, "It was only pink this morning, It's grown black now."

Old Folks Say Doctor Caldwell is Right

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for forty seven years and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next imprtance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect. .

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of forty seven years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently without griping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation. It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hpe, but go to the druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

SISTERS SEPARATED FOR 52 YEARS ARE REUNITED AT OWOSSO

Mrs. LaSalle Growe, wife of a farmer living south of Owosso, and her sister, Mrs. Catherine Coleman, of Boston, have just concluded a visit that was their first meeting in fifty-two years, during forty-four years of which neither knew where to find the other.

The two women were the daughters of Mr and Mrs. Martin Shea, of Ispheming. When Mrs. Growe was eight years of age, her mother died, and another farmily took the present Mrs Coleman and moved to St. Louis, Mo. She wrote a few letters and then her father heard no more from her. Four years later the father died, and the present Mrs. Growe came to Owosso to live with an uncle.

Years passed by, Mrs. Growe married and reared a family, but not until eight years ago did she learn the whereabouts of her long-missing sister. Her brother, William Shea, learned through a distant relative that the sister was in Boston and confirmed it. Three years ago Mrs Growe's son visited her sister and arranged a visit.

Mrs. Growe declared she never would have recognized her sister, but Mrs. Coleman recognized Mrs. Growe at once because of her resemblance to their mother.

TONS OF CARP TAKEN IN NETS BOARDED TO AWAIT HIGHER PRICE

Tons and tons of carp are being caught at Menominee in seining operations by fishermen who have "live ponds" in which to keep their catch until market conditions warrant sale. Carp at present are worth but twenty-five dollars a ton, but next fall they may bring as high as twenty-five cents a pound, live weight. The New York market takes many at that time. They are transported in tank cars, each car carrying twenty tons or more. The carp are so numerous along the shore that they often crowd up on the beach. When spawning they try to get as near shore as possible to deposit their eggs and milt.. They spawn only at night, and at daylight, they seek deep water where they remain until the cool of the evening. One fisherman uses a sixteen hundred foot seine and confines his catch in a pond of one thoousand feet and extending six hundred feet out into the bay. Chicken wire and wooden stakes enclose the pond. One lift of this monster seine often brings in a ton of carp, which are then transferred to the pen.

Once in a while the greatest truth is told by the biggest liar.

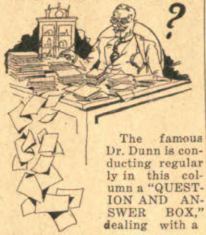
DO YOU KNOW ?



The famous Dr. Dunn is conducting regularly in this column a "QUESTION AND ANSWER BOX," dealing with a large number of subjects of general interest to the readers of this paper. You are invited to send in your questions to Dr. Dunn, care of this paper, and they will be given prompt consideration; and where deemed of general interest, will be answered through this column so far as space permits.

Dr. Dunn has for a long time been a member of the executive staff of the Michigan Mutual Liability Company of Detroit, and has become famous through his weekly broadcasting over WGHP. The doctor has had wide professional, commercial and sociological experience, and while the absolute accuracy of the answers to all questions is not guaranteed, the most authentic sources of information will be the basis of all replies.

Q. Dear Dr. Dunn. Where can Michigan motorists obtain reliable information as to road conditions obtaining in the southern United States for late Fall and Winter travel. A number of friends of the writer are destrous of taking short trips to visit relatives this winter in various of the southern states; and would like to know precisely what roads are in best condition and what are the preferred routes.

A. Anticipating these motorists needs, the Touring Bureau of the Michigan Mutual Liability Company, 3154 Cass Avenue, Detroit, Cadillac 9761, has been carrying on a thorough investigation of southern road conditions during the past several weeks. With the aid to data furnished by the various road commissioners of the states of Ohio, Pennsylvania, W. Virginia, Virgina, Maryland North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Louisiana, Alabama, Mississipi, Tennessee and Kentucky, the Touring Bureau is making an intensive study of road conditions and proposed improvements. Furthermore, the scout car of the touring bureau is just now completing a five thousand mile road tour in the southern states, logging all the best routes and securing data and information as to the road conditions, and which roads should be traveled over and what roads avoided. This data will shortly be completed; and motorists desiring information on southern road conditions can be assured of accurate information as regards routing, logs, etc., and the precise conditions of all roads for Fall and Winter travel, by getting in touch with the Touring Bureau of the Michigan Mutual Liability Company, 3154 Cass Avenue, Detroit, Cadillac 9761.

The route followed by the scout car of the Michigan Mutual Liability Company is logging southern roads go from Detroit south to Toledo, southeast to Wheeling, W. Virginia, Uniontown, Pennsylvania, Washington, D. C., taking in the historical territory such as Hagerstown Gettysburg Chambersburg and other places in Pennsylvania that are all rich in historical interest. From Washington D.C., the route will be directly south by way of the Shenandoah Valley going through Natural Bridge, Virginia, Roanoke, Raleigh, Charlotte, North Carolina, Charleston and Savannah, Georgia then to Jacksonville, Florida and the various traveled highways within the State of Florida. From Florida the route will lie along the Gulf of Mexico to Talahassee and New Orleans, Jackson, Mississippi, Montgomery and Birmingham, Alabama, then to Atlanta, Georgia, Chattanooga and Knoxville, Tennessee, then return to Detroit via Lexington, Dayton and Toledo.

All told the scout car has traveled in the neighborhood of five thousand miles, and has brought back accurate logs and preferred routes for the motorist traveling south this winter. In addition several hundred photographs were taken of show places opened up by the new highways, and a considerable mass of information gathered as to the best stopping places, camping spots and general tourist information.

SCHOOLS SEEK MEDICAL LORE

Teaching of medical history in the public school was undertaken through the medium of a lecture series in eighty-nine high schools last year and is to be extended this year, it was announced by Dr. W. D. Henderson, director of the extension division of the University of Michigan.

The lecture series, a feature of the Michigan health education service, and carried on under the auspices of the joint committee on public health education of the state, was given at high school assemblies in forty-three cities and in the schools of seven counties, in the southern and central part of the lower peninsula.

Dr. Nathan Sinai, a worker in the extension division is now visiting schools in six counties—St. Joseph, Cass, Berrien, Barry, Allegan and Van Buren— with a view to arranging for the nineteen twenty-seven twenty-eight series being given there.

W. C. T. U. Column

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

W. C. T. U. Column

"Wear the white ribbon, my sister,
O wear it at home!
Influence there may re-echo
To heaven's high dome.
Children around you at play,
Callers who drop in today,
Carry a message away
Though you may not roam."

Dr. Quinton S. Walker, pastor of the First M. E. Church, welcomed the Convention on behalf of the churches by saying, "We are workers together with God."

Geo. B. Dollivar, editor of the city spoke for the press and declared that after travelling in 7 of the wettest countries of Europe he was satisfied the U. S. was a good place to live in, also that men whether wet or dry no longer laugh at the W. C. T. U. for they know its members always vote the W. C. T. U. ticket. Mrs. Fulton, 3rd district president, welcomed the Convention to her district saying that the 19th amendment, giving women the right to vote, would have to be repealed before the 18th could be. Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Stewart spoke for the local union, also Mrs. A. J. Knapp, President of the Mich. Federation of Women's Clubs, who said that the 60,000 club women of the state were behind the ideals of the W. C. T. U. Response to these greetings was given by Mrs. Mable Gardner of Royal Oak who was glad for increase in membership because "just as we always use a double thread to sew on a button so we need united strength to fight the liquor forces." Every woman of the church should be a member of W. C. T. U.

Dr. Kellogg, head of the Sanitarium deplored the fact that "there is not enough in the papers about Prohibition since it went into effect and hardly an article in our city papers on the effects of alcohol unless I write it myself." There were 134 Keely cases where now there are 27.

Length of life has increased in last 7 years. We have more noise but less whisky. White Ribbon songs by all and a group of songs by Mrs. Godon Riley concluded the evening after remarks by Mrs. Calkins, State Pres. for 21 years. Wednesday morning the devotionals and testimony service consisting of Bible verses by all was conducted by Mrs. Tasker, and tribute was paid to Dr. Kellogg for his life-long interest in the temperance movement and to Battle Creek as one of the earliest cities to have a temperance society. The 12 divisions of the State W. C. T. U. which are the same as the Congressional districts were represented by 7 minute speeches by their respective presidents on the subject of "My district and Prohibition." They spoke of work accomplished in the past year, extensions of the Union, and improved conditions in the districts. The fact that in many cases the close cooperation of federal officers with the W. C. T. U. had been secured aroused much applause. Hillsdale and Lenawee Counties were commended for having good sheriffs. (I mention these as being near us at home.)

Mrs. Elizabeth A. Perkins gave a wonderful address as State President and demanded that all political parties insert a Prohibition plank in their party platform in the coming national election. She traced the temperance movement from the formation of the first temperance society in 1808 down to the present time calling attention to the benefits of all kinds that have come as a result. Violators of the 18 amendment were denounced as disloyal and traitors to our country and a menace to the U. S. The idea has been that membership in the W. C. T. U. has decreased since we had prohibition but this is incorrect. Our state has about 16,000 members—an increase of 2,000 over last year. We have outlawed the saloon. We have outlawed the brewery. We have outlawed the distillery. Under the U. S. government the liquor business has been pronounced an evil as is murder and should be looked at in that way. Modern youth was defended by Mrs. Perkins who deplored efforts on the part of some to put all young people in one class The women were told to study the history of all officers and vote only for clean men and women for positions in our government. Now came time for noontide prayer and benediction. "It is always noontide somewhere, And across the awakening continents, From shore to shore, somewhere, our prayers are rising evermore."

Report of the Sheriff's Office, Week Ending November 5th, 1927

Since the first of October, the Sheriff has reduced his force of Deputies by three: McCullough who resigned by request; Wood who was appointed Deputy Game Warden and Arnt who resigned by mutual agreement. The "business" did not warrant keeping these men longer, consequently they will not be replaced.

H. McCullough, a former special Deputy, was arrested Nov. 1st on warrant charging him with issuing a worthless check. He was arraigned before Fitzsimmons, waived examination and was bound over to January term of Court. Bail was fixed at $250 and was furnished Wednesday by Mr. Murphy of Hillsdale.

Floyd Barnhart, wanted for failure to obey Court order, (support of minor child) was arrested in Wright Twp. on Nov. 1st. His case was heard before Hon. Guy M. Chester in Circuit Court on Wednesday at which time he paid costs and back alimony amounting to over $100 and was released on his own recognizance.

Chas Lasher, Fort Wayne, was arrested by the Sheriff's officers in Jonesville on Nov. 2nd; he had been imbibing from the "cup that kills" and at the time of his arrest, a pint bottle, partly used of denatured alcohol, with skull and cross bones plainly affixed, together with a half pint of eau de Cologne 80 percent were found on his person. That he had endeavored to drown his sorrows with these high powered potations, was evidenced by the fact, that after his incarceration, two physicians were required to save his life. The Good die young. "nuf sed".

Fred Rose was arrested Nov. 2, charged with reckless driving in Hillsdale, he demanded a trial and in default of bond of $250, was remanded to custody of Sheriff, His case comes before Judge Fitzsimmons on the 10th. The Jury will determine his guilt or innocence, but whether guilty as charged or not, the fact remains that his car very nearly caused irreparable injury to 3 innocent persons, and one of them a babe in arms (or rather in a cab). A bond was furnished for Mr. Rose by his uncle, Sunday

E. C. Campbell of Jackson was arrested on Nov. 2nd on the old Hillsdale Jonesville road and charged with driving an auto while intoxicated. He plead guilty before Justice Aldrich and drew a fine of $75 and costs of $6.80. This is the smallest penalty for this offense which has been meted out since Jan. 1st.

Otis Macklin, late of Coldwater was released the same day for the same offense. Macklin paid fine and costs of $120.

On Friday, Leonard Reasoner of Ransom, was arrested on a warrant charging him with statutory rape against a seven year old girl He will be arraigned before Judge Fitzsimmons on Monday.

On the same day, Arthur Miller who was arrested on Oct. 3rd for a statutory offense, and who since his arrest has been indisposed, was adjudged insane and taken to Kalamazoo State Hospital. Arthur was prisoner 350 and gave us more real trouble and worry than the other 349.

An oil station, 3 miles north of Reading, was burglarized Thursday night. A small amount of change from cash register and some cigarettes seemed to be the entire loss.

The Sheriff has been furnishing these reports to the eight County Newspaper faithfully each week for the past ten months. These reports are prepared and mailed to your paper on Sunday. The work of preparation and the work of "setting" up is considerable. They are published regularly in every County Newspaper, except the Gazette, Litchfield. The question is: Do you as readers, want us to continue them?

Just drop your Editor a postal card and express your opinion and I will be governed by the reports received from the Editors. I started these reports for two purposes: (a) To keep tax payers informed as to our activities and in a manner telling them where the money goes. (b) I believe that the limelight of publicity, is, in some cases a more dreaded punishment than the verdict of the jury of the sentence of the Court.

Prisoners in County Jail 7. Sentenced 4. Unsentenced 3. Total 7.

Col. Earl H. Kerr, Sheriff

Somerset Congregational Church

Wayne Gray, athletic coach of Addison High school, has accepted an invitation to conduct the Adult Bible class next Sunday.

Bertha Hayes, a member of the Deputation Team from Hillsdale College was the class leader last Sunday.

It is the aim to make the discussions practical. Is there injustice in America? Some of the class members thought so and one member thought that injustice and corruption is now being carried on in a much larger scale than in the days of Amos the prophet. Charity covers a multitude of sins, but Jacob Rile said "Let's take off the cover."

Detroit is now raising the largest fund for charity in the history of that city.

On the other hand, recent developments have shown that political corruption has been practiced with billions as the stake.

Ten years ago 2 percent of the population controled 60 percent of the wealth of the country. Recent investigations made by the Federal trade Commission discloses the alarming conclusions that now 1 percent of our population controls 59 percent of our wealth.

It is true that the poor are fairly well cared for, but many suffer hunger because too proud to accept charity. This suffering is not all confined to the cities. During the last ten years one third the farmers of the United States have lost their farms. Others are going hungry, enduring long hours of labor and great physical hardship to save the farm from foreclosure because they gave too liberally to charity perhaps.

During the past 10 years the largest sums ever known have been used to control elections. Other large sums have been used for the purpose of propaganda to cover the sins of an "invisable Government." "Let's help take off the cover."

Ex Senator Owen says the issue of the "Invisable Government" should overshadow even the temperance issue in American church discussions, and as a political issue.

Lucille Herrald sang a solo "My Task" which was much appreciated and in line with the addresses given by the College Deputation team on "Leadership."

ARCHITECT ACHIEVES BRILLIANT SUCCESS WITH NEW THEATRE

Michigan Architect Adds to International Fame in Designing Fox-Detroit

With the interesting Mexican architecture adapted exteriorly, and a brilliant Hindoo temple adaptation for the interior, C. Howard Crane and Associates, Michigan architects, will have achieved an architectural non-stop flight in the new Fox Theatre, now building in the heart of Detroit.

Joseph's coat of many colors was not gayer than the ornamental spandles planned in polychrome to decorate the exterior of the building. Terra cotta will be moulded for the base course, in the ornamental windows, and for the corners and fineals in the brick field. Store fronts on the main floor will be richly wrought of metal.

The lobby of the Fox office building is fashioned after the Spanish Great Hall type, with two entrances, and shops opening off the lobby in all directions.

Pastel colorings, in reserved designs, will set off the ornamental coffered ceiling of the lobby, while Travertine marble is to be used in the lobby floor and walls.

Paneled, rosette-etched, bronze doors distinguish the elevator entrances, and high-speed, automatic control elevators with the latest and surest safety devices will be provided.

Interiorly, done in the Hindoo Temple style, the Fox Theatre, breaking through the office building for six stories, strikes a new note that reverberates 'round the world architecturally and theatrically, for it is the first theatre in the world to be modeled in this strikingly appropriate metier. And the Fox, Michigan's own, completed early in 1928, will be the largest theatre in the world, except The Roxy in New York.

"The parish provides a small coupe for each priest, and gives him an allowance for its maintenance and operating expenses. Incidentally, the amount of travelling done by the priests is evidenced by the fact that it has been found economy to trade in these motor cars on new models each year, rather than to repair the ravages of country roads on the old automobiles.

"The success of the St. Philip Neri experiment is unquestioned; results have far exceeded the expectations of even the most optimistic promotors of the Society. Hundreds of people who were neglected—and neglectful—are receiving the benefits of religious direction. Children who otherwise would have grown up with no church affiliation are being administered to. This whole vast territory is as well taken care of, spiritually, as most of the big city parishes.

"Why is the experiment successful? Because, for the first time in the history of this district, the people are being given service; the kind of service the successful business man gives his customers. When they cannot come to the church, the church is taken to them."

SEES CHARACTER BUILT BY BAND

C. D. Greenleaf Tells How Music Wields Tremendous Influence on Youth.

The value of the school band as a builder of character is emphasized by C. D. Greenleaf of the Conn Music Center, who received a new inspiration of the worth of music to the boys and girls of the country at the recent National School Band contest, at which hundreds of juvenile musicians in their bands from all parts of the United States fought in a musical fray that demonstrated the spirit and true sportsmanship of the young musician.

"After listening to the performances of these boy bands," said Mr. Greenleaf, "I am more than ever impressed with the importance of music in the lives of our young school people. It demonstrates teamwork, discipline, perseverance and gives evidence of what playing in a band does for the youth as a builder of character in addition to its cultural advantages.

"Music is a healthful influence and parents now are learning that the band is better than the 'gang.' Music is a fine mental stimulant and in a survey recently made in a mid-western school it was found that children who studied music averaged considerably higher in all branches of school activities than those who did not.

C. D. Greenleaf.

"Educators in schools and colleges are realizing more the importance of instrumental music. A recent evidence of this was the adoption of a resolution by the department of superintendence of the National Education association, in which it urged the inclusion of music in the curriculum on an equality with other basic studies. That fact is being appreciated by the educators today, who are putting bands and orchestras in the grade schools rather than waiting for the high school to give the student his initial musical training. By the time the youngster reaches high school he has so many demands on his time in his social activities and advanced studies, it is difficult for him to give the necessary time to the practicing needed to master his instrument.

Health Big Factor.

"Health also might be mentioned as one of the benefits of learning to play an instrument and becoming a member of a school band. Correct posture, and breathing must be insisted on Physicians often recommend a wind instrument for the boy with an undeveloped chest. Then, too, music steadies the nerves and has a relaxing effect on pupils who tend to be too high-strung and undisciplined.

"One of the most encouraging movements for music in the schools is the inclusion of it as part of the vocational training. A pupil now can learn to be a carpenter, mechanic, printer or any one of a number of trades and professions at public expense. Music is one of the leading professions, and it is being increasingly felt that school authorities should extend the same sort of educational advantages to youngsters who would take up music as a life work."

Boys With Music Don't "Go Wrong"

Elkhart, Ind.—Why band boys are so much less likely to "go wrong" than those not musically trained is explained by E. C. Moore, director of the school bands at Green Bay, Wis., in a statement appearing in the symposium on school music taken up by the Conn Music Center here. Said Mr. Moore:

"One of the best results of a good school band is in awakening pride, honest pride that anyone is entitled to when they have done their work well. It is a sort of self-respect that is absolutely essential in the make-up of a useful man or woman. This pride will go far toward keeping their lives right —they will be too proud to do mean, despicable things. A good band with its uniform, bright instruments, its lively music and the applause is made to order to hit almost any boy in the right spot—his heart.

"The care of an instrument and meeting the requirements of the band develop senses of responsibility, which will do more to bring out the latent manhood of a boy than anything else. It has a very practical side, also, since there are many positions to be filled every year in bands and orchestras."

Somerset Congregational Church

People from Hillsdale, Jackson, Lenawee, Washtenaw, and Monroe Counties were in attendance at the Somerset Congregational church Sunday, and heard Prof. W. H. Roberts of the Department of History Hillsdale College in one of the most interesting sermons he has yet given during his pastorate here, on the subject "The Kingdom."

In chronological order, down to the time when Patrick Henry exploded the Virginia conception, in his first great speech, defending the planters against the collection of a church tax, which had been decided as constitutional by the higher courts in England, Prof. Roberts held the attention of his audience by the various interpretations which have been placed by students of the bible to the oft repeated word in the New Testament

At the close of his address his audience was generally convinced that although the word "Kingdom' might imply political action to protect the weak, establish justice and the will of God "on Earth as it is in heaven" it does not imply the domination of a corrupt clergy, such as Patrick Henry brought evidence to show existed in Virginia, men who drank and gambled and swore but paid little attention to the needs of the poor people in the parish.

Dr. Carrie Stewart of Ann Arbor who was present at the church service gave an interesting talk to the Sunday School on her trip to the Holy Land. Mildred Lane sang a solo "Rock of Ages" which was greatly appreciated by the audience

The services are at 10 a. m. every Sunday. Next Sunday the College Deputation team will conduct the services.

A New Ailrine For Detroit

Transcontinental passenger air service for Detroit is being planned by the Stout Air Service Incorporated the first link of which—between Detroit and Cleveland—was opened Nov. 1. A series of similar passenger air-lines to other cities will gradually be inaugurated, that between Detroit and Pittsburg being scheduled to start early in 1928 From Pittsburg the line will eventually be extended to Philadelphia.

The company's program has every promise of success. It has a record behind it of over a year's successful operation on the Detroit Grand Rapids airline during which operation 1944 passengers were transported in safety. Inadequate management, unreliable planes and old-fashioned landing fields have hampered the establishment of aeroplane lines in other cities in the past, have resulted in disappointing failures and have left an unsavory taste in the public's mouth. While the progress of aviation has been retarded by these untimely and ill managed ventures, the program of the Stout organization is certain to be a boom for aviation generally, and Detroit in particular Care will be taken to provide the greatest safety and comfort for the passengers. The recently completed air passenger station at Ford airport has been leased. Ford Airport and the new Cleveland municipal airport, two excellent landing fields, will be made from each city The company's record in the past proves that it may be depended upon to render regular service.

The company's program deserves the support of the traveling public. Rapid transportation between business, financial and industrial centers is becoming necessary. Reliable air passenger service is a valuable asset to any city.—Michigan Manufacturer

The Drunken Driver

The distressing traffic tragedies in which lives are lost, accentuates the importance of licensing automobile drivers—and licensing them only when they are morally and temperamentally qualified, as well as qualified in a mechanical sense.

It is against the law to operate a stationary steam engine without a license as an engineer. And yet any person, young and inexperienced, or without judgment, or unsteady from drink, is permitted to operate a high powered motor vehicle, and drive in and out of traffic, with too often such tragedy as results through the recklessness of an alleged drunken driver.

The drunken driver, even the driver who drinks and whose hands are unsteady and brain frequently addled, is the greatest hazard of the streets and highways.

Not only should such a driver not be licensed, but when any person is caught in an intoxicated condition at the wheel of an automobile, he ought to be prohibited by law, with heavy penalties fixed for violation, from driving in the future. In addition to this, such a driver, whether in an accident or not, ought to be severely punished by imprisonment at hard work.

On Progress

Aviation in the past year has gone forward in increasing great strides. Achievements deemed impossible, at least until a far distant future, have taken place so rapidly we have to get our breath. We have been amazed, thrilled, proud, excited, moved to compassion and pity, and at times to a feeling akin to disgust. Events in this field have succeeded each other so swiftly we have had little time to formulate opinions or analyze our feelings.

Words cannot express the wave of patriotism that floods us when we think of Lindbergh and that he belongs to us. It isn't so much the feat he accomplished as it is the great, virile, manly character that circumstances have revealed. Others since have also flown across the Atlantic and in the future many more will, but few times will strong enough personalities appear that world-wide acclaim and applause cannot affect. By his utter simplicity, amid greater honors ever before accorded to one man, Lindbergh has won the right to be the idol and hero of American youth and in fact the whole world. We can't help but think of resulting attempts that have followed.

We think of Commander Byrds success as another great aid to science for which he has already done so much. Our admiration grows still greater for this intrepid explorer. Lindbergh and Byrd belong to the list of the world's sacrificing pioneers.

But what about these other attempts for the fame and the money that's to be had? These enterprises that have meant the loss of so many lives? We admire the courage but not the ideal. Examination has shown that in the case of each failure little time was spent on preparation. As a direct contrast each success is the result of months of thought and study. The lesson we derive is that everything worth while means careful and constant work toward its attainment. For those who have lost their lives in the attempt to carry out a noble idea we ask:

"God let them hear our prayers for them tonight,
Out there above the seas eternal cry
God, let them know the courage of their hearts
Has won for them a lasting Victory!"

Take The Boy Along

Your son will undoubtedly enjoy the advantages of the National Live Stock Show at Chicago Nov. 26 to December 3 and there is no more instructive and interesting place you can take him than at such an exhibit. Nine-tenths of the farmers sons are either directly or indirectly interested in the Live Stock clubs and different phases of agriculture. Now with this in mind why not take a couple of days off from your arduous farm duties and visit the metropolis of the west Chicago. If the boy is not particularly interested in Live stock he certainly will be glad to see the great city of Chicago with its many and varied scenes. It is as good as a whole education to go over in Russ town or Little Italy where the surroundings and customs are little changed from the Mother country. In these parts of the city you will find genuine Italians and Russians plying their vocations same as they did in the foreign lands across the sea and hear the jargon of their various languages. Signs of business places are all printed in Hebrew, Russian and Spanish, and there is a never ending procession of the peoples of the earth on the streets. At the Stock Yards visitors are always welcome to the butchering and packing establishments of Louis Swift & Co. and Armour two of the largest on earth. Here you will find the actual work of converting every known meat animal into the products necessary to maintain life and carry on the arts and sciences of this nation. You will observe that nothing is wasted—even to the hair and hoofs of the carcasses. The discoveries of the past few years have enabled the packing establishments to pretty nearly clean up the whole hog and the whole sheep or the whole beef turning out such products as glue, fertilizer, chemicals, dyes, besides the regular edible portions which now-a-days find their way into every store and meat market in the length and breadth of the land. On Friday November 25th will be staged the nation live stock judging contest between state champion club members. Saturday the College teams will judge the Live Stock snd crops and judging will start on the hay and grain show. Monday Nov. 28 the prizes in the steer barrow and weather class will be awarded. On Tuesday steer championships, college cattle specials. swine carload show and the breeding classes of Aberdeen-Angus, Shorthorns, Polled Shorthorns Herefords, Shrops, Dirsets, Berkshires, Chester Whites, Percherons and Belgians.

"PINCH HITTING" WITH PINEAPPLES

WITH her usual buoyant spirits, Gwen burst into the apartment and announced to her more conservative house-mate that there would be two extra for dinner, and only about an hour in which to encompass all preparations.

"But my dear Gwen," protested Sally in her practical fashion, "there's nothing in the house to eat, and your guests probably like food with their meals. Most men do."

"Have you no imagination, my dear?" Gwen countered, with perfect complacency. "I shall 'pinch hit' with pineapples!"

"Is this a new game you're raving about?" queried Sally.

"It's quite evident you've never had a brother who was a baseball fan. If you had, you'd understand."

"But what have baseballs and brothers to do with hungry guests who will be arriving shortly?"

"Just this," returned Gwen, as she hurried toward the kitchenette. "You remember the dozen cans of Hawaiian pineapple I insisted upon buying at the sale last week?"

"Yes, over my veto! But what of it?"

"Well I shall evolve a repast from those cans that will surprise you and I hope interest the guests no end."

And this is what Gwen produced:

Cocktail, Main Dish, and Salad

California Fruit Punch: Oranges, bananas, and Hawaiian pineapple cut in dice, served in cocktail glasses with pineapple juice poured over the top. She served this well chilled.

Hawaiian Pineapple with Bacon: Crisp bacon, pouring off grease as it cooks out. Remove to a hot plate and keep warm. Season flour with pepper and salt. Into this dip six slices of Hawaiian pineapple, covering both sides. Fry until brown in a little of the bacon fat, having it very hot.

Hawaiian Pineapple and Cream Cheese Salad: Arrange on a plate, a ring of small white lettuce leaves taken from the heart. On this place a whole slice of Hawaiian pineapple drained and cut across with a sharp knife to facilitate cutting with a fork. Rub through a colander a fresh cream cheese. Put this lightly on top of the pineapple so that it stands up in flakes. Fill the hole of the pineapple with a teaspoonful of currant or guava jelly. Cover with French dressing, using lemon juice instead of vinegar. Sprinkle the cheese lightly with paprika, which adds to the attractiveness of the color scheme.

Gwen topped off the meal with a recipe of French origin which is an unusual dessert most delicious and not at all difficult to prepare.

An Easy Dessert

Upside Down Pudding: Heat a skillet very hot and cover the surface with melted butter. Spread over this the contents of a can of crushed Hawaiian pineapple from which the juice has been quite thoroughly drained. On top of this, put a simple cake batter, and bake the whole in a moderate oven. To ascertain when done, try the cake with a straw. Turn out on a large, round platter, which operation will of course bring the pineapple on top. This will be all brown and with a delicious crust, due to the butter which lined the skillet.

Here is a suggestion for a cake recipe which may be used in the Upside Down Pudding.

Plain White Cake: Cream together one cup of sugar and one-half cup of butter. Add to this one and one-half cups of flour which have been sifted three times, one-half teaspoon salt and two heaping teaspoons baking powder. Add one-half cup milk. Beat separately two eggs and add to the mixture, having the whites very stiff. A little vanilla or almond flavoring may be used.

The virtue of always having Hawaiian pineapple on hand is that it may prove a great convenience to the housewife, who, if she be resourceful, will never despair when guests drop in unexpectedly. Armed with a few valuable recipes, she can produce on short notice a most palatable meal. Pineapple may appear as an appetizer, it may serve as the pièce de resistance, it may make a tempting salad or a delicious dessert. It has a host of possibilities when in the hand of a skillful person, one who is endowed with imagination, for it comes to you with the same rich flavor and sweetness which the tropic sunshine produced. How could it be otherwise, since only twenty-eight minutes elapse from the time the fresh pineapple is delivered to the cannery to the moment it is hermetically sealed in a sterilized can? It could not lose much of its tropical flavor in those few moments!

COLLEGE PROFS GET LOWEST PAY

College professors in many parts of the country especially in the middle west, receive salaries apportioned on a pre-war basis, and a large number are paid less than high school instructors, a survey being conducted by the National Education association shows, according to Selden C. Adams, assistant director of the division of publications, who visited his father, Seldon Connor Adams at East Lansing.

The survey is now under way. Questionnaires have been sent to college presidents, professors and instructors. Results thus far indicate that while salaries of high school and grade teachers have advanced since the war, college professors receive little more than they did ten years ago. In one moderate-sized college in Idaho, the president earns twenty-eight hundred dollars a year, and other salaries in proportion.

The national education group plans to make public complete results of the survey, in the hope that sentiment can be aroused to relieve the situation. College presidents do not fix the pay, and college trustees are often helpless he said. The people will have to indicate their wish for higher salaries if any change is to be brought about.

Acid Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"
Better than Soda

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowls and gently urges the souring taste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips". Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

SLIM LINES RULE NEW COAT STYLES

Slenderness is the first rule of the new coats whether the hem is straight around or flared a bit at sides or front. New coats know their "lines."

Next, the fabric is the most important part of the picture—and with a season so much devoted to velvet frocks, of course it's velvet or the rich fabric with velvety 'feel that wins the laurels by a large majority vote.

The furs have a princess-like magnificence. And the amount of fur that swathes these new coats fur borders, wonderful shawl collars, tuxedo collars that outline one side of the closing and swing free at the other side to be tossed over the shoulder in a "throw", cuffs that are pouched and puffed or straight-around the wrist, and lavish in size, flattering long haired furs, or the sleek short, "shaved" varieties—fox, wolf, kolinsky, broadtail, ermine, wolverine, squirrel, mole and much beaver.

And the stitchings, the seamings and tucking, the "workings" of bands of the material to form designs, slenderizing darts and long, sweeping diagonal lines that interrupt contours that seem too broad for slimness—not a coat in the new Winter collections that doesn't show its full quota of modernistic art ideas.

Even linings of new coats are important. They are quilted or stitched, diagonally, or plain. Beautiful silk crepes and satins they are, usually matching the coat fabric in tone, or the fur, if the fur is lighter in shade than the fabric.

Greens, lovely dark tones, come next in importance.

The ideal outfit for the class room and campus, and one that lends itself to innumerable variations, is a sports coat, skirt which can be worn with sweaters and jacquettes on cooler days and blouses and tunics on warmer days, good looking sports shoes, tiny chic felt sports hat, gloves, bag and hose to match.

The clever little lady will have her coat matched with shoes, gloves, bag and hat. And the coat will be smart and rather expensive Then the skirt and one blouse and one sweater will match or harmonize with the coat and accessories, all browns and tans, for instance, or all greys, or greys and blue, or greens and beige. So-o-o-o, and with this initial ensemble with its harmonizing accessories, you may have as many colored scarves, sweaters, blouses and hats as you wish. Surely you san see how a chic red hat and jacquette worn with the same skirt, coat and accessories would give you a complete change of attire. This would be with the grey or brown ensemble only of course.

It is simply amazing, the number of changes you can achieve with an outfit like this. For example, for outdoor sports, you can add a colored suede jacket and wrap a wooly scarf around your neck and you will be quite as jaunty as a lady of a fashion magazine.

Natural kashmir jersey is spoken of with enthusiasm in every shop devoted to sportswear. It is the aristocrat of jersey favorite of all the great creators, and is most often develped in two-piece frocks with fingertip length or tunic-length jumpers.

Felt is the flower, if it's perched on the shoulder or lapel of sports costumes or, to be a bit different, of shell or crystal, for the satin and crepe costumes, one wears on the street, or to informal afternoon functions.

One big flower, or three big flowers are smart, too, and there are amusing little bunches of fruit too—cherries, especially. And futuristic bunches of fruits—try to name them, we couldn't, but we liked them, and we'd enjoying wearing them.

Velvety flowers are here, also —nasturtiums in exquisite red and yellow shadings, with green leaves and stems, roses, especially red ones, gardenias in every color. There are many leather and felt gardenias, as well as velvet ones.

The only reason some people aren't superstitious is because they think it's bad luck to be superstitious

EVERY MAN AND WOMAN SHOULD MAKE A WILL

By C. V. KING

WILLS

When a man dies testate, that is leaving a last will and testament the person having the custody of the will should file it in the probate court having jurisdiction in the case, within thirty days after the death After the will is filed, the executor, or some person interested in the estate, may make a petition to the court, praying that the will be admitted to probate and that the administration of the estate be granted to the executor named in the will, or if there be no executor or the executor named refuses to act, to some other suitable person as administrator with the will annexed. If all persons interested in the estate waive in writing notice of the hearing and consent the admission of the will to probate, the court, upon filing the petition and waiver, and upon proper proof of its execution, may make an order admitting the will; otherwise a day is set for the hearing and the same notice is given as for the appointment of an administrator.

This act amends Section 5 of the Compiler's Section 13777 of the 1915 Laws by adding a clause authorizing the executor in the will or administrator to be appointed in case the executor so named neglects or refuses to act, to at the expense of the estate, resist any contest that may be made to or against to the admission of the will to probate and is a very important addition to the law in this regard. The amendment is as follows

Every person named as executor in any will shall, within thirty days after he has kowledge that he is named executor, if he obtains such knowledge after the death of the testator, present such will to the probate court which has jurisdition of the case, unless the will shall have been otherwise deposited with the judge of probate; and shall within the period above mentioned signify to the court his acceptance of the trust, or make known in writing to such court his refusal to accept it Should notice of contest of such will be filed, the person or persons therein named as executor or executors shall, subject to the approval of the judge of probate, be authorized to engage counsel and obtain evidence to assist in securing the admission of such will to probate, and the reasonable expenses thereof shall be a proper charge against the estate In case the said executor shall refuse to act, or in case no executor is named in said will and there are legatees or devisees named in said will who are not competent to act for themselves, the guardian of such person, or if such person has no guardian or not born or whose present existence cannot after diligent search, inquiry be ascertained, then the court havig jurisdiction thereof may appoint a guardian and litem for such person, who shall, subject to the approval of the judge of probate, be authorized to engage counsel and obtain evidence to assist in securing the admission of such will to probate, and the reasonable expenses thereof shall be a proper charge against the estate

A certified copy of every will devising lands and the order admitting the same to probate must be recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county in which the lands devised are situated

If a testator leaves a wife, the disposition of "personal property" is subject to her election to take any interest that may be given to her in the will; or in lieu thereof, to take the sum or share that would have passed to her, under the statute of distributions, had the testator died intestate, until the sum shall amount to five thousand dollars, and of the residue of the estate, one-half the sum or share that would have passed to her under the statute of distributions, had the testator died intestate The election of the wife to take otherwise than under the will must be in writing and filed in the court in which proceedings for the settlement of the estate are being taken, within one year from the probate of the will.

QUEEN OF 'FRECKLES KINGDOM?'

THE dispute as to who has the most freckles in this country goes merrily on. Here's the latest claimant to the "sun spot" honors.

The little lady is Miss Dora Martin, aged fourteen, and undisputed reigning sovereign of the "Freckle Kingdom" in Cincinnati, Ohio. Dora asserted her right to the title in a contest in which seven hundred other freckled girls and boys were entered.

For a while the contes looked like it might develop into close competition, but the seven hundred bowed in graceful defeat when Miss Dora appeared.

EARLY PEACE SEEN IN 15 YEAR BATTLE OVER PHONE RATE

Plans to end the fifteen legal warfare between the state, the City of Detroit and the Michigan Bell Telephone Company, are to be framed at a meeting called soon by the League of Michigan Municipalities.

The plans involve abandonment by the company of the contract or else publication of all figures relating to it and allowance of such parts of the contract payments as the public utilities commission considers a fair charge against the telephone users. The company would discontinue its suit in Federal court for increases in the Detroit telephone rates.

The state and league would discontinue their suit in the State Supreme Court for an ouster order prohibiting the American Telephone and Telegraph Company from doing business in Michigan.

There are still a few old-fashioned people in the world who really do not want divorce.

FARMERS SLOW TO LIME SOIL, SURVEY REVEALS

More speed is needed in the liming program for the state if Michigan farmers, as a whole are to increase returns to a degree of profit. The soils department at Michigan State College points out that, at the present rate of liming one hundred and fifteen years will be required to correct the acidity of Michigan soils.

The soils specialists estimate that there are eighty-five hundred thousand acres in crops in the state and that of this total sixty-five hundred thousand acres of these are grown on acid soils. Experiments throughout the state have proved that it pays to use lime. One application of lime on a Cass County farm increased the yield of wheat six and four tenths bushels per acre each year over a ten year period.

Inasmuch as a great deal of the land in the state needs more organic matter the liming program is important in the production of legumes to be plowed under.

What will you be doing at 65?

Statistics show that out of one hundred average men reaching the age of sixty-five, six are wealthy and are able to retire or enjoy the niceties of life without worry. Nine are self-supporting but are compelled to work. Eighty-five are dependent upon children, relatives or charity.

RIN TIN TIN'S RIVAL?

U&U

LOOKS like Rin Tin Tin, famous canine of the screen had a rival for intelligence in the pup pictured above. He is "Kazan," a police dog mail carrier who delivers the mail regularly between the post-office at Swains, N. Y., and the local railroad stop. In the three years he's been at it, "Kazan" has never lost a single pouch or allowed interference with the mail.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious. Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning; it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physician recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtless drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them. Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

WARNS OF SHOES HURTFUL TO FORM

The materials that milady may use for personal adornment are charming clothes, exquisite jewelry, modish hats and footwear, of attractive design and color. In availing her self of this wealth of beauty the average girl is guided by three ideals becomingness style and comfort. The last point, however, is frequently slighted because most women are willing to sacrifice comfort to beauty when the choice is squarely presented to them.

Up to a certain point this sacrifice is justifiable, because if we all dressed for comfort alone much of the beauty of life would be lost. We owe it to others as well as to ourselves, to be as decorative as Nature permits. But sometimes we becomes over-enthusiastic in our effort to improve on Nature with a result that is just the opposite of our aim.

There are many examples of the error, but perhaps it is committed most frequently in connection with the choice of shoes. Anyone, who has even the faintest idea of human anatomy and physiology, know that long spike heels and narrow-pointed toes do not give the body the firm support it needs in walking or standing.

When shoes of this type are worn habitually, the leg muscles try to adjust themselves to the unnatural strain put upon them. Ankles become thick, calves become tense and knotty or lumpy and any tendency toward knockknees is encouraged. Sometimes bunches of muscles appear on the inside of the knee joints even though the limbs themselves may be slender. And all this results from the attempt to beautify.

Footwear may be modish and graceful, however without causing defects in the shape of the legs. A low heel for regular wear and a moderately high one to go with dainty afternoon and evening dresses are not injurious.

Accessories continue to play a heavy role in the costume. The displays may be primarily of gown or fur coats or evening wraps, but the shopper's eye eargerly focuses on the gold jewelry, the colorful gloves, the reptile bags, the ropes of pearls, all laid appealingly at the feet of the models.

The reference to accessories playing a heavy role is not figuratively speaking, for what could be more weighty than the new Empire jewelry. Having gold chains, an inch or two in width, flat linked effects twisted gold cords, ropes of filigreed gold, all copied from the contents of the jewel box of Empress Josephine, are inviting additions for the new frock. The chains are generally of medium length though a few are shown in choker style with green snake clasps, which lie flat to the neck.

Furriers have been doing remarkable things with skins since last year. They have evolved the tailored fur coat. A flat fur is chosen caracul, leopard, pony, muskrat—and effectively bound with braid or a fancy cord. Besides, at the opening of the coat the braid is used on pockets and on the Queen Anne collar. The fur is quite often a light tan, while the trim is in brown. This braid trimming—and sometimes—it is a binding of leather—takes the place of a contrasting fur, and is especially neat if the wearer wishes to keep slim lines.

Otter—a dark brown long-haired fur—may take the place of raccoon or muskrat, in the heavier coats. It is found clipped or unclipped, and is offered to the girl who wishes brown, but cannot venture into beaver, nutria or mink

When the buyer looks at the tailored fur models it is taken for evening wear for this new type of coat is limited to street and sport wear. The soft gray squirrel, broad tail, sable are the favorites for the evening, while velvet wraps trimmed with wolverine or white ermine are offered.

RELIGION IS TAUGHT IN CHEBOYGON SCHOOLS

The public schools of the city of Cheboygan have incorporated into the studies for the fourth, fifth and sixth grades, the course in religious instruction sponsored by church people in many states. Some churches of the city provide the teachers and the pupils are dismissed for an hour once a week to attend the classes. Both Catholic and non-Catholic churches are taking part in the work.

SALINE YOUTH PAID $25 FOR PIGGIE, BUT PRIZES TOTAL $342

A little sow pig which George W. Needham, of Saline bought five years ago when he started the four H club work, has brought him big dividends.

The pig was the forerunner of others of constantly improving quality and one of his boars was named grand champion in the Poland China division at the Michigan State Fair.

Mr. Needham captured the reserve senior championship on his sow six first places, one second, one third, two fourths, and one fifth. His winnigs totaled two hundred and fifty two dollars, more than a quarter of all the money offered for Poland Chinas. He already won ninety dollars at the Washtenaw County Fair at Ann Arbor.

He is now twenty-two years old. He has a hog business all his own which he runs in connection with his father's farm. There are forty head in his herd.

SUGAR GROWERS IN U. S. WANT 232 MILLION HERE

The two hundred thirty-two million dollars which America spends annually for sugar will be kept at home within a few years hence, American farmers will be growing that amount of sugar along with other crops if the plan now being worked out by the Bureau of Standards is successful.

The experiment is based largely upon growing the wild artichoke. Artichokes, unlike sugar beets, need little cultivation and produce their own seed, whereas sugar beet seed has to be imported from Europe.

From the artichoke comes a substance called levulose, seventy-three per cent sweeter than cane sugar. Chemically it gives the same sweetness as fresh honey.

BAR LAKE IS SAVED BY ENGINEERS

Bar Lake, one of the finest bass and pickerel lakes in Northern Michigan, has been saved through the efforts of engineers, Bar Lake is located just north of Manistee and in fall and spring thousands of ducks and geese take shelter there. With the lowering of Lake Michigan's level came lower water levels in Bar Lake. The water receded from the banks of the lake leaving grassy marshes covering many acres. Manistee sportsmen urged the Board of Supervisors to build a dam across the outlet, which they did. Now the lake has gone back to its original banks, eighteen inches higher than it was last year. Boats again dot the lake and fishermen are happy for the big bass.

Then election of officers, Pres. Lola Wilcox; vice pres.. Kate Winchell; sec., Ella Knowles. A social hour followed. 15 members and two guests were present. The next meeting will be Dec. 8th with Mrs. Kunkle.

On Tuesday Mr. Rawson of Hillsdale City Schools and D. E. Stotts of the Jonesville Schools brought 30 boys of their crops study department to the farm home of Lew Meeks & Son near North Adams for a special study of the different potato varieties, methods of production, certified seed stock, and construction of storage building according to modern science. This form of high school investigation is meeting with great favor in this part of the state and North Adams High School the first to install an Agricultural department in the State of Michigan stands at the head of the list along this line.

At the Carnival last week under the ouspices of the High School $90.00 was taken in, and at the sale $125.00, Expenses amounted to about $40.00 The weather was bad and the crowds small, otherwise the proceeds would have been a great deal more. The Athletic Association wish to extend thanks to the people of the district and the surrounding districts who contributed so liberally and made the sale a real success. An executive committee consisting of one student from each of the upper six grades, the teachers and a member of the school board will look after the funds. It was understood the first proceeds were to be used for athletic equipment.

Development of Cut Over Land

Old Lumber Town In Upper Peninsula Tranformed Into Attractive Park Resort

Blaney, Mich., Oct. 24—When the virgin timber supply was exhausted by lumber and logging operations. conducted for a number of years by the Wisconsin Land and Lumber Company of Hermansville, Mich., this town became merely an ugly blot on the landscape.

The important question then arose of how best to utilize the cut-over lands so that they become a real asset to the entire state of Michigan and especially to this part of the Upper Peninsula.

After exhaustive research and study an idea was conceived to establish a resort that would be entirely different from the usual resort proposition. Blaney Park Resort which was recently dedicated to the public, was the result of the idea. The 22,000 acres immediately adjacent to the point now presents to the passing tourist and to the more permanent visitor a scene of beauty and attractiveness unequalled anywhere in the northern country.

As the motorist speeds into sight of Blaney on either of two of the important trunk lines that penetrate the Upper Peninsula he finds a handsome, commodious hotel, clean attractive looking cottages and lawns, a complete water works and electric light system and in the distance a lovely little lake. A splendid nine-hole golf course is being laid out by a professional golf engineer and in the background is a forest of mixed hardwoods and pine that affords the lovers of nature every facility for exploring the woods and enjoying the trees, the birds, the game and the wild flowers.

Thus, an old lumbering operation has been trsnsformed into something artistic and useful in the way of development of the Upper Peninsula. — Advertisement.

The Season for Solacing Drinks

WE AMERICANS as a nation go in for iced drinks more zealously than any other under the sun. It is a national habit; some say a bad one; certainly it is a universal one.

The resourceful housewife has many frapped beverages with which to tempt her family. Of all the fruit flavors, however, there is probably none which adds more of a zestful tang than pineapple juice.

The use of Hawaiian pineapple juice in summer drinks is not an extravagance, for the fruit itself appears so often in the summer menu, that using up the juice in tempting ways is really an economy. Hawaiian pineapple juice can also be purchased separately in cans. When large quantities are required, it should be used in this form.

Fruit Punches for Crowds

Waikiki Punch: (Serves 50) Make syrup of five quarts of water and two pounds of sugar and let it cool. Combine with it the following fruit juices: one quart Hawaiian pineapple juice, one quart lemon juice, one quart orange juice, one quart white grape juice, two quarts black tea infusion, five quarts water, one quart red fruit juice or ginger ale. Let stand several hours in the refrigerator. If ginger ale is used, add just before serving.

Ambrosia Fruit Punch: (For one gallon) Make a syrup by boiling four cups of sugar and four cups of water until it is about a quart in quantity. Add to this the following fruit juices: one pint Hawaiian pineapple juice, juice of six lemons, juice of six oranges, juice of six limes, two cups strong tea, eight cups sweet cider, four cups cold water. When ready to serve, add slices of Hawaiian pineapple, orange, and a few strawberries.

Pineappleade: Mix one cup water and one-half cup sugar, boil ten minutes and chill. Add three cups ice water, two cups of the syrup drained from crushed or grated Hawaiian pineapple and one-half cup lemon juice.

Pineapple Milkshake: Beat one egg until it is very light, add four tablespoons Hawaiian pineapple juice drained from the can, one tablespoon raspberry syrup, one pint of rich milk and plenty of cracked ice. Serve immediately.

Sparkling Punch: Combine the following fruit juices: juice of four oranges, juice of two lemons, one pound can Hawaiian pineapple juice, one small bottle maraschino cherries, two quarts sparkling white grape juice. Place the juices in a punch bowl over a cake of ice, add the grape juice when ready to serve, and use tall, hollow-stemmed glasses. The illusion of champagne punch is very real.

Somewhere, somehow there comes to our comprehension a feeling that our gun law, if possible, is just a trifle more ridiculous than it was before it went on the operating table at the last legislature and had its appendix removed. If ever there was a joker put on the statute books of Michigan it's the present gun law.

The law specifies in substance, that no person can carry a revolver or possess one without the consent of the County Sheriff or a committee of his appointees. The legislators evidently expected they had settled the gun question for permanency when they ratified the law, but as a matter of fact the gun law as it stands cannot be enforced or at least it is not. From various angles it appears the law-makers were importuned heavily to do something and so they went through the modus operanda with the full knowledge of the impotency of gun laws in general and this one in particular. We think we may say with a reasonable consciousness of truth that when ice forms in Hades and pitch melts at the Pole, the gun law can be enforced. Every time a young crook in the chrysalis state is pinched he invaribly has a gun, and it goes without comment that the old criminal always has a gat, and always will, if he has to manufacture it himself. With this confessed leak in the law, the common citizen proposes to protect himself at all events.

At the last meeting of the Detroit city Council it was suggested by some long headed executive that the United States Government make free gift to the City of Detroit of the old Fort Wayne grounds on West Fort street, which the Government has been trying to sell to some real estate promoters for $5,000,000. This brilliant Councilman suggested a gift and said Detroit could use the property very nicely for a public park just as if Detroit wasn't provided with sufficient parks now and of course the American government could afford to give five million dollars to Detroit just as well as not! At any rate the property has not found a bidder at the figure, but there's hope left yet. Seems as if Hank Ford might dig up and buy this property and present it to the city for a public airport, but—well, but

Disasterous Fire

The beautiful farm home of Mrs. Wilson Houseknech east of Jonesville burned to the ground about nine o'clock a. m. Nov. 14th, The alarm of fire brought our fire truck to the scene of action speedily but even then it was too late to save the building. A gasolene stove exploded and started the blaze, so it is thought, as no one was in the house at the time. Firemen reported the pump torn up early in the disaster, thus hampering their work. This is the third fatal fire on this farm in a few years, and practically wipes out what was one of the busiest, prettiest and happiest homes in the neighborhood. Estimated loss $10,000. Insurance $3,000. Mrs. Houseknecht will not rebuild.

Duffy stated that there was no lights on the Cruger rig hence he could not see it, and did not know what was ahead.

Potatoes Michigan's Show Crop

As before mentioned in our columns the Potato train which will tour southern Michigan on the New York Central Lines will be in Hillsdale on Friday December 16th and all farmers who are interested in potato culture or are consumers of the spuds are especially urged to visit the train on the sidetrack. Experts from the M. S. C. will be aboard and will entertain the crowd with talks on the science and theory of raising spuds. Every farmer is urged to come and bring along a peck of his very best potatoes to compete for $1,000 worth of prize money to be given away during the progress of the train for ten days. The train will visit ten counties of the state and will help greatly in the problems of spraying and harvesting. Hillsdale county has a number of potato riasers who make a specialty of this alone, and we believe this county ranks high in the reputation given the state for certified seed which finds ready market in the surrounding country. Ohio and Indiana especially are users of our seed.

Ford Advertising Is Still Growing

Still we hear about the new Ford automobile which is soon to be rolled out of the Highland Park plant like peas out of a thresher. It is claimed that the publisher of the Brighton Argus (a small Michigan newspaper) is claiming the credit for the first, true-to-life description of the new vehicle. Some Ford officials drove up to the Bank of Brighton one day and parked their car in the shade near the building. The editor, always on the alert for a sensation, at once spotted these men and also the car which looked like a Ford yet it wasn't. Obviously it was a combination like the camel and the jackass hooked up together, The editor snooped around a bit, and by heck, the more he snooped the more it looked like a bonanza, Therefore he called the official photograper of the village to his aid and they got a fairly good photo of a couple of the machines

The wheel base is quoted as 104 inches which is more than the old Model T. It is said Henry has a real car this time with most of the accessories that go, with a big machine. Shock absorbers, gasoline guage on the dash, wire wheels, speedometer bumpers, oil-pump, water pump, and the whole works. In addition, the Ford company will us several nifty colors. so it certainly seems the "Flivver" joke will no longer apply. Henry Ford and party were in Adrian not long since, the guests of Mrs. Ford's brother, and it is reported that Mr. Ford stated the new cars would soon be going out of the factory to the thousands of dealers in different parts of the world

The Mustang is Doomed

The days of the "tang" are numbered and who can't remember when a calico pony was considered one of the novelties of the farmstead? These tough invulnerable beasts usually came by the way of the trayeling trader or the professional horse buyer from the West who overran the country side twenty five years ago. These fellows always had something sizable to deal in the line of a mustang and nine-tenths of the farmers wanted at that time a tough, easy-keeping roadster which could be depended upon any time the proprietor or his sons wanted to get to town in a hurry and back again. Way out west even the automobile has so far encroached upon the reign of the "cayuse" that he is no longer considered worth his salt and large numbers of the animals are being converted into chicken scrap and fertilizer. Nobody wants the ponies and never will they be as popular again, The days of the cow puncher on the plains are about past so he rides the trail no more on his calico spotted pony. Large numbers of these half wild Montana range horses used to be bought up by enterprising dealers and shipped to this country where they looked so good to the average farmer for roadster purposes there was no trouble in disposing of them. But where is there a man today who would look at one of the scrawny mangy, beasts? No, not for any money would he tolerate such an animal on his premises and yet we sort of held veneration for the vanished glories of the "tang". We honor him for his vicious disposition which would allow no one to pet him even with the kindest intentions, for his kicking propensities sometimes far beyond belief, but as to bringing him back—never.

SAVE INDIAN LORE IS AIM OF STATE

Preservation of the Indian traditions is an objective of Captain Charles E. Kelnap, fromer Grand Rapids mayor, in leading a movement which has gained the support of the Dwight Lydell chapter Izaak Walton league of America, to change the name of Plaster creek to Ken O Shay creek.

In urging substitution of the name Ken O Shay meaning clear running water, for Plaster creek, Captain Kelnap related to the Walton league chapter and city officials the story of the simple faith Black Bird, an Indian chief, who despising the fire water introduced by the white man and the inebriates created in his tribe, finally forsook his warriors and their camp on the Black Hills, and set his wigwam on the banks of Plaster creek, which the Indians knew as Ken O Shay near Grand river.

CRACK SHOT COPS SEEN AS DETROIT CRIME CURB

Crime will be greatly reduced when every policeman knows how to shoot straight, says Sergt. Max B. Wendlandt, pistol instructor of the Detroit Police Department.

The life of a policeman is worth little in a duel with a thug if he cannot handle his pistol efficiently", he says,. "Every year more time is given to teaching men how to handle a weapon properly.

"At the ten day national pistol and rifle matches held at Camp Perry O., recently ten Detroit policemen competing with officers from cities, won seventeen medals and thirty-nine bars. Inasmuch as the men had done most of their shooting on indoor ranges their scores were considered quite remarkble.

BATTLE CREEK MAN IS GIVEN MEDAL FOR SAFE AUTO DRIVING

A unique record for safety in interstate and trans-continental motor touring recently was recognized at Game Lodge, Rapid City S. D. when a solid gold medal was awarded James H. Brown, of Battle Creek, Mich., by officials of the Custer Battlefield Highway association. The presentation was made in the presence of President Coolidge.

Brown has been conducting automobile caravans for the past ten years. His caravan never has been composed of less than seventeen automobiles, and at one time comprised two hundred and fourteen. The grand total of tour members he has conducted over the various routes is in excess. of forty-two hundred and the aggregate distance traveled is thirty-one thousand nine hundred and seventy-two miles.

A remarkable feature of Brown's record is that not a single car in his caravan has ever been wrecked or otherwise put out of commission while en route.

A Cross, Sick Child is Constipated!

Look at Tongue

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mothers, see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, diarrhea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup' and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative' because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grownups printed on each bottle.

FIRST OVERSEAS AIR MAIL BAG GETS PLACE IN FAMOUS MUSEUM

THE mail-bag in which Commander Richard E. Byrd carried the first mail across the Atlantic by aeroplane now occupies a place of honor in the Smithsonian Institute at Washington D. C. together with other relics and photographers of the epochal flight.

The bag and mail were rescued after Byrd's plane was wrecked in the sea off the French coast.

THIRD OF MILLION STUDENTS, SHARE

From forty-eight states, from thirty-five countries, from the other side of the world, ten thousand young men and women have come to enroll at the University of Michigan.

They spent a third of a million dollars just to reach the school; some were days on the way. for others the journey took weeks.

Why did Shu Ting Liu come all the way from Pekin, China.

Why did Dorothy Harrison leave Palm Beach, Fla., just at the time when so many northerners were planning to go South for the winter.

Why do so many girls in the East where there are so many colleges come West instead to Michigan.

Why do girls from Oregon, Texas, New York, Honolulu. Europe and Asia pick far-off Michigan.

The bond between the University of Michigan and China began in eighteen seventy, when James Burrill Angel, then president of the University of Michigan became minister to China. Following his return to his post at Ann Arbor, sons of friends he had made in the Orient followed him to Michigan for their western education.

One of the big reasons for coming to Michigan from far distant parts is relatives—mothers, fathers, and even grandfathers who attended Michigan. Some girls come because they believe Michigan to be the "co-ed's' paradise". Old prejudices against women are fast disappearing on the Ann Arbor campus, they say. Girls always have a good time at the University and still get an excellent education.

Some come because of the fame of Michigan's dormitories for women. Others come to get the benefits of the professional school which have international reputations.

GIVEN RIGHT TO VISIT U. S. TO TEACH AT ANN ARBOR

Word that visa had been issued by the American consul at Glasgow, permitting Professor P. M. Jack to enter the United States for a temporary visit was received by President Clarence Cook Little of the University of Michigan The university has been in correspondence with the state department seeking a ruling by which Professor Jack might be allowed to enter the United States, to take up his work as head of the rhetoric department.

GRAND RAPIDS GROWERS EFFECT REINCORPORATION

The Grand Rapids Growers Association one of the oldest co-operative truck marketing companies in the state has reorganized and reincorporated as the Grand Rapids Growers, Inc., with an authorized capitalization of seventy five thousand dollars of which fifty thousand dollars has been paid in.

The company has been reorganized, it was announced, to expand its operations in Western Michigan.

The assicoation ships greenhouse and truck products into about thirty eastern, southern and middle western states, besides handling supplies for its membership.

PHEASANTS VALUE TO FARMERS ISSUE

Is the Chinese ring-necked pheasant, colorful and distributed over the rural districts, an asset or a liability to the farmers.

Is he an impudent marauder, stalking through the corn fields and pulling up kernels of corn, as many farmers claim. .

Or if he a noble benefactor, waging war, upon insects that otherwise would destroy the farmers' crops.

Ever since the pheasants were introduced by the Department of Conservation in nineteen seventeen, farmers have complained about them. By fostering and protecting the pheasant, they have argued, the State has brought upon them a curse almost as bad as the plagues of Egypt in the time of Moses.

"The pheasant ought to be boosted completely out of settled farming sections where the corn crop is of any importance, says R. G. Kirby, of Lansing, farmer and graduate of the Michigan State College.

And this thought is echoed by thousands of farm readers who have observed the pheasants in their fields.

But the sportsmen and naturalists do not agree that the pheasant is a sulprit. They declare investigations have demonstrated that seventy-eight per cent of the diet of the pheasant consists of insects that the harm he does is negligible compared to his good works.

"The time will come when the farmers wish for more pheasants instead of fewer," says Thomas A. McClure, Detroit chemist and naturalist.

Then Mr. McClure tells how last year he opened the crops of twelve pheasants that had been shot in standing corn in Macomb County.

"There were only two kernels of corn in the whole twelve", he says with emphasis. "These were partly decayed grains that had been lying on the ground. The rest of the crops were full of ragweed seeds and wild grapes.

"If enough pheasants could be concentrated in a potato patch, the farmers would not need to use any paris green.

"The time will come when the farmers will wish there were more pheasants instead of fewer. They will put them in the same category as quail. Only a pheasant eats about five time as much of noxious weed seeds and insects as one quail."

HALF OF ALMA LETTER MEN HAIL FROM DETROIT

Coach Roy Campbell, athletic director at Alma college will lean heavily on Detroit this year in his effort to capture his second straight Michigan Intercollegiate football championship.

Six of the twelve letter men available for the team this year hail from Michigan metropolis, and how valuable they are to the Alma cause is shown from the fact the four of the six men won All-Michigan intercollegiate honors last year. A fifth just missed the first honor team.

The men are Leslie Hawthorne, All-M. I. A. A. half; Edgar Krapp All-M. I. A. A, quarterback; Haurant Arozian, All-M. I. A. A. tackle; Ellsworth Simmons, All-M. I. A. A. center, who missed the first honor team last year by a single vote and took a guard job on the second honor team, and Russell Riley, guard from the team of three years ago, who is certain to see considerable action again this year.

"Dear me", sighed the hard-faced admiral, "I don't see how we can stir up the government to give us some more battleships, unless we can engineer another conference to disarm and thus make war impossible."

HARD WINTER SAY NATURE STUDENTS

With muskrats building larger houses in the swamps, crows eatling their fill of corn, the old sow gathering weeds to insulate the pig pens, the trees shedding their leaves prematurely and the corn husks abnormally thick, weather wise veterans in the rural districts are predicting that Michigan is likely to have a long and severe winter.

These long range weather prognosticators declare Nature has a way of anticipating prospective weather conditions. Certain animals, particularly the muskrat and sow, have an instinct to forsee an adverse situation and prepare for it.

In building a larger house, the muskrat insulates his home, with more marsh grass and cat-tails in anticipation of a cold winter, the weather-wise assert. The crows eat ravenously of corn in expectation of a long period of light rations. Up state farmers report crows destroying hundreds of bushels of corn.

Nature has a way of protecting the corn against the cold. It provides a thick husk to protect the kernels against winter injury to next spring's seed supply. Weather-wise folks report the husks are abnormally thick this fall.

Another tip on the weather, the old timers say, is to be found in the trees of the orchard and wood lot. They have displayed a tendency to shed their leaves prematurely.

Nothing can be selected arbitrarily as the most useless object in the world although, one leg on a fifteen dollar golf cup would be a strong candidate.

The average man spends a lot of time prosecuting the work of others that he would better spend in prosecuting his own.

Your mistakes may contribute to the wisdom of others.

ROAD SURFACING TOPS LAST YEAR

More state highways have been surfaced so far this year than in the corresponding period of nineteen twenty six, accoring to highway department report..

The completed surface mileage totaled two hundred five and 7 tenth miles of which one hundred forty four and eight tenths were concrete about fifteen miles were other hard surface and the rest gravel.

Last year, up to the middle of August one hundred and seventy miles of surface were completed of which eighty nine miles were concrete.

Most of the projects finished this year where hold over contracts from nineteen twenty six. There were two hundred and six miles left over to be surfaced and since the first of the year contracts have been awarded for more than a hundred additional miles.

Indications are, according to highway officials, that the total completed mileage this year will compare favorably with that of nineteen twenty six when two hundred and eighty seven miles were finished..

The Mark of The Beast

By RUDYARD KIPLING

Fleete ran to a glass.

"By Jove," he said, "this is nasty What is it."

We could not answer. Here the chops came in, all red and juicy and Fleete bolted three in a most offensive manner. He ate on his right grinders only, and threw his head over his right shoulder as he snapped the meat. When he had finished, it struck him that he had been behaving strangely, for he said, apologetically, "I don't think I ever felt so hungry in my life. I've bolted like an ostrich."

After breakfast Strickland said to me. "Don't go. Stay here, and stay for the night."

Seeing that my house was not three miles from Strickland's, this request was absurd. But Strickland insisted, and was going to say something when Fleete interrupted by declaring in a shame-faced way that he felt hungry again. Strickland sent a man to my house to fetch over my bedding and a horse, and we three went down to the stables to pass the hours until it was time to go out for a ride. The man who has a weakness for horses never wearies of inspecting them; and when the two men are killing time in this way they gather knowledge and lies the one from the other.

There were five horses in the stables, and I shall never forget the scene as we tried to look them over. They seemed to have gone mad. They reared and screamed and nearly tore up their pickets they sweated and shivered and lathered and were distraught with fear. Strickland's horses used to know him as well as his dogs; which made the matter more curious. We left the stable for fear the brutes throwing themselves in their panic. Then Strickland turned back and called me. The horses were still frightened, but they let us 'gentle' and make much of them and put their heads in our bosoms.

"They aren't afraid of us," said Strickland. 'D' you know, I'd give three months' pay if Outrage here could talk".

But Outrage was dumb, and could only cuddle up to his master and blow his nostrils as is the custom of horses when they wish to explain things but can't. Fleete came up when we were in the stalls, and as soon as the horses saw him, their fright broke out afresh. It was all that we could do to escape from the place unkicked. Strickland said, "They don't seem to love you, Fleete,"

"Nonsense", said Fleete; 'my mare will follow me like a dog". He went to her, she was in a loose-box but as he slipped the bars she plunged, knocked him down, and broke away into the garden. I laughed, but Strickland was not amused. He took his moustache in both fists and pulled at it till it nearly came out. Fleete, instead of going off to chase his property, yawned, saying that he felt sleepy. He went to the house to lie down, which was a foolish way of spending New Year's Day.

Strickland sat with me in the the stables and asked if I had noticed anything peculiar in Fleete's manner. I said that he ate his food like a beast but, this might have been the result of living alone in the hills out of the reach of society as refined and elevating as ours, for instance. Strickland was not amused. I do not think that he listened to me, for his next sentence referred to the mark on Fleete's breast and I said it might have been caused by blister-flies, or that it was possibly a birthmark newly born and now visible for the first time. We both agreed that it was unpleasant to look at, and Strickland found occasion to say that I was a fool.

'I can't tell you what I think now' said he. "because you would call me a madman; but you must stay with me for the next few days, if you can. I want you to watch Fleete, but don't tell me what you think till I have made up my mind."

"But I am dining out tonight", I said.

"So am I,' said Strickland, 'and so if Fleete. At least if he doesn't change his mind."

We walked about the garden smoking, but saying nothing—because we are friends, and talking spoils good tobacco—till our pipes were out. Then we went to wake up Fleete. He was wide awake and and fidgeting about his room.

"I say, I want some more chops', he said. "Can I get them."

We laughted and said, 'Go and change. The ponies will be round in a minute."

"All right," said Fleete. I'll go when I get the chops—underdone ones, mind."

He seemed to be quite in earnest It was four o'clock and we had had breakfast at one; still, for a long time, he demanded those underdone chops. Then he changed into riding clothes and went out into the veranda. His pony—the mare had not been caught—would not let him come near. All three horses were unmanageable—mad, with fear—and finally Fleete said that he would stay at home and get something to eat. Strickland and I rode out wondering. As we passed the temple of Hanuman, the Silver Man came out and mewed at us.

'He is one of the regular priests of the temple." said Strickland. 'I think I should pecularily like to lay my hands on him."

There was no spring in our gallop on the race-course that evening The horses were stade, and moved as though they had been ridden out

"The fright after breakfast has been to much for them.' said Strickland.

That was the only remark he made through the remainder of the ride. Once or twice I think he swore to himself; but that did not count.

We came back in the dark at seven o'clock and saw that there were no lights in the bungalow. "Careful ruffians my servants are, said Strickland.

My horse reared at something on the carriage drive, and Fleete stood up under its nose.

"What are you doing, grovelling about the garden," said Strickland

But both horses bolted and nearly threw us. We dismounted by the stables and returned to Fleete, who was on his hands and knees under the orange-bushes.

'What the devil's wrong with you," said Strickland.

"Nothing, nothing in the world,' said Fleete, speaking very quickly and thickly. "I've been gardening—botanizing, you know. The smell of the earth is delightful. I think I'm going for a walk—a long walk—all night."

Then I saw that there was something excessively out of order somewhere, and I said to Strickland, "I am not dining out."

"Bless you." said Strickland. "Here, Fleete, get up. You'll catch fever there. Come in to dinner and let's have the lamps lit. We'll all dine at home."

Fleete stood up unwillingly, and said, "No lamps—no lamps. It's much nicer here. Let's dine outside and have some more chops—lot's of 'em and underdone—bloody ones with gristle.

Now a December evening in Northern India is bitterly cold, and Fleete's suggestion was that of a maniac.

"Come in" said Strickland, sternly. "Come in at once."

Fleete came, and when the lamps were brought, we saw that he was literally plastered with dirt from head to foot. He must have been rolling in the garden. He eyes were horrible to look at. There was a green light behind them, not in them, if you understand, and the man's lower lip hung down.

Strickland said, "There is going to be trouble—big trouble—tonight. Don't you change your riding things.."

We waited and waited for Fleete's reappearance, and ordered dinner in the meantime. We could hear him moving about his own room, but there was no light there. Presently from the room came the long-drawn howl of a wolf.

People write and talk lightly of blood running cold and hair standing up and things of that kind. Both sensations are too horrible to be trifled with. My heart stopped as though a knife had been driven through it and Strickland turned as white as the table-cloth.

The howl was repeated and was answered by another howl far across the fields.

That set the gilded road on the horror. Strickland dashed into Fleete's room. I followed, and we saw Fleete getting out of the window. He made beast noises in the back of his throat. He could not answer us when we shouted at him. He spat.

I don't quite remember what followed, but I think that Strickland must have stunned him with the long boo-jack or else I should never have been able to sit on his chest. Fleete could not speak, he could only snarl and his snarls were those of a wolf, not of a man, The human spirit must have been giving away all day and have died out with the twilight. We were dealing with a beast that had once been Fleete.

When Dr. Caldwell started to practice medicine back in eighteen seventy-five the needs for a laxative were not as great as they are today. People lived normal, quiet lives, ate plain wholesome food and got plenty of fresh air and sunshine. But even that early there were drastic physics and purges for the relief of constipation which Dr. Caldwell did not believe were good for human beings to put into their system. So he wrote a prescription for a laxative to be used by his patients.

The prescription for constipation that he used early in his practice, and which he put in drug stores in eighteen ninety-two under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid vegetable remedy intended for women, children and elderly people, and they need just such a mild, safe gentle bowel stimulant as Syrup Pepsin.

Under successful maangement this prescription has proven it worth and is now the largest selling liquid laxative in the world. The fact that millions of bottles are used a year proves that it has won the confidence of people who needed it to get relief from headaches, biliousness, flatulence, indigestion loss of appetite and sleep bad breath, dyspepsia, colds and fevers.

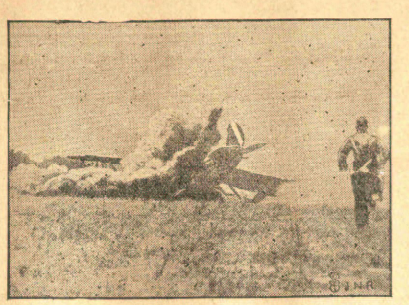
never without Dr. Caldwell's

Millions of families are now Syrup Pepsin and if you will once start using it you will also always have a bottle handy for emergencies.

It is particularly pleasing to know that the most of it is bought by mothers for themselves and the children, though Syrup Pepsin is just as valuable for elderly people. All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin", Monticello, Iillinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

CRASH!



NO "make believe" about this snapshot—no "fake" about it. It's a remarkable photo snapped by an alert photograhpher just at the moment that an aeroplane—being uesed at the time in the making of a "movie thriller"—accidentally came down in a crash. The camera man, however, failed to state whether the aviator survived or not.

TEST EAR THEORY FOR LONGEVITY

Probate Judge Clark E. Higbee of Kent County conducted an interesting examination of the ears and nostrils of fifteen hundred Civil war veterans during the recent national encampment in Grand Rapids of the Grand Army of the Republic with a view of adding to the accumulation of evidence that large ears and large nostrils are signs of probable longevity..

From an upper story of a downtown store, with a pair of field glasses to his eyes and his secretary, Mrs. Margaret Welsh, at his side to record his observations, the probate judge who is prominent as a sociological and biological student, watched the hundreds of Civil war veterans as they marched past in their annual parade.

When the last of them had passed it had been recorded that fully ninety per cent had large ears and free ear lobes and large open nostrils. Half of the remaining ten per cent had large lobes which were attached and the other five per cent had no lobes.

This discovery was in line with reports of sociologists that long ears apparently mean long life but merely as an observation and not as a theory and the only proof obtained thus far is that very old persons have very large ears.

In an inspection of hundreds of veterans' ears, the probate judge did not find a single pair of small ears, although there were many of about ordinary size. The judge came to the conclusion that there will be many of these veterans marching in these parades for ten more years.

IMLAY CITY CIVIL WAR VET OWNS OLD BATTLE FLAG

A possession of Nelson Cheney, eighty-three years old, Imlay City veteran of the Civil War is the famous old battle flag of Company M. First Michigan Artillery, which was given him by Captain A. H. Emery before his death a few years ago.

Mr. Cheney was born south of the present site of Imlay City, October seventeen, eighteen forty-four. At that time the country for miles around was covered with standing timber and wild animals roamed the woods.

Cheney made three unsuccessful attempts to join the Union army but was rejected each time on account of his youth. The fourth attempt was successful and he joined Company M and served two and one half years fighting Morgan's men in Tennessee and Virginia. He passed through the battle of Blue Springs, Walker Ford, Taberville, and many others.

Of course it's all right to be born a leader, but the man in the rear has a better opportunity to get away.

When a man has time to worry about posterity, it's a pretty good sign that he isn't adding to it very largely.

DRY YOUR CORN M. S. C. WARNS

Seed corn will be damaged seriously this year if it is not stored properly. According to the farm crops department at Michigan State College, a great deal of Michigan corn contains as high as forty five to fifty-five per cent moisture Temperatures of twenty-eight to thirty degrees will spoil such corn for seed purposes if it is left out of doors.

Expensive equipment is not necessary to properly care for seed corn to preserve the germinating quality. The farm crops department suggests the use of a vacant room in a house or a brooder house In some localities, commercial concerns will dry corn for a small charge per bushel.

According to the crop specialists, Michigan farmers who have a good strain of well matured corn will make a good profit on the time spent in preparing such corn for seed purposes. Good seed corn, they say, will be scarce throughout the corn-growing states.

It is said to be more economical to dry the corn as early in the season as possible. The lower the temperature, the greater is the amount of heat required to eliminate the moisture in the corn. The source of heat should be below the corn during the drying process.

CONSUMERS POWER BUYS EATON PLANT

The sale of the Charlotte plant and system of the New Charlotte Gas company to the Consumers Power company was announced last week by J. W. Sawyer, who for about seventy years has been manager of the gas company. Sawyer will retire voluntarily from the gas business.

Negotiations leading up to the actual sale were conducted between Mr. Sawyer and Clark R. Graves, former Charlotte boy and present Lansing district manager for the Consumers company. Under the terms of the sales agreement, the local gas property formally was turned over about November first, when Mr. Sawyer will retire as treasurer and general manager and devote his time to the management of his gasoline and oil business at that place.

The Charlotte plant and system which includes a high pressure main to supply the city of Eaton Rapids, ten miles from the local plant, it will be added to the present Lansing district of that company under the direct supervision of Mr. Graves. Tne company's electric business and sub-station in Charlotte is now part of the Battle Creek district under District Manager B. S. Eppes. Eventually the electric business here probably will be transferred to the Lansing district and there is but one office for both branches of the business.

The New Charlotte Gas company was organized nearly forty years ago by the late Judge Frank Hooker, Mr. Sawyer went to the company thirty-five years ago as a gas maker and won rapid promotion until he was placed in active management of the system about twenty seven years ago. About twenty years ago he was appointed treasurer and general manager and since has been in sole charge of operation. Associated with him as stockholders of the company were H. L. Babcock of Chicago, president, and E. J. Elles of Charlotte, vice president and secretary

STRANDED TEN MONTHS SHIP WILL BE FLOATED

The wrecking tug, Thompson of DeTour, has arrived at Horshoe harbor to asset in the work of floating the hull of the steamer, City of Bangor, which went aground on Keweenaw point in last November disastrous storm The cabins, boilers and engines of the ship have been removed and are in storage on Porter's island, in Copper harbor.

The large hole in the stern of the ship has been closed and improvised pumps have bailed the water out of her bottom.. In a few days the hull will be dragged from its fastenings, floated and towed down the lake to dry dock where it will be converted into a lightering barge.

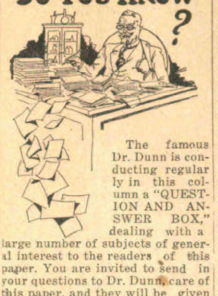
DO YOU KNOW



The famous Dr. Dunn is conducting regularly in this column a "QUESTION AND ANSWER BOX," dealing with a large number of subjects of general interest to the readers of this paper. You are invited to send in your questions to Dr. Dunn, care of this paper, and they will be given prompt consideration; and where deemed of general interest, will be answered through this column so far as space permits.

Dr. Dunn has for a long time been a member of the executive staff of the Michigan Mutual Liability Company of Detroit, and has become famous through his weekly broadcasting over WGHP. The doctor has had wide professional, commercial and sociological experience, and while the absolute accuracy of the answers to all questions is not guaranteed, the most authentic sources of information will be the basis of all replies.

Q. Dear Dr. Dunn. What state in the Union ranks highest in education.

A Michigan ranks highest in education among the North Central States It has the oldest agricultural college in the union, and the first State university. The University of Michigan was the first State university. The University of Michigan was the first state university to admit women. The educational institutions are; University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, enrollment nineteen twenty-three approximately eleven thousand nine hundred. Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing; Michigan State Normal College, Ypsilanti. Central Michigan Normal School, Mt. Pleasant; Northern State Normal School, Marquette; Western State Normal School. Kalamazoo; Michigan College of Mines, Houghton and eight denominational colleges.

Q. Dear Dr. Dunn. Are American made aeroplanes finding a ready market abroad

A. American made aeroplanes are being sold in most civilized countries engaged in aircraft work today, though the large volume of export market is on the North American and South American continent. Some thirteen aircraft and six engines valued together at nearly a quarter million dollars were shipped to Canada during the first six months of nineteen twenty seven; and a number of the planes to be supplied to Canadian flying clubs through the Canadin government have been ordered from United States firms.

In the old lands there is, of course, considerably greater competition, but even there American planes are fairly ready sellers. In the United States itself planes are being absorbed.

Q. Dear Dr. Dunn. How many harbors has the State of Michigan.

A Michigan has thirty-one government improved natural harbors besides many more improved at local expenses; these harbors are so well distributed in the State that there are ninety-one places where the different railroads touch the shore line.

Q. Dear Dr. Dunn. What is the oldest form of casualty insurance company operating on the North American continent

A. It is one hundred and seventy five years since the first mutual insurance company on the North American continent was founded by Benjamin Franklin and his associates. This was known as the Philadelphia Contributionship and wrote casualty insurance. An original policy written by this company in eighteen hundred and four is in the possession of Mr. P. W. A. Fitzsimmons, President of the Michigan Mutual Liability Company, originated one hundred and seventyfive years ago that are still followed by the Michigan Mutual Liability Company

Let's Drive the Poultry Thieves out of Michigan

Stealing chickens, ducks and turkeys from the farms of this State has proven so profitable that we are fighting an organized gang of bandits who use motor trucks to rush their spoils to city markets. It has got to stop.

The Michigan Business Farmer has set aside ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS ($1,000.00) to be paid in rewards to anyone, including state and, county police officers, who secures the evidence and conviction of poultry thieves who steal chickens, ducks, turkeys or guinea fowl from its subscribers.

FIRST REWARD PAID

Frank Watkins, R. 2, Holly, Michigan, was paid the first reward under this offer. The thief he caught served 30 days in the Oakland county jail and paid $65 fine. Frank has $50 to show for ridding Michigan of one poultry thief.

"Wear the white ribbon, my sister

Wednesday afternoon after an inspiring song service and beautiful special music we were stirred with enthusiasm as we listened to Rev. R. N. Holsaple, Supt. of Mich. Anti Saloon League, who said "there is not a wet in this country who can hold up his end of the argument for three minutes against an intelligent dry. Always keep yourself posted regarding the situation. Ask yourselves two questions in the face of wet propaganda Can this statement be true? and, If it is possible, is it probable?" I give below a clipping from a Battle Creek paper reviewin this address.

More "Noise" about prohibitiod a health educational campaign and fairer treatment from the papers in large cities were the three outstanding points made by Mr. Holsaple.

"I can think of no greater need at the present," he declared, "than for the friends of prohibition to give vocal expression to their loyalty to the cause. There is one thing that I have noticed wherever I have gone—that whenever one hears a noise about prohibition, it is invariably a wet noise. We on the dry side ought to make some noise to offset the impression that is rapidly gaining currency that the wets have the only real case to present."

In explanation of why this noise is lacking at the present moment, Mr. Holsaple said that in the first place the drys were generally a peace-loving lot and second that the average prohibitionist does not take the time or trouble to inform himself as to the chief wet arguments and the facts which, he declared, "could put a wet under the table in three minutes in any argument." The application of logical tests to the wet claims, he said would demonstrate their falsity in the great majority of cases.

He ridiculed the anti-prohibitionists' assertion that the 18th amendment was "slipped over when the people were not looking" "The falsity of that argument is clearly seen when we consider that the amendment was ratified not merely by the required 36 states, but by 46." he said. The claim that there is now more liquor consumed was also refuted, by Mr. Holsaple, who cited government tests which showed that the average liquor of today is ten times more toxic than that of the preprohibition period.

"Assuming, as we rightly may, that that is true, we would expect to see ten times the drunkenness that we did before, or at least an appreciable increase. We know from our own observation that that is not the case," he declared.

The second great need of the prohibition movement is a great scientific educational campaign which will bring the harmful effects of alcoholic beverages acutely into the realization of every individual, Mr. Holsaple further stated While the 18th amendment and its enforcing laws are important, it must be remembered, he said, that the ultimate fate of such a movement cannot rest on laws alone. They must be supplimented by training in scientific temperance which will make laws unnecessary in the end.

The third need of the movement is a fair and square deal on the part of the great metropolitan news papers and magazines. "I do not lay this charge against the smaller papers or the Michigan press", he stated. "The Michigan dailies and weeklies are practically without exception squarely behind prohibition. But such papers as the Chicago Tribune, The New York Times, the World, the Herald Tribune, and the whole string of Hearst papers are all guilty of stunning and deliberate attempts to misrepresent the situation. I for one sincerely wish that they would quit lying about prohibition and tell the truth."

Following this wonderful address was a dramatization showing the crusades and early work of the W. C. T. U., during which bricks were laid by each district in proportion to its membership to make a "wall of defense" against the liquor traffic. Various historical characters in the temperance movement were represented by the women who were dressed in the style of their grandmother, the early pioneers of the W. C. T. U. movement. This was very effective and I am hoping sometime we may have a similar pageant in our local union. Wednesday evening in the Sanitarium gymnasium we heard State Rep. Vernor Main who severly scored John W. Smith then mayor of Detroit for his utterances regarding Prohibition Enforcement in that city and said "If I were Attorney General of Michigan I should seriously scan his statements to see if such are not sufficient to constitute grounds for charges of conspiracy. Such remarks ought not to be tolerated and I cannot find words to express my feeling of contempt for a man who would smear the records of his city and state with that sort of propaganda."

Report of the Sheriff's Office, Week Ending Nov. 12, 1927

In the Sheriff's report for last week, through an inexcusable choice of words, it was made to appear that Deputy Harley Wood was "let out" because we had no further work for him. Such is far from the facts in the matter. Wood has always been one of my very best men, I regret very much to have lost him and I regret still more to have given the public the impression that he was relieved for any other reason than to accept a better job.

Saturday night Nov. 5, the J. C. Penney store was broken into through a window and a cash box containing $682 was stolen. The Sheriff's department spent much effort on various "leads" but on Friday the 11th an empty cash box was found in the vicinity of College and West Sts. by Mr. Travis. He reported this to the Sheriff's office and investigation found it to be the box stolen from the Penney store. Further search revealed, hidden under a pile of trash the inside tray of the box with the money apparently intact. The box and the money were taken to the office and an officer detailed to watch the place, meanwhile, the statement of finding the box deploring the lack of clues and practically admitting defeat, was given to the paper. At about 8, the same evening, Lyman Benson, age 20, a Freshman in Hillsdale College, was arrested in the act of placing his hand in the cache. He was brought to jail, where he confessed to the robbery; all the money stolen has been recovered excepting about $30.

The Concealed weapon Committee, which met at 5 p. m. Tuesday issued one permit to carry a concealed weapon, it was to Chas Shepard of Hillsdale.

On Tuesday afternoon, Van A. Loomis of the Dept of public safety supervised the destruction of the liquor seized in Fish, Bruno, Ostrander, Hutchins and Webster cases. This considerably relieved the congested conditions of our storerooms and provides room for more.

O. A. Diverts of Jonesville was arrested and charged with being drunk, he pleaded guilty before Justice Fitzsimmons and paid a fine and costs of $43.20. He was released.

Clifford Rose, of Jefferson Twp. was arrested Tuesday, on a warrant from Calhoun Co., charging him with larceny of tires at Battle Creek. He was turned over to the Sheriff of that County on Thursday.

The robbery of the Penney store caused the officers of the city and the county to be a little more observing of strange cars and strangers than usual, with the result that on Wednesday night two young men were arrested, who had been under observation for several days. They were rooming on Railroad St. and been seen with several different cars, Those young men were Howard Clapsaddle 19 and Leland Heel 20, of Ingham Co. and at the time arrested their car was loaded with "hot" goods, phonograph, shoes, toilet preparations of every known variety, field glasses and a bag of nickels and slugs, also a loaded revolver. Nick Carter could, no doubt weave a real "thriller" from the tale told to us by these young men and only over a period of six or seven weeks 5 automobiles, 3 of which were recovered including the Star stolen in Hillsdale on the 4th inst., 6 jobs of breaking and entering at night and 3 different offenses of armed robbery. Their "confession" which was obtained very much like mother gets the water from the clothing implicated also 2 others who had just left for other parts, but from information received from the boys they were traced into Hudson and there arrested. One of these Tom Collins, age 29, was the "man behind the gun" in one of the "stick up" jobs in Saginaw Co. and no doubt others also. Collins will be turned over today (Sunday) to the officers of that county. Heel and Clapsaddle will go to Ingham Co. for trial on a charge of robbery armed in the county. The fourth member of the party, John Micks, age 60 told the boys he was a professional safe cracker, but he wont tell us, so he will be released. The officers of 6 counties in Michigan can now clear from their records, some of the crimes which are now explained.

Alfred Mingus, of Ray, age 24, was arrested Friday morning on suspicion of having participated in the Freight House robbery at Montgomery, on Nov. 2. He did participate and also stole a car in Toledo and passed a forged instrument. He was arraigned before John Fitzsimmons on Saturday morning, he was placed under bonds of $1000, after waiving examination. No bond in sight yet.

Tim Straub and Chas Lasher were released Saturday after serving sentences for drunkenness.

Prisoners in County Jail 11, Sentenced 3 Unsentenced 8. Total 11.

Detroit Marks Appeal to Farmers Here

On Friday last the Jersey farmers of this county met in Hillsdale and pulled off one of the most important stunts of the season. For a number of months there has been talk among milk producers that their markets should be broadened, and that they should be able to forward their product to distant cities. Starting November 21 the patrons on the milk routes throughout the county whether Jersey keepers or not will ship their milk to the Wilson Creamery Company of Detroit by means of trucks especially designed for the purpose This will average the patrons a good price and they are dead sure of getting their money same as they are now. Although started by the Jersey breeders of the county it is not confined to them and any patron no matter what stock he keeps can ship to the Wilson Company. This concern has formed a merger with some others in Detroit and will cater to Hillsdale county trade, and we see no reason why they cannot since the route from here is almost entirely paved On Tuesday the farmers met in Hillsdale to further arrange for the deal. Forest Haynes of Osseo is head of the association.

"Two new churches were built the first year, at Romeo and Orion, and extensive repairs were made to the churches already built. Instead of monthly Masses, the people were offered services every Sunday and, in the four principal centers, four other days each week.

"Classes in catechism and of instruction for adults were established, and are still being maintained, in a dozen centers of population. For the most part, these classes are held in farmhouses, sometimes on Sunday, but more often in the evening, the children and adults of the neighborhood coming, in some cases, several miles, to attend.

"In the short space of three years, the work has brought remarkable results. Today St. Philip Neri is one of the strongest and largest parishes, in both territory and number of communicants, in the Diocese of Detroit.

"An average of 1,400 people have attended Mass every Sunday and the average of weekly communions has reached 435.

"Because of the absence of any definite previous records, a comparison is possible only between the first year of the new method and the third. In the first year the Mass attendance was 52,720, with 8,979 Communions; the third year these figures increased to 86,282 for Mass attendance and 22,445 communions.

"During the three years the pastor and his assistants have made more than 8,000 visits to homes, an average of nearly 15 visits to each family, and each priest has seen to it that every Catholic child in the district has received, or is receiving, religious instruction.

"The work of the mission is carried out in strict accordance with the plan outlined by the Church Extension Society, amended and extended to meet local needs. The plan has functioned perfectly in this district and is being followed in scores of rural communities throughout the United States. Today its originator, Bishop Kelly, is engaged in placing his whole diocese of Oklahoma, outside the cities, on the same schedule.

Introduction of New AC and Rectifier Tubes Announced

New Tubes Replace "A" Batteries With Use of Small Transformers; Full Wave and Half-Wave Rectifiers for "B" Battery Elimination.

New tubes which with the use of a small step-down transformer will eliminate "A" batteries from receiving sets especially designed to accommodate them, and improved rectifier tubes for use in eliminating "B" batteries, or in special circuits to do away with "A" batteries, will soon be placed on the market according to an announcement by E. E. Bucher, General Sales Manager of the Radio Corporation of America. These new tubes numbering four in all are the result of ceaseless research and experiment extending over a number of years, on the part of the Radio Corporation and its manufacturing associates, the General Electric Company and the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company.

"There will shortly be introduced," reads Mr. Bucher's announcement, "two AC types of Radiotrons having operating characteristics similar to those of the 201-A type and which insofar as performance is concerned give the same results obtainable from the 201-A or 199 types of tubes; but in which unrectified current obtained from a step-down transformer eliminates the usual 'A' battery. These are to be known as types UX-226 and UY-227.

"In addition the Radio Corporation plans to introduce two new and improved Radiotron rectifiers of the filament type for use in 'B' battery eliminators, or, in special circuits for 'A' battery elimination employing series filament drive. These tubes will be known as types UX-280 and UX-281."

"The new AC Radiotrons will not be immediately applicable to the present types of receivers," according to Mr. Bucher, "and they are not to be considered as taking the place of any of the present types of standard vacuum tubes. To accommodate the new AC tubes in the prevalent types of broadcast receivers, it would be necessary to make radical changes in design, and in many cases it would be entirely impracticable. The new Radiotron rectifiers, on the other hand, are applicable to many existing radio rectifying devices without further adaptation. They will give outstanding performance in battery eliminators especially designed for their characteristics."

Following is a general description and detailed specifications of the new Radiotrons and their fields of practical application.

"AC" Types of Radiotrons

Radiotron UX-226 is a 1-½ volt AC filament type, drawing current of 1.05 amperes, and intended for radio frequency and audio frequency amplification in circuits especially designed for its use. The filament is energized from an AC lighting source through and in the first a. f. stage, UY-227 in the detector stage, and one of the Radiotron power amplifiers in the last audio stage, i. e., UX-112, UX-171 or UX-210. The requisite low-voltage supply for the filament may be obtained from an independent step-down transformer or from additional low-voltage windings on the usual "B" or plate supply transformers.

The New Rectifier Tubes

UX-280 is a full-wave rectifier designed for rectifying apparatus and circuits requiring greater D. C. output than that afforded by the standard Radiotron rectifier UX-213. UX-280 gives D. C. output current of 125 milliamperes. It may be employed interchangeably in radio devices designed for UX-213. The increased D. C. output of UX-280 will, however, be secured only in circuits especially designed for it. This tube has a maximum overall height of 5⅝" and a maximum overall diameter of 2 3/16".

UX-281 is a half-wave rectifier similar in external appearance to the UX-216-B, although of increased physical dimensions. UX-281 is interchangeable mechanically and electrically with the UX-216-B, in all radio rectifying devices primarily designed for the UX-216-B. In circuits especially designed for UX-281, a D. C. output current of 110 milliamperes is available.

Both of the new Radiotron rectifiers are of the hot cathode type, equipped with a new ribbon, oxide-coated filament which insures great ruggedness and long life.

Application of Rectifier Tubes

The new Radiotron rectifiers, UX-280 and UX-281, are immediately applicable to devices which heretofore employed UX-213 and UX-216-B, such as the RCA Duo-Rectron, the 104 Loud Speaker and the radio-phonograph combinations of the phonograph companies equipped for A. C. drive. It is expected that the new rectifier tubes will attain great popularity in battery eliminating devices, particularly as they do not necessitate the more costly smoothing-out condensers required by some types of rectifiers which have high initial break-down or "peak" voltages.

The combination of the new A. C tubes, UX-226 and UY-227, a power tube in the last audio stage, such as UX-171, and one of the new rectifiers UX-280 or UX-281, in a radio receiver especially designed to accommodate these new tubes, provides complete A. C. socket operation, eliminating all batteries or liquid containing devices. The requisite voltages for operation of the filament circuits of the various tubes can be secured by equipping the power transformer, which usually provides the plate or "B" current, with special low-voltage

You need this valuable newspaper in your home, because: You will receive FRESH NEWS every week, that is edited for farmers by men who know agriculture.

THE NATIONAL FARM NEWS gives the farmer and the rural town man an all-agricultural survey of the week's news, with a leaning toward the economics of production and marketing. The editorial staff is in close touch with the marketing machinery of the Agricultural Department and all the heads of the various cooperative marketing associations that are located in Washington.

WASHINGTON is the great clearing house of farm news. Every day brings the National Government into more intimate relationship with the country's basic industry—farming. Congress is just at the beginning of its real farm legislation. The wild scramble of blocs and panaceas that marked the past few years has subsided. But from now on there will be a steady, constructive program developed for the permanent improvement of farming.

Washington is the headquarters of the United States Department of Agriculture. This vast governmental agency is constantly at work on farm problems. It concerns itself not only with production, but with the business side of agriculture.

Washington, too, is the headquarters of many other branches of the Federal Government whose work touches in many vital ways the business of the farmers.

Most of the big farmers' organizations recognize the strategic advantage of being close to the governmental wheels. They maintain headquarters at the National Capital.

Washington is the center of farm news.

IN addition to its news, The National Farm News Carries some carefully conducted departments. For the housewife there is the women's page, where interests and matters pertaining to the household are discussed.

In addition to these features is an excellent legal department. Advice on knotty problems may be had for the asking, given by competent lawyers engaged in daily practice.

HOW TIMBER FIRES OFTEN START

HOW TO PREVENT FIRES

1

Matches — Be sure your match is out. Break it in two before you throw it away.

Tobacco—Be sure that pipe ashes and cigar or cigarette stubs are dead before throwing them away. Never throw them into brush, leaves or needles.

Making Camp—Before building a fire scrape away all inflammable material from a spot 5 feet in diameter. Dig a hole in the center and in it build your camp fire. Keep your fire small. Never build it against trees or logs or near brush.

Brush Burning—Never burn slash or brush in windy weather or while there is the slightest danger that the fire will get away.

A carelessly left campfire—a carelessly thrown match or spark—may mean acres of timber destroyed in a few hours. Only decades of slow growth will replace the loss.

Pine forests catch fire easily. Many travelers from states where there are no forests, or only hardwood forests, do not realize that our northern woods, composed largely of highly inflammable pine, will burn so easily. The underlying bed of leaves and dry pine needles acts like tinder in carrying fire from a spark dropped in it. Fires creep underneath this forest floor and appear in distant places.

Be careful! Help preserve the forest treasures for everybody's use.

Does the Unmarried Person Bear His Share of Taxes

Somewhere in the dim past we have heard considerable discussion on the question of forcing old bachelors and young bachelors to pay a special tax apart from the regular taxation and now comes a dub from somewhere in Michigan and writes to the Michigan Business Farmer at Mt Clemens wanting to know if the "old Bach" really does stand as much of the tax burden as he ought to do. The correspondent expresses himself this wise

"Dear Editor: Does the unmarmaried person pay his or her share of taxes now? Is the childless person a retarder to the welfare of the community? These are difficult questions to answer for the reason of the complete viewpoint.

Much time has been spent in law making houses in several states trying to place added tax burdens on single men—but aside of a poll tax to be worked out on the road I am not aware of any state laws taxing unmarried persons and since the adoption of the 19th amendment it would seem more difficult to make a discriminatory law effective.

Michigan has shown the way for several innovations in state aid and perhaps can initiate laws to make the childless contribute more to the public fund than now for the easement of the large family, but oh how hard to administer an act taxing the childless for the benefit of all other persons.

The United States has already done something along this line in making an army, navy and marine corps. The State has also made the single person liable to closer seizure for debt. Again every person who patronizes a public utility contributes indirectly to make a fund to educate all children.

Perhaps after all the single person is now paying. And above all, single persons are preventing overpopulation in better ways than some.—E. Richardson, Huron Co."

We think possibly someone has imagined that single folks never have much expense and about all they have to do is to doll up and attend every public affair that occurs and flirt with the opposite sex likewise situated. This is entirely wrong both in theory and practice. The single person finds himself or herself well occupied most of the time to provide means to pay expenses and to look after his or her affairs since there is no one else to help, and while the single person does not contribute very largely to the county's population he or she sometimes rather pities the homeless waifs and hungry half-fed, half clothed children who are forced to worry along until old enough to shirk for themselves in a hap-hazard fashion. Observers have been busy along these lines and have unearthed numberless reasons why there should be fewer and better children in the Universe. The over production of families in cities among the poor and destitute lays the foundation for a condition of crime beyond comprehension and furthermore it is a proven fact that the parents who go on year after year bringing children into this cold world and turning them over to the county authorities to care for are far from good citizens. We want less of this and a much more comprehensive understanding of the laws of this state, and the laws of humanity and this does not comprise the establishment of a kindergarten in every poor destitute home by any means. We have no advice to offer married folks but we have a kick to make when they insinuate we are a slacker. As far as taxes are concerned the fact that some father brings a large and dependent family into this world to be cared for by the county, does not guarantee he is a good citizen or should be tax free. We have seen too much of it—and we hope we shall see less.

Farm Incomes Drop With Tax Decrease

A slight decrease in taxes on rented farms in Michigon in 1926 did not result in an increased net income to their owners as the simaltaneous decrease in farm rentals more than equaled the gain from reduced taxes, according to a survey made by M. S. C. cooperating with the United States Department of Agriculture.

The survey included figures on taxes and rent returns from 614 rented farms located in the Lower Peninsula.

Farm owners in the southwestern counties of the State fared better than owners in other sections. Taxes were reduced from six to eight cents an acre in southwestern Michigan and there was an increase instead of a decrease in rentals.

Farm land owners in the Thumb and in the cut over districts found themselves confronted with a slight decrease in taxes but a notable decrease in rents. The rental decrease in the Thumb reduced the average rent per acre from 83 cents to 35 cents.

The net returns in rents to owners of rented farms in Michigan in 1926 averaged 1.13 dollars. This was 10 cents per acre less than the returns in 1925.

Taxes on the farms included in this survey were 54.8 percent of the net income before payment of taxes in 1926.

Somerset Congregational Church

Historical facts are often more interesting than fiction.

People in the vicinity of Somerset, being located on one of the paved roads which now shorten distances, are missing a rare opportunity to hear a most interesting and instructive presentation of historical facts connected with the religous and forward movement of the world, by not attending regularly and listening to the series of sermons given by Prof. W. H. Roberts of Hillsdale College Department of History at the Somerset Congregational Church.

Every Sunday people are heard to say "the sermon today was the best we have heard yet."

The Armistice day sermon last Sunday was certainly a masterpiece for accuracy and tact in stating historical facts in a somewhat different form from the popular conception leading up to the world war.

The French Government, (not the French people), was as much too blame as the German war lords according to secret treaties made with Russia now public.

The invisible Government in the United States loaned money to the allies because considered the best bet to win. Pres. Wilson was helpless to stop the flood of propaganda which finally brought America into the war.

The president when forced into the war, endeavored then to make it a war to end war, but again the invisible Government took a hand. After the victory had been won with immense sacrifice of human life, the president was discredited by a flood of propaganda and America was prevented from taking her place at the head of an international council organized to prevent war.

Wayne Gray, Athletic Director of the Addison High School conducted the adult bible class, which had a record attendance for the year.

Prof. Gray advised the class to decide upon an aim and work to that end. There will be further discussions along this line next Sunday. Here are some suggestions better Christian service in the Community, aid in increasing church attendance. There are many others which could be mentioned, and no doubt will be at the opening of the class next Sunday.

Dear friend do you realize the awful toll the automobile is taking of human life in this country? During the month of September just past there were 78 deaths each day in the United States. 2350 persons lost their lives in September and 1700 of these were afoot. This means that deaths from this cause increase 5 percent over last year altuough some cities show a decrease. Why this is nobody knows. The safe and sane towns which report a decrease are Milwaukee, St. Louis, Kansas City, Rochester N. Y., Birmingham Ala., Dayton O. Sour Stomach

Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid gassy stomach, and relef will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine 'Phillips Milk of Magnesia' has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three time as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gasses. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowls and gently urges the souring taste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips" Twenty five cent and fifty cent bottles any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of the Chas. H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since eighteen seventy-five.

RICE LURES FISH IN HOUGHTON FROM SPORTSMEN'S BAIT

Houghton Lake in Roscommon county, has long been noted for its supply of pickerel and wall-eyed pike. From no inland lake in the state has more of these fish been taken by anglers than from this body of water.

For some time of late the catch has not been coming up to the expectations of either residents or visiting anglers. The old story that this was due to the pike shedding their teeth has not seemed to satisfy, so the state was called in to solve the problem.

Recently a gill net was set in the lake by the conservation department and the contents of the stomachs of the fish caught therein examined. Without exception they showed that in spite of the fact that the weed beds on the lake are alive with minnows the fish had been feeding on the wild celery and rice, which, within late years has sprung up in the lake.

This will account for the fact that the fish have been paying little attention to the minnows dangled before their eyes off the "middle grounds" but will not solve the problem of how to induce them to change their diet.

HOSPITAL IN LIEU OF RURAL DOCTOR

The old-time country doctor, who used to drive fifteen miles with horse and buggy on a stormy night to save a sick child, appears to be almost extinct. Farmers everywhere are wondering what they are going to do without him. But in St. Johns there is a man who says the answer is to build hospitals and make them community health centers.

The man is Schuyler L. Marshall one of the publishers of the Clinton County Republican News. So convincingly did he talk that his fellow citizens raised one hundred sixty thousand dollars and built a hospital that will serve as a health center for all Clinton County.

For "performing the greatest community service in the United States in nineteen twenty-siv", the Republican News has been awarded a loving cup by the National Editorial Association.

In the future the doctors of Clinton County will seldom be found driving along country roads to see their patients. Rather , the patients will come to them at the hospital, where they may be treated in immaculate and sanitary surroundings,. And if, they insist on being sick, they will find no better place to spend their ailing hours than the attractively decorated bedrooms of the hospital.

A representative of the vanishing type of country physician who is watching the St. John's experiment with keen interest is Dr. L. L. Kelley of Okemos, one of the oldest practitioners in the state. He spent forty-four years at Farwell, in Clare County, and has been in Okemos for eight years. At seventy-eight he still carries on a large practice.

During his years at Farwell, Dr. Kelley drove with horse and buggy or rode horseback an average of fifty miles a day. Once ne went twenty miles on snowshoes.

Even Dr. Kelley no longer uses a horse to visit his patients. He rides in a modern high-powered motor car.

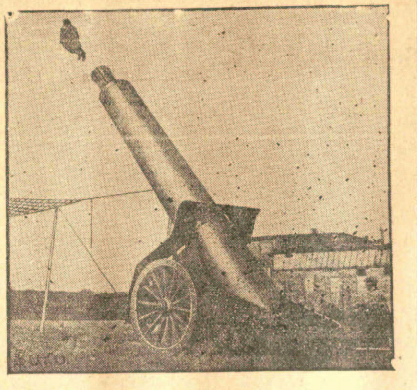
WAYNE TAX INCREASED TO RAISE TEN MILLION

Wayne county tax rate for the next period will be ten cents per thousand higher than it was the last period, it was announced when the board of auditors submitted its annual report to the county board of supervisors. The new rate will be one dollar and eighty-three cents per thousand, against one dollar and seventy two cents for the last period.

The total budget for the next period will be ten million, four hundred ninety one thousand, nine hundred seventy five dollars and seventy five cents, of which seven million, eight hundred thirty four thousand, five hundred, dollars and fifty-six cents must be raised by taxes. The additional two million, six hundred fifty-seven thousand, four hundred seventy-five dollars is anticipated from county fees.

Various road widenings, under the Covert act, are responsible for the increase, and in addition the auditors reported that for the past year seventy thousand dollars more than was in last year's budget was required for the mother's pension..

'HUMAN BULLET'



ONE of the most startling stunts ever attempted was successfully accomplished in Germany the other day. Our photo above pictures it—a woman being shot from a cannon, sailing out in the air to land in a net forty meters distant. The special gun used weighs sixty tons, is ten meters long and eight and fifty hundredths meters in circumference. Startling—is right.

What will you be doing at 65?

Statistics show that out of one hundred average men reaching the age of sixty-five, six are wealthy and are able to retire or enjoy the niceties of life without worry. Nine are self-supporting but are compelled to work. Eighty-five are dependent upon children, relatives or charity.

This is a sad state of affairs and could, in most cases be avoided.

At the time the photographer snapped the picture, the intruder at the right was being greeted with snaps and barks because he dared disturb the peaceful repose of the two aqua giants.

COMMUNITY FORESTS

In some parts of the Eastern United States there are community forests. The idea has been adopted from Europe, where certain towns own forests that are used as playgrounds and which through careful management provide raw material perpetually for small mills nearby. In one city in Germany the citizens went tax free for many years because the forest paid the tax for them. In Massachusetts the community forest idea is being worked out successfully, and Fitchburg, the first city in the United States to establish a true city forest, is a splendid example of what may be accomplished. This forest has been carefully managed over a period of years. It paid expenses soon after it was established. It now turns in a profit that will grow in the years to come.

STYLES TO ENDURE GOAL OF WOMEN

How to know what styles will endure and what will not, that is the question.

You love to hear about Biaritz and Cannes and opening nights at the Opera, and about silly frivolous expensive things that you couldn't dream of buying and wouldn't if you could.

And, then, you have saved the money for a new hat, or gloves, or a coat. Naturally you wish to buy th best possible thing for the money, one that you know will last a long time without getting shabby or out of date, one that will be becoming to you and stylish.

First absoutely first, you must know what colors are becoming to your own colorings, and what colors are unbecoming so you can avoid them. You will try a dress that is an unbecoming color and never know exactly why you tried of it. But tire of a dress that you and everyone else knows is especially becoming. Never.

Select your colors thus: colors in the first half of the rainbow for brunettes, colors in the second half for blondes, shades that you select of your becoming colors must be neither brighter nor paler than your own coloring. When you learn these two rules, then you can make exceptions that suit your particular coloring.

After colors comes your figure, short, fat, dumpy, tall, "skinny" slender all have their own particular lines. Horizontal lines shorten a figure and make it seem broader If you have a short or chubby figure, naturally you will avoid all such lines. If you are tall and slender, you will seek such lines, or else the top to bottom lines you might select would make you seem so much taller and so thin that you would be "skinny". There is such a difference between "chubby" and "fat" between "slender" and "skinny". The difference is usually in the clothes you wear rather than in your figure.

And then material and style.

Materials should be of the best that you can find for the amount you have to spend. Remember this not the most expensive material, but the best.

That is what you must shop for A good material and a style that you know will last a year or more.

Its a season of more feminity of slimness made graceful by fullness There's a new "circular silhouette' that varies from the all around circular sports skirt to the formal gown with circular section at front or at sides.

Pleats in groups, stright around or diagonal tiers, circular loose or bias and decorative seamings that release themselves into pleats.

Skirts are an inch or two longer and there's a new, irregular hemline to accustom the eve to greater skirt length.

Black it had to be of course, in a season so completely infactuated with velvet and satin. Even Paris admits it's a tossup whether the all black monotone ensemble—black coat, black frock, black hat and black handbag—or the black ensemble accented with color liens with the ribbon.

Next after black in importance comes the three rich and georgeous brown tones.

Evenly divided in importance, after black and brown tones, come a lovely, lighter than navy blue tone called "moonlight", a bright clear red, variously called ruby, claret or lacquer, and a wonderful deep green.

Under the federal migratory game law, which supersedes a state statute or order, it is unlawful to kill this specie of water fowl until nineteen twenty-nine.

M. S. C. DEVELOPS BARLEY STRAIN

Michigan State college this fall will release to growers a new strain of barley, known as the "Spartan", the result of fourteen years' research and experimentation, according to announcement by Professor J. F. Cox, head of the college farm crops department.

The new variety, a white smooth awn barley, will set a standard of production, college specialists believe. Professor Cox said development of the new strain was considered an unusual success, the result of a long search started by the late Frank A. Spragg, fourteen years ago,. Spragg had associated with him for much of the early research and selection. E. E. Downs, who continued the work after Spragg's death.

In addition to having the virtue of the smooth awn, with apparent prospects of high yields the barley has the added virtue of threshing well, according to Professor Cox The awn, which lacks the microscopic barbs of many varieties of white barley, breaks off near the kernel, a great advantage when barley is to be fed without soaking

Dawes Used Flute to Pay College Bills

High school and college students whose circumstances demand making their way through school have an illustrious example in the person of Charles Gates Dawes, vice president of the United States, states the Conn Music Center. General Dawes paid for his schooling by playing the flute in orchestras.

Vice President Dawes.

"My musical education has been entirely self-taught," says Mr. Dawes, in speaking of his youthful days. "It seemed an easy matter to learn through practical instruction books. I never took a lesson. Music, however, became a very productive part of my career, because I used to help pay my way through college by playing in orchestras. It has been one of the joys of my life and a wonderful refreshment to me when I have sought the recreation which only music can give.

"There has been some misstatement about my musical activity. At best, it is merely a part of a very busy life. Because I wrote a composition which is published for violin and has been played by such an artist as Kreisler, it was assumed that my instrument is the violin, whereas it really is the flute. My mother played the piano, and I used to play duets with her."

Sen. Copeland Urges Music as Health Aid

Playing Musical Instrument Helps Heart Action, Improves Breathing.

The question, "Do musicians live longer than other people? Or does it just seem longer to the neighbors?" has been answered for the Conn Music Center by Dr. Royal S. Copeland, United States senator from New York, and for many years commissioner of health of the island city.

Dr. R. S. Copeland.

Blowing a horn probably does increase the lung capacity, concedes Doctor Copeland. But that isn't the only—or the most beneficial—effect of music. The real secret is that most musicians are happy in their work.

"The rhythm and pleasurable emotions excited by inspiring music have their effect upon health," he explains. "They lead to increased action of the heart and deeper breathing, and so improve the health and vigor of the individual. But it is the general sense of well-being and the enjoyment that the man gets from his own music that does the most for him, physically and spiritually. The purpose of exercise is to stimulate the heart, but pleasurable sensations will accomplish exactly the same result.

"The reason that one person who leads what is called a 'sedentary life' is well and vigorous while another is depressed and always on the threshold of the hospital is because the first man is happy in his work. He gets the stimulation out of it that is necessary to keep his heart functioning, and in consequence, his physical self in good condition. The other chap is 'sick' and miserable because he gets no such 'exercise' out of enjoying his work."

Two Mills in Minnesota.

Arizona's law empowers all cities, towns and villages to levy a tax not to exceed one mill for a municipal band. Idaho's law permits a tax not to exceed two mills. Maine's law simply adds music to the list of things for which a town may raise money with the approval of the voters. Minnesota towns may also levy a two-mill tax for band purposes, but in Missouri the municipal authorities are empowered to levy a tax of not more than half a mill, but this can be raised to two mills by submitting the question to the public.

Nebraska has a township law under which the band tax levy may not exceed one mill. Nevada's new law allows a tax of five cents per $100 of assessed valuation, and North Dakota's provides a sliding scale based on the assessed valuations of different sized communities.

Suggests Music Training for Mayors, Merchants

Elkhart, Ind.—Music as part of the equipment of mayors, councilmen and other city officials is foreseen by the Conn Music Center here, which states that municipalities would receive more efficient service if the background of local officers were filled with music and art.

"City officials, business men and civic leaders need to carry musical training into their every-day affairs to make things go more smoothly and efficiently," says Alice Rodgers, director of public school music at Santa Monica, Calif. "More harmony would prevail and more progress be made in civic gatherings of all kinds if those attending them listened to good music and appreciated it. Church and Sunday school meetings would gain by having people who could participate and understand music.

"The city official, the business man, the civic leader, the preacher and the people who make up civic and church meetings, however, should have this musical training in youth, if they are to make the best use of it in later

Only Buick has an engine Vibrationless beyond belief

BUICK'S remarkable freedom from vibration is due primarily to three vitally important factors. First—the inherent smoothness of the Buick Valve-in-Head six-cylinder engine. Second—rubber engine mountings, front and rear. And third—the scientific and almost perfect balance of the entire Buick crankshaft assembly.

Only Buick enjoys these advantages. And only Buick provides the silken performance—the unvarying smoothness at all speeds—the longer life and greater serviceability of an engine vibrationless beyond belief.

ARE "MOVIES" ELEVATING

CHURCH GOING PEOPLE all over the country have various and often vindictive ideas of the good offices of the "Movie" as applied to sociaty uplift, and we don't marvel that they hold this opinion since some of the stuff thrown on the cinema screen is better fit for the brothel than a public benefit. But on the whole, we guess the rank and file of pictures are much more educational and beneficial than church people would believe, even if they saw them. We have no sympathy for the prude and the crab who sees only one side of any question, but we do dispute the plilosophy sometimes applied to any questionable amusement "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Rev. Henry Rose, pastor of the Church of the Redeemer, Newark, New Jersey. in that down-east country where sociability and morals move at express train speed, makes this statement in a sermon and we believe he speaks in the voice of an enlightened christian conscience:

"I believe that God invented the motion picture for the saving of the race from riot, suicide and other forms of rage and despair It gave men women and children a new world at a price within their reach."

Old Fences Made New
At Slight Expense
IT DOESN'T take much time nowadays to keep fence lines stock-tight and in good repair. Not if you use these quick driven Red Top Steel Posts.
You can drive 20 or 30 Red Tops in an hour. And the fencing is attached in a jiffy so that it will never pull away. This means that you can get a lot of fence repaired even in odd moments.
It's pretty risky business letting fence lines go hang while waiting for a time when work is slack to put them in shape. The damage to stock or crops that can come from just one weak spot may be larger than the entire expense of keeping the fences in good shape. An ounce of prevention is certainly worth while here.
Keep a small stock of Red Tops on hand and get one of these One-Man Drivers. Then when you see a wood post going bad simply drive a Red Top alongside, take out the wood post and fasten the fencing to the steel post. These Red Tops will stop any farm critter you've got on your place.
We personally guarantee Red Tops and we are authorized to make adjustments promptly. Red Tops are not an experiment. They are a proved success and have been giving a good account of themselves in thousands of farm fence lines.
We picked the Red Top line because we believe it is the best value. That's the way we try to buy all lines of goods. We expect our business to grow on the basis of giving you a full dollar's worth for every dollar you spend. Come in and see us when you're in town. Get our prices on posts and the other materials you're needing. Prices are mighty reasonable now on posts and other special items.

FAT TO BE STYLISH IF DOCTOR HAS WAY

Corpulence instead of being regarded as an affliction or at least an inconvenience would be considered a prize mark of distinction if the world should accept the view of Dr. O. R. Yoder of the medical staff of the Kalamazoo State hospital.

"I hope the day will come when it will be fashionable for people in this country to be fat," Dr. Yoder said yesterday, in an address before the Twentieth Century Club a woman's organization.

Deploring what he called the "diet" rage among the women of America". Dr. Yoder said he "regretted the passing of the old-fashioned boarding house in which people had plenty of nourishment is necessary to carry on metabolism without which nervous disorders are apt to develop in the human system.

'Be yourself' if you just can't do any better.

In Japan individual citrus trees are known which, according to records, are at least three hundred years old and have changed little in that time.

MILLINGTON HENS SHOW STRONG GAIN

The "hard luck" pen of White Leghorns entered by Harry Burns of Millington in the fifth egg-laying contest at the Michigan State College is having a streak of good luck.

Recently the Millington birds have been laying fewer undersized eggs and they have worked their way into a tie with the pen of Leghorns from F. G. DeWitt's farm near Grand Blanc for the contest leadership.

Since the contest started last November, Burns' hens have produced one hundred and twenty-eight undersized eggs, which could not be counted under the rules and regulations of the egg-laying marathon. The rival pen from Grand Blanc has produced but five under sized eggs.

Thus, in working itself into a tie for first position, Burn's fowls had had to lay one hundred and twenty-three eggs more than their competitor.

A new production record is being established in the fifth contest. At the end of the forty ninth week the one thousand hens had an average of one hundred and seventy-five eggs. Sixteen pens had exceeded the two hundred egg average.

'MAINE'S' ANCHOR A MEMORIAL TO ITS SAILOR DEAD

NORTHERN MICHIGAN PICTURED AS SPORT MECCA IN WINTER

Northern Michigan will be the winter sports capital of the middle west, and perhaps, some day of the nation, and the tourist season will be extended from the summer through the winter within a very few years, speakers predicted at a meeting of the Michigan Winter Sports association here recently.

The meeting launched an ambitious winter sport program for a dozen cities, as city managers, chamber of commerce, secretaries and business men from Petoskey, Cadillac, Traverse City, Manistee, Ludington, and other towns in the snow belt told of great ski jumps and toboggan slides now being constructed.

Sell your own town first, was the insistent advice to the communities who hope to become winter resorts. So hockey leagues and snowshoe clubs are being organized among the citizens of the northern Michigan towns and a great effort will be made this winter to bring all the people of this section of the state outdoors to play.

Then the tourists will come, the speakers assured.

Harold Titus of Traverse City, member of the state conservation commission promised the conservation department will take an active part in winter sports development.

Five states parks will be opened for winter sports, this year, he said.

We must make the people of other states know that Michigan is a good place to live during the winter." said J. J. Fagan, president of the Michigan real estate association. First we must sell Michigan winters to Michigan people, for then we can make Michigan the leading winter sports state of the United States."

MUSKEGON MAN IS RUBBER PIONEER

The discovery made recently by Dr. Frederick Osius, for many years a dentist in Muskegon is expected to revolutionize the rubber industry. As a result of experiments carried on in the quiet, secluded garden of his home at Pasadena, Calif., the former Muskegon man has made a high-grade rubber from fig trees.

From the Panache, a French fig tree, Dr. Osius tops the milk. He now is working with the milk of the Kodata and Adriatic fig trees, which he also grows.

When Dr. Osius practiced his profession in Muskegon he devoted many hours to research. He worked out a new process for making dental rubber. With his son-in-law he operated a rubber factory.

Dr. Osius contends rubber can be made from the fig trees either by the acid or smoke method, as is done in the Oriental countries. He has taken up his discovery with Thomas A. Edison, who through his secretary replied immediately, showing marked interest.

EIGHT THOUSAND ACRE TRACT, MEMORIAL TO KIN IS WIDOW'S STATE GIFT

conservationists throughout the state were highly elated over the announcement that the famous Hanson pine tract near Grayling had bee deeded to the state— a gift from Mrs. Caran B. Hartwick of Ann Arbor, who bought the land for fifty thousand dollars as a memorial to her husband and father.

The land includes eighty-three acres of virgin white pine, the last stand of this sort in the lower peninsula. There has been agitation for the state to buy it for some time, and a bill appropriating eighty-three thousand dollars for this purpose was introduced during the last legislature, but was killed.

The state will convert it into a park to be known as the Edward E. Hartwick Pine Park. It is a memorial to Major Edward E. Hartwick, a veteran of the Spanish-American and World wars, who died in France in nineteen eighteen,, and to Mr. Hartwick's father, in late Nels Michelso.

The state has agreed to reforest the part of the tract which has been cut over and to erect a log cabin to house exhibits of Michigan's once great lumbering industry. In all the property comprises eight thousand, two hundred and thirty-six acres.

BUCKWHEAT SOWN AMID TREES TO ROUT WORMS

Cutworms do not thrive on buckwheat. George DuVall, Fennville fruit grower made that discovery and incidentally he discovered a way of driving away the cutworm. As a result he is advising all farmers to sow the pancake cereal in their orchards or fields.

By using buckwheat as a cover crop in his peach orchard, Mr. DuVall has driven the cutworms out and reduced his losses to nothing. The cutworms were causing considerable trouble in one orchard, but after using buckwheat as a cover crop for two seasons, he reports the pests have moved to other pastures more to their liking.

OVER 100 AT U. OF M. STUDY FLYING

More than one hundred students at the University of Michigan this year are enrolled in the ground school unit of the Naval Air Reserve under the direction of Lieu'ts Charles D. Williams Jr., and Louis R. Marshall, both of Detroit.

The students are to be given instructions in theory of flight and sea navigation upon successful completion of which they are eligible for actual flight training, leading to a commission as ensign in the United States Naval Reserve and qualification as a Naval Reserve aviator. The flight training is to be given those students who qualify during the summer months at the Great Lakes Training Station of the United States Navy.

The student will receive forty-five days' training at this station, following which he is given an additional forty-five days advanced flying at Hampton Roads Va. Both training courses consist of twenty hours dual flying and about forty hours solo.

This is the second year the ground school unit has been in force at the University. Last year nine out of twenty five students were able to pass the strict physical examination to which Government fliers are subjected.

MOTHER!
A Child Doesn't Laugh and Play if Constipated

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which become clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish, stomach sour.

Look at the tongue mother. If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, donesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup", then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless, and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile, and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup", which has full direction for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. Look carefully and see that it is made by the "Califorina Fig Syrup Company."

FRUIT MEN HEED CANNERS' ADVICE

Orchardists have heeded the advice of Michigan canners and are sparing the Kieffer pear trees William McEwing of South Haven, former president of the Michigan Canners association, reported this week.

The Kieffer orchards no longer are being neglected. Growers are giving them as good care as the Bartletts. They have begun the look upon the variety as an asset instead of a liability and chiefly because of the outlet which the canners have found for the fruit in tins.

Michigan Fruit Canner, Inc., operating three large factories at Fennville, South Haven and Benton Harbor, is packing approximately one hundred and fifty thousand cases of Kieffer pears this fall. Its warehouses and storage plants are filled to capacity with the fruit, which is ripened slowly as supplies are needed for processing. The company has paid growers a dollar and thirty-five cents a hundredweight for the fruit. Before the canners started to pack this variety growers sometimes had difficulty making sales at twenty-five to fifty cents a bushel

Installation of cold storage and ripening rooms in the canneries has solved the Kieffer pear problem. By properly ripening the Kieffers before processing a pear almost equal to the Bartlett in quality is obtained.

Now that a market for Kieffer pears has been found the grower's most serious problem is the control of pear psylla, a pest which slowly kills the trees. New oil sprays have been found quite effective in eradicating the insect from many orchards this season, it was reported here.

In most respects the Kieffer is too hardy a variety and a very good yielder. It is resistant to blight, a disease which wipes out many Bartlett orchards.

Canning factories are making a light pack of apples. The reduction is due chiefly to the short crop. Few Duchess apples were canned this season as the fresh fruit market was strong enough to absorb canning as well as commercial stocks.

JACKPINE FOREST IS 'SHINERS' HAVEN

Detroit and other cities have their alley distilleries, but in Western and Northern Michigan moonshine operations are carried on along much the same line as in the hills of Kentucky. Out there large distilleries operate under cover are posted and every precaution used to prevent detection.

There is just one handicap. the weather. Winter forces the jackpine moonshiners to cease operations until spring.

The big stills are maintained in the open, or at best in sheds. and cold weather halts operations, because the mash will not work unless it is kept warm.

Frequently during the winter months hunters find these abandoned stills. It is difficult for the police to catch the operators at work. Usually when a still is located the men are gone. This is due to the fact that lookouts are maintained and an alarm is sounded in plenty of time for the men to escape.

Earlier in the prohibition era stills were placed in homes or on farms. Neighbors used to give tips to officers, however, and there was always the tell-tale odor. As a result many arrests were made and the moonshiners learned that they must seek better hiding places. So they moved to the jackpine country.

Africa, China, India and Japan are the principal peanut growing countries besides the United States.

Californians make a delicious fruit cocktail for beginning a meal by using grapefruit and cherries, with strained honey on top.

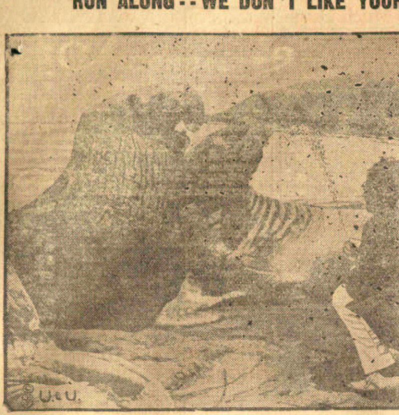
'RUN ALONG--WE DON'T LIKE YOUR COMPANY!'



THOSE two 'water wallopers" shown at the left above are a couple of giant elephant seals who live a charmed life on the west shore of Guadalupe Island, one hundred and thirty-five miles off the coast of Lower California. They're part of a herd of seals protected by lay and a gunboat—a herd said to be the only known one in the northern hemisphere.

At the time the photographer snapped the picture, the intruder at the right was being greeted with snaps and barks because he dared disturb the peaceful repose of the two aqua giants.

COMMUNITY FORESTS

In some parts of the Eastern United States there are community forests. The idea has been adopted from Europe, where certain towns own forests that are used as playgrounds and which through careful management provide raw material perpetually for small mills nearby. In one city in Germany the citizens went tax free for many years because the forest paid the tax for them. In Massachusetts the community forest idea is being worked out successfully, and Fitchburg, the first city in the United States to establish a true city forest, is a splendid example of what may be accomplished. This forest has been carefully managed over a period of years. It paid expenses soon after it was established. It now turns in a profit that will grow in the years to come.

STYLES TO ENDURE GOAL OF WOMEN

How to know what styles will endure and what will not, that is the question.

You love to hear about Biaritz and Cannes and opening nights at the Opera, and about silly frivolous expensive things that you couldn't dream of buying and wouldn't if you could.

And, then, you have saved the money for a new hat, or gloves, or a coat. Naturally you wish to buy th best possible thing for the money, one that you know will last a long time without getting shabby or out of date, one that will be becoming to you and stylish.

First absoutely first, you must know what colors are becoming to your own colorings, and what colors are unbecoming so you can avoid them. You will try a dress that is an unbecoming color and never know exactly why you tried of it. But tire of a dress that you and everyone else knows is especially becoming. Never.

Select your colors thus: colors in the first half of the rainbow for brunettes, colors in the second half for blondes, shades that you select of your becoming colors must be neither brighter nor paler than your own coloring. When you learn these two rules, then you can make exceptions that suit your particular coloring.

After colors comes your figure, short, fat, dumpy, tall, "skinny" slender all have their own particular lines. Horizontal lines shorten a figure and make it seem broader If you have a short or chubby figure, naturally you will avoid all such lines. If you are tall and slender, you will seek such lines, or else the top to bottom lines you might select would make you seem so much taller and so thin that you would be "skinny". There is such a difference between "chubby" and "fat" between "slender" and "skinny". The difference is usually in the clothes you wear rather than in your figure.

And then material and style.

Materials should be of the best that you can find for the amount you have to spend. Remember this not the most expensive material, but the best.

That is what you must shop for A good material and a style that you know will last a year or more.

Its a season of more feminity of slimness made graceful by fullness There's a new "circular silhouette' that varies from the all around circular sports skirt to the formal gown with circular section at front or at sides.

Pleats in groups, stright around or diagonal tiers, circular loose or bias and decorative seamings that release themselves into pleats.

Skirts are an inch or two longer and there's a new, irregular hemline to accustom the eve to greater skirt length.

Black it had to be of course, in a season so completely infactuated with velvet and satin. Even Paris admits it's a tossup whether the all black monotone ensemble—black coat, black frock, black hat and black handbag—or the black ensemble accented with color liens with the ribbon.

Next after black in importance comes the three rich and georgeous brown tones.

Evenly divided in importance, after black and brown tones, come a lovely, lighter than navy blue tone called "moonlight", a bright clear red, variously called ruby, claret or lacquer, and a wonderful deep green.

U. S. SHIELDS YELLOWLEGS DESPITE STATE GAME LAW

In spite of the fact that the digest of the general game laws of Michigan, as issued by Director Youngs, calls for an open season on yellow legs from September six teen to December thirty-one, these birds cannot be hunted legally.

Under the federal migratory game law, which supersedes a state statute or order, it is unlawful to kill this specie of water fowl until nineteen twenty-nine.

M. S. C. DEVELOPS BARLEY STRAIN

Michigan State college this fall will release to growers a new strain of barley, known as the "Spartan", the result of fourteen years' research and experimentation, according to announcement by Professor J. F. Cox, head of the college farm crops department.

The new variety, a white smooth awn barley, will set a standard of production, college specialists believe. Professor Cox said development of the new strain was considered an unusual success, the result of a long search started by the late Frank A. Spragg, fourteen years ago,. Spragg had associated with him for much of the early research and selection. E. E. Downs, who continued the work after Spragg's death.

In addition to having the virtue of the smooth awn, with apparent prospects of high yields the barley has the added virtue of threshing well, according to Professor Cox The awn, which lacks the microscopic barbs of many varieties of white barley, breaks off near the kernel, a great advantage when barley is to be fed without soaking

Pray that the soul that is stirred,
May have grace to obey."

Wednesday evening the convention assembled in the gymnasium at the Sanitarium. A Mr. Sems sang with cornet and piano accompaniment the national W. C. T. U. song "Victory is coming" which will long be remembered by all. I brought a copy home for use in our own Union. The address of the evening was given by Mrs. Florence D. Richard, Pres. Ohio W. C. T. U. An exceptionally fine speaker, she was most inspiring as she reviewed the seven years of prohibition. She said that the wets were actually jubilant after the passage of the 18th amendment because of the fact that it required that ratification by the states be done in seven years and they thought that impossible. It was done in thirteen months. The wets did not count on the aid of the greatest leader we have—God—with whose help and inspiration we have accomplished the task in this short time. Several visitors of note spoke briefly and a moving picture on the evils of tobacco made by Dr Kellogg and explained by him closed the evening. He showed clearly the detrimental effects of nicotine and 17 other poisons found in tobacco smoke, I wondered if any boy would dare to smoke if he could see, as we did a bright boy in early teens smoking his first cigarette, then he gradually changed into a dull-eyed listless youth, as with every puff of smoke from his mouth small letters which grouped themselves to spell "m-a-n-h-o-o-d" came out and floated away, while "i-m-b-e-c-i-l-i-t-y" just as rapidly rushed in. The effect of that picture will never leave my mind, I know. He said "We will never have complete control of alcohol until we have control of tobacco for they are twin devils. Tobacco raises blood pressure and alcohol lowers it, consequently the two evils go hand in hand." We could not take notes in the dark during the picture so Dr. Kellogg offered to those who wished them booklets containing his talk and of course I took one gladly.

Thursday morning was given to reports of Sec. and Treas. and election of officers and again I quote from the local paper.

Mrs. Stella Roben, of Big Rapids, for the past thirteen years vice-president of the Michigan Woman's Christian Temperance Union, was elected president of the state organization this morning, succeeding Mrs. Elizabeth A. Perkins of Ann Arbor. Mrs. Roben has been a state officer for 29 years.

Election of Mrs. Roben followed the unexpected withdrawal, last evening, of Mrs. Perkins as a candidate for re-election. The ballot stood Mrs. Roben 159, Mrs. Perkins 73. A unanimous ballot was then cast for Mrs. Roben.

Other officers elected this morning were Mrs. Ada C. Mumford, of Adrian, as vice president succeeding the new president; Mrs. Norma C. Mudge, of Belding, re-elected corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Emma Pearce of Flint, elected recording secretary, succeeding Mrs. Myrta E. Lockwood of Holly. The treasurer had not been elected at 1:30 this afternoon Mrs. Charles E. Stewart of Battle Creek was named delegate from the state convention to the world W. C. T. U. convention in Lausanne, Switzerland, next summer.

The report showed that there are 358 local unions in the state, and that their total membership is 14,1+ larger than last year.

Receipts of the state organization during the year were $14,470.93, besides the balance on hand at the beginning of the year of $5,058.89. Disbursments during the year aggregated $11,988.07, leaving a cash balance of $7,541.75. Other assets of the organization, including endownments, total $14,555.42, which brings the total fund of the organization up to $22,097.17.

Largest membership in the state sheld by Holland with 300. Benton Harbor is second with 208. Battle Creek union has a membership of 162. Eight unions have more than doubled their membership during the year, the largest increases being reported by the Traverse City organization, from 6 to 89, and the Benton Harbor union, from 100 to 208.

BATTLE CREEK SECOND

Battle Creek union was second in the state for the amount of money given during the year. This city's organization gave $2,980.57, while Benton Harbor, which was first, gave $3,620.30.

The state organization has 1,076 men enrolled as honorary members. Subscriptions for the Michigan Union, the state organ, are now 7,900, as compared with 1,500 in 1915, according to Mrs. Norma F. Mudge, Belding editor.

The were 302 voting delegates in attendance at this year's convention, the report of the credentials committee showed. This is 106 more than attended the convention in Owosso last year.

A message of greeting was read to the convention this morning, from O. Scott McBride, of Westerville, O., general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League. A reply to this message, and a message of greeting to the World President of the W. C. T. U., Miss Anna Gordon, of Evanston, Ill., were sent by the convention.

MEMBERSHIP GROWS

Membership in the Michigan Woman's Christian Temperance Union is 15,222, and the assets of the organization total $22,097.17, the report of the treasurer of the convention, Mrs. Matie W. Jones of Dearborn, showed.

Report of the Sheriff's Office, Week Ending Nov. 19, 1927

On Sunday Nov. 13, Tom Collins was released to custody of Saginaw authorities. Clapsaddle and Heal were also turned over, on the same day, to the Sheriff of Ingham Co. John Mix, their companion, was released later in the week as no charge was held against him. When he left the jail, Mix said that "Hillsdale County was marked off his traveling list.

John Keefus, age 17, of North Adams, was arrested by Deputy Ray Barnhart on the act of stealing a one dollar bill. This is the second time John has been arrested this year. The first time, on April 2nd, he was found guilty of larceny and burglary and placed on one year probation. On Tuesday he was arraigned before Justice Fitzsimmons and released on $100 bond.

On Monday, Nov. 14, the Shell gas station, Carleton Rd, in Hillsdale, was entered in the night, the safe blown and only $4 in currency taken.

Lyman Benson was arraigned before Justice Fitzsimmons and pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking into the Penney store and stealing the cash box which contained about $1000. He was bound over to the present term of circuit court and placed under bond of $5000 which was not furnished. He appeared before Judge Chester on the 17th. A number of witnesses from Huntington, Ind. testified to his good character, all attested his previous irreproachable reputation. Sentence was pronounced on Saturday at 9 a. m. The court placed him on probation for a period of two years during which time he will be under the charge and supervision of the probation officer of Hillsdale county, C. E. Foster.

On Nov. 14, a bullet from a .38 revolver was fired through a second story window in the home of Fred Rogers, 41 Champaign St. The officers are still investigating the case.

Nov. 15, Louis Castanego, Mexican, held on a charge of bootlegging, was taken before Justice Aldrich and found guilty of manufacturing, possessing and giving away intoxicating liquor. He was sentenced to pay a fine of $50 and costs taxed at $75, or be confined for one year in Michigan Reformatory at Ionia. The $125 have not been paid yet and Castanego is still our guest

Nov, 17, at 1 a. m. the proprietor of the City Cafe at Jonesville called the Sheriff's office and said that a lone man entered the restaurant, held him up and stole all the money he had, about $80. The under Sheriff went immediately to the scene of the hold up but could find no trace of the robber.

Nov. 18, at 8 p. m. C. E. Miller of Montgomery was instantly killed when the car in which he was riding hit a tree; Mr. Hutton who was driving, escaped without injuries. At the scene of the wreck, the officers found two bottles that were empty but had a strong odor of liquor and a jug partly filled with moonshine. An inquest will be held at the Court house on Wednesday Nov. 30.

Michigan Stock To Bid For High Rank

Michigan livestock will make a strong bid for high honors in the show ring during the International Livestock Exposition at Chicago Nov. 26, to December 2.

In addition to the prize herds from M. S. C., which will strive to repeat their winnings of former years, a number of private breeders will send the best of their stock to the famous show. Wildwood Farms, Orion, and Woodcote Stock Farms, Ionia, will show Aberdeen-Angus cattle; while C. H. Prescott and son, Tawas, will enter the Shorthorn class to take rank among the leading exhibitors from Michigan.

The M. S. C. entries will total five carloads of stock, including 12 horses, 12 steers, 40 sheep, and 40 hogs. Chief interest in the college showing is expected to center again around the great string of Belgian and Percheron horses which have brought many championships back to Michigan in past years. Pervenche, twice grand champion Belgian mare at the International, and a number of other winners at state fairs and the International will be included in the M. S. C. entries.

Many Michigan farmers will also be represented in the various competitive classes of the International Hay and Grain Show, to be held in Chicago at the time of the livestock exposition. The college is also sending educational exhibit material for the grain show, while student and Boy's and Girl's club judging teams will be entered from Michigan.

It will be a source of satisfaction to the averege citizen to learn that the days of snow-bound roadways are past and the automobile will be able to negotiate practically every main road all through the winter season no matter how deep the snow or how inclement the weather. Not many years ago when we were boys this was not the case, and we had to wallow in the drifted snow and oftentimes we had to cut through the fields but this is past. The state of Michigan is prepared with trucks and tractors to care for every mile of state road, and to keep it free from snow.

HOW SWINDLERS MARK THEIR PREY

By W. R. MOREHOUSE
Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

W R. MOREHOUSE

IN the field of fake investments suckers are graded according to their reaction to the appeal of glittering schemes. A name on a sucker list of investors may have a valuation anywhere from zero to $100.

If your name is on the list and it is known that you invariably "Investigate Before you Invest," your name is checked to indicate that you are too hard to sell to be worth cultivating further, but if you invest first and investigate afterward, your name is checked to indicate that you are easily swindled and for this reason your name is worth $100,—not to you, but to the owner of the list, for the names of those who invest without investigating are choice prospects and sell readily to promoters.

Certain names on a sucker list are checked to indicate "easy picking," and by this is meant that in addition to being ignorant on investments, those checked are not disposed to ask advice of their banker but go ahead and invest in anything from gold bricks to stock in some proposed company for the exploration of diamond fields on Mars.

Those whose names are listed are what might be called marked investors—investors who have been marked for slaughter—investors who have been marked to have their savings taken from them by unwarranted promises of fabulous riches.

If your name is on the sucker list and you are receiving "wild-cat" literature, be on your guard, for not only one but a whole tribe of "wild-cat" promoters are hot on your trail. If you are skeptical as to the extent to which they will go in order to sell you an interest in their fake schemes the following should prove illuminating, as it itemizes the literature and stationery sent to each name on a certain sucker list of investors. This literature was mailed in 91 different mailings. Each person received:

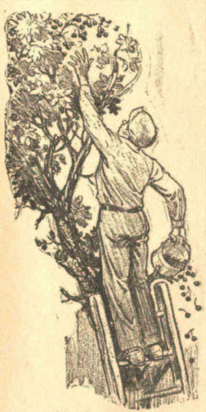
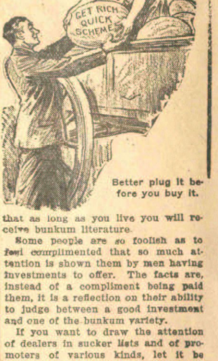
22	two-page letters
6	three-page letters
2	four-page letters
52	fake newspapers containing fake write-ups
39	pieces of highly lurid prospectus material
34	return addressed postal cards
72	subscription blanks

making a total of 363 pieces of literature weighing 11 pounds and costing approximately $50. In addition to this there were numerous telephone calls and personal interviews.

Any person receiving a flood of literature calling attention to certain investment chances has a good reason for watching his step lest he weaken and invest and finally lose his savings. If you are receiving "wild-cat" investment literature it is a good indication that your name is on a sucker list and that it, with other names, is being sold to irresponsible promoters and consequently you may expect to continue to receive literature of the get-rich-quick variety from different sources. If you have ever invested in any one of the investments offered you may rest assured that you are "easy" and it is reasonably certain that as long as you live you will receive bunkum literature.



In reaching for more, you may lose what you have.



Better plug it before you buy it.

Some people are so foolish as to feel complimented that so much attention is shown them by men having investments to offer. The facts are, instead of a compliment being paid them, it is a reflection on their ability to judge between a good investment and one of the bunkum variety.

If you want to draw the attention of dealers in sucker lists and of promoters of various kinds, let it be known that you have a savings bank account or good securities and you will be the object of a very vigorous campaign to relieve you of those savings.

It is always well to remember that the irresponsible promoter specializes on swindling savings depositors, exchanging his fake investment for their bank account, which is always worth 100 cents on the dollar.

Of the numerous bait schemes used to swindle the public the trading of equities in real estate is among the most successful from the promoter's standpoint.

From the owner's standpoint a trade usually means getting into deeper water financially—going further into debt.

Here's how it works. If you have an equity in a piece of property, which equity you would like to be relieved of, some promoter will offer to give you credit for your equity on the purchase price of another piece of property or on the purchase of certain hot air stocks.

In the first place, the swindler actually allows you nothing for your equity as he marks up the price of what he is selling you a like amount—with the result that you lose your equity on one hand and get yourself into a less desirable deal on the other.

Proceed slowly, if you are approached with a proposition to trade an equity. It may not be exactly what you prefer, but holding the equity is far ahead of holding the sack after some swindler has dealt with you.

POTATOES AND PINEAPPLE

THE housewife who likes to serve a meatless meal now and then, particularly in the summer, casts around in her mind for new combinations with which to tempt her family.

A recipe that satisfactorily fulfills the requirements of a meatless meal must be hearty and at the same time "tasty." It must have plenty of calories in it, and yet not be too heavy. An ideal combination that meets all these exigen[illegible] is sweet potatoes and Hawai[illegible]pineapple. These two foods used together supply the necessary calories, starch, protein and vitamines. Here are two good recipes.

Two Meatless Dishes

Sweet Potatoes and Hawaiian Pineapple in Casserole: Place in a casserole two cups of cold boiled sweet potatoes cut in quarter inch slices. Cover with a can of sliced Hawaiian pineapple cut in small pieces, and pour over the following ingredients: one-half cup brown sugar, four teaspoons butter, one teaspoon salt, two tablespoons red cinnamon drops. Let bake slowly for an hour.

Hawaiian Pineapple and Candied Sweet Potatoes: Cook and drain six medium sized potatoes, cut in half lengthwise. Put in a buttered pan. Cut in cubes six slices of Hawaiian pineapple and place on top. Brush with a syrup made of one-half cup brown sugar, one-fourth cup water and three tablespoons butter. Bake fifteen minutes, basting at intervals with part of the syrup which has been kept out for the purpose.

The Ancient Mound Builders

Down in the southern counties of Ohio are mute evidences of a once powerful half-civilized ingenious people who inhabited this country long years or centuries if you please before the coming of the American Indian. Where these ancient peoples came from or whence they went has been a myster. They are now commonly called "Mound Builders" for want of a better name. Certain it is they were far from nomads and savages. That they had certain fixed habitations is a fact; that they raised great works of stone or earth remains to be seen. In many of these mounds explorers have found bones and implements of copper and stone obviously fashioned for the use of man. Skeletons found imbedded in these mounds are people of large stature, skulls not very different from the present people, but vastly different than the Indians. One mound in particular is the wonder and admiration of naturalists. It is in the form of a gigantic snake several thousand feet in length and having its head clearly indicated with mouth open and just about to swallow a round object possibly an egg. This mound is now something like sixty feet broad at the base and has settled by the erosion of ages until it is only about five feet above the surface. Early settlers in Ohio noted these mounds but paid little attention to them, in fact the fields covered by this snake mound have for hundreds of years been under cultivation. Scientists all over the country have become interested in ferreting out the secrets of these artificial earthworks and their history, and during the past twenty years much has been learned by opening the heaps of earth. As we understand it, the United States Government has practically established a protectorate over all such relics and permission must be obtained to excavate.

Charles Finger, writing in the Dearborn Independent says that much baldy-dash has been indulged in by dreamers concerning these works of ancient Americans but the fact remains that no Indian as we know him was ever able to concentrate his mind on the construction of anything that would endure twenty years against the elements and these mounds have been built thousands of years, so there is absolutely no connection between the Mound Builders and Indians. Some have insinuated they were constructed for purposes of religious worship, but there is no evidence to support such a ridiculous statement It is far more probable they were built as works of art to illustrate the skill of the creators, same as we to-day are building monuments, great museums and cathedrals. A thousand years hence inhabitants will likely wonder what was the actual object of the Washington monument and the Eiffel Tower!

Just why the Mound Builders were confined to the Mississippi and Ohio River valleys is not plain unless their occupation covered a period so far back the shores of the northern Ocean washed the boundaries of Michigan and the Gulf of Mexico came up to Kentucky. If this be so, then there may have been strange animals also wandering around in the marshes and eating herbage off the tops of forty feet high shrubs. We hope it was this way because we would like to guess right once in our lives. Such boys as the Great Dinosauer and the Ju ju Bird and the Mammoth, the Saber Toothed Tiger and the Great Lizard or Iguana which browsed around Fort Wayne and South Bend were far more pleasant to think of than to meet. Verily there are some very strange things in this world. Out in California we find great pits filled with pitch or asphalt and excavating in these pits brings to light bones of long extinct animals and birds. For instance in one pit were found bones of many gigantic animals long since unknown, and along with the rest underneath many of them the human skeleton. Now science is positive these bones have lain buried for thousands upon thousands of years and how did the human bones get beneath them On top of the skeleton evidently that of a woman were found the skeleton of a great bird fifteen to twenty feet in wing spread. It don't take a very spread eagle imagination to believe this gigantic bird may have picked up this human and carried it to this pit as its prey, and either was frightened by larger foes and dropped it here or was plundered of its prey or settled on this treacherous sticky pit where both were engulfed, Which way was it? Nobody knows. It might be that much of this ancient stuff may have been hatched up for amusement but we doubt it. That there is such a pit of asphalt in California is a fact, but as to how the bones came there may be purely conjectures.

The other day a man came into our office and he said "How's this I don't get my paper regularly as I should. What is the matter?" Well, we said "This is about right and we are a little ashamed of how our big press is behaving since we removed to our new location, but it and it alone is to be held responsible for the failure of our paper to go out on time. We think possible there is some inequality of level in the floor or some mal-adjustment causes the trouble, and we are not sure. Last week we sent a telegram to expert press erectors in Detroit to come and help us out, but we have not yet seen them. We did receive regrets from one party who said there were only one or two firms in the city who made this their business and as they had so much territory to look after they could not hope to get out here in a couple of weeks, so in this matter we shall have to worry it out as best we can. "We hope then there will not be any more trouble, but things don't seem to act right. That's all we can say at present."

The Menace Still An Authority

There are still a few subscribers to the Menace in this vicinity I find and they are reading the paper too, notwithstanding critics tell us the Menace is without much backing and rather of an explosive, non-reliable sheet on Catholicism. However this may be in the issue of October 15th we note there is an article concerning the abolishment of standard weights and measures, which is by this time before Congress sponsored by one Congressman Fred Britton of Illinois who is a Mason and has a record for being against many good things which have come up in this Nation. He voted against the Burnett Immigration bill, against Prohibition and is rather of an outer as far as the dignity and worth of the law is concerned. He is a member of the beer bloc in the House so says the Menace. These fanatics claim we need some different kind of weights and measures for general use, and they want to abolish the old system laid down so many centuries ago by the Prophets of Israel and the Bible, and substitute in its place the Metric system which the Menace claims is no more or less than an effort to disqualify the Protestant system in this world and put into execution a Catholic measure. The movement has behind it a large showing of Chambers of Commerce all over the country and a good many retail grocery associations who evidently don't know its full import. Those who want this change would give us until 1935 to educate ourselves into the new standard and after that we must use it whether or no. We are positive that most of us never would be able to accustom ourselves to the new thing, anyhow we are positive we do not want any such changes made in the weights and measures, as we believe the good old way laid down by our Bible is plenty good enough and expedious as it is possible to have any system. Here's hoping the bill is killed and driven out. This man Britton, as we remember has had his name mixed up with a lot of these anti-good-citizenship things in Congress for several years, and we are beginning to wonder just what Master he serves, and if he really is a good American citizen. Its always possible to institute reforms in our laws, and it might be a good idea to put in force something more simple to comprehend, in some matters but most of the tinkering of this man Britton of late, has been a Revolutionary character as any one will have to admit who has watched his record.

Chicago Stock Show To Be Brilliant Affair

The greatest pageant in the history of American agriculture will be opened to the public November 26th when the International Live Stock Exposition begins its eight day celebration at the Chicago Union Stock Yards. Such a glittering array of attractive events have been arranged on the crowded program that it has been found necessary to hold the national junior live stock judging contest between the champion teams from half the states in the Union on the day preceding the formal opening.

Rates of a fare and one half will be granted on all New York Central Lines to the great International and we can say candidly from experience it is well worth your time and money to attend this wonderful exhibition. The Advocate has a couple of tickets which we will sell to some one who wants to go. This is our usual custom in the fall.

Farmers Said to be Changing Practices

Definite proof that farmers of the country are constantly changing and adapting their farm practices in line with the most modern developments of scientific agriculture is found in a survey which has been carried on since 1923 by the U. S. Department of Agriculture,

More than 8,000 farms in 11 different states were included in the survey, results of which were reported recently at the M. S. C. during the annual conference of agricultural extension workers. M. C. Wilson, statistician of the U. S. Department, discussed and analyzed the survey.

Percentage of farms which have adopted some new and modern ways of handling the work ran as high aa 97 in some sections, with 70 percent the lowest reported. As might be expected, the larger farm holders proved to be more alert in changing their practices in line with modern developments, while farms operated by owners showed a higher percentage of change than those run by tenants.

Demonstrations by agricultural and home economics agents were shown to be the most effective means of showing farmers the advantages of modern methods.

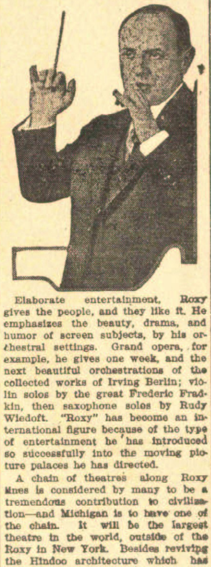
'ROXY', GREAT RADIO FAVORITE, WILL AID FOX IN MICHIGAN

May Circuit All Music And Stage Presentations From New York

"Roxy," of radio fame, who first gave cinema productions grace, sophistication and poise, figuratively teaching the crude, awkward, messy cinema youngster how to wear a dress suit, handle a demi-tasse, and be gracious and courteous—it is expected, will direct all musical programs and stage presentations in Michigan's new Fox Theatre, in Detroit, as in the others of the one hundred fifty million dollar circuit of theatres now being built or planned in the leading cities of the country.



Elaborate entertainment, Roxy gives the people, and they like it. He emphasizes the beauty, drama, and humor of screen subjects, by his orchestral settings. Grand opera, for example, he gives one week, and the next beautiful orchestrations of the collected works of Irving Berlin; violin solos by the great Frederic Fradkin, then saxophone solos by Rudy Wiedoft. "Roxy" has become an international figure because of the type of entertainment he has introduced so successfully into the moving picture palaces he has directed.

A chain of theatres along Roxy lines is considered by many to be a tremendous contribution to civilization—and Michigan is to have one of the chain. It will be the largest theatre in the world, outside of the Roxy in New York. Besides reviving the Hindoo architecture which has long been the mystery and wonder of the historians, the Detroit architects of the Fox Theatre have sounded a note in theatre designing that will reverberate a great distance.

Roxy (S. L. Rothafel) has developed more big theatres than any showman in the world. He is directly responsible for the modern type of presentation. Besides, he has created through sheer personality the greatest radio following in America.

The three-cent gas tax has already been declared unconstitutional by one circuit judge in Michigan and others arn attacking it pretty heavily. In view of the fact our legislators think it great sport to saddle most anything they see fit onto the motoring public, it would be a tough jibe if the measure were outlawed and banished from the statute books, and it ouhgt to be. When they passed this contemptible bill the members were overwhelmed with the idea that Michigan was bankrupt and staggering under the liabilities incurred by the Groesbeck administration but this proved to be a false alarm and the state crawled out of its predicament. It has been proven over and over again that the amount of revenues accruing from the former 2-cent gas tax would have swelled it like a poisoned pup, and far beyond the actual necessities the gas tax was supposed to pay, so why do the State officials insist on demanding still another pound of flesh off the already well plucked motorist? He is about down to his bottom dollar, yet the comouflege goes merrily on. It is the general opinion that a saturnalia of revenues and taxes during the World War has nearly made optimists of the law makers and they forget we are trying to get down to rock bottom again.

To Help Digest That Thanksgiving Dinner

AS overstuffed furniture grows in popularity, overeating retires to the limbo of things that are not done. Discomfort, after dinner, somnolence and overweight are simply not to be tolerated. The problem to be solved just now is how to maintain Thanksgiving traditions and at the same time guard against the sins and dangers of eating too much.

More than any one food, Hawaiian pineapple is capable of leavening the solidity of a rich holiday meal as it can suitably appear in any course. It is a favorite flavor, it stimulates appetite, and aids in digestion. For illustrative purposes let us consider the usual Thanksgiving dinner menu.

Fish or Fruit Cocktail
Soup
Celery Rolls Olives
Apple Cider
Mashed Potato Creamed Turnip
Candied Sweet Potato
Boiled Onions
Roast Turkey Chestnut Stuffing
Cranberry Sauce
Salted Nuts Salads Crackers
Pumpkin Pie Mince Pie
Cheese
Fruits and Nuts
Coffee
Mints

This menu more or less represents the standard home Thanksgiving dinner. Recognizing that one family may omit the cocktail or the soup or both, that other vegetables may replace the old standbys, that a salad may not be served, the above menu is not an exaggeration of American gastronomy.

Let us plan to retain every course and see where pineapple could be used either alone or in combination, and then you can choose the course or dish which most appeals to you.

A fish cocktail is preferable if the succeeding dinner is to be light in character, otherwise serve the fruit cocktail. For the particular meal under consideration a cocktail made up of equal parts crushed Hawaiian pineapple and canned grapefruit sections seems suitable. A No. 2 size can of each would serve from eight to twelve persons. Following this is a clear soup; bouillon, consomme, or tomato would be good. Succeeding a fish cocktail a hot fruit soup is tonic and delicious. Boil together for five minutes one-half can of pineapple, No. 2 size, and two cups of water. Strain and thicken with one-half tablespoon of arrowroot smoothed to a paste in one tablespoon of cold water. Boil until clear and dissolve in the mixture one-half glass (cup) of current jelly.

Pineapple in the Main Course

A turkey stuffing of bread crumbs and drained diced pineapple or pineapple and celery gives a delicious flavor to the bird. Mix together three cups of stale bread crumbs, one-half cup of melted butter, one teaspoon of salt, one-fourth teaspoon of pepper, one cup of chopped celery and one cup of diced, sliced Hawaiian pineapple. Double the quantity for a large bird and garnish the platter with half rings of pineapple browned in the roasting pan.

Sweet potatoes combine well with pineapple, either crushed or in quarter circles. Line a buttered baking dish with a layer of sliced cooked sweet potatoes, cover with a layer of crushed pineapple, dot with butter and sprinkle with brown sugar. To four large sweet potatoes use a No. 2 size can of crushed Hawaiian pineapple, one-fourth cup of butter and one-fourth cup of brown sugar. Brown in a hot oven and serve.

Pineapple in Dinner Salads

The preferred salad is composed of equal quantities, one cup each, of diced pineapple, diced winter pear and chopped celery with one finely chopped pimiento. Marinate in French dressing and serve on leaves of endive or chicory.

Another effective and delicious salad can be made of canned rose apples stuffed with a mixture of equal parts of drained crushed pineapple and chopped celery seasoned with mayonnaise.

Dessert Recipes

The housemother of a well known school used to have as a favorite saying "A word to the wise is suffcient." In this case the wisdom lies in the addition of a can of crushed pineapple to your mincemeat whether it be home made or canned.

We cannot (with a good conscience) recommend a rich ice cream to follow this dinner but nothing could end it with quite the éclat and satisfaction of a pineapple sherbet.

Boil the contents of one No. 2 size can of crushed pineapple with one cup of sugar. Strain and cool. Add the juice and grated rind of one lemon and freeze for ten minutes. Add the whites of two eggs stiffly beaten and continue freezing until mixture is firm.

SAVE INDIAN LORE IS AIM OF STATE

Preservation of the Indian traditions is an objective of Captain Charles E. Kelnap, fromer Grand Rapids mayor, in leading a movement which has gained the support of the Dwight Lydell chapter Izaak Walton league of America, to change the name of Plaster creek to Ken O Shay creek.

In urging substitution of the name Ken O Shay meaning clear running water, for Plaster creek, Captain Kelnap related to the Walton league chapter and city officials the story of the simple faith Black Bird, an Indian chief, who despising the fire water introduced by the white man and the inebriates created in his tribe, finally forsook his warriors and their camp on the Black Hills, and set his wigwam on the banks of Plaster creek, which the Indians knew as Ken O Shay near Grand river.

CRACK SHOT COPS SEEN AS DETROIT CRIME CURB

Crime will be greatly reduced when every policeman knows how to shoot straight, says Sergt. Max B. Wendlandt, pistol instructor of the Detroit Police Department.

The life of a policeman is worth little in a duel with a thug if he cannot handle his pistol efficiently", he says,. "Every year more time is given to teaching men how to handle a weapon properly.

"At the ten day national pistol and rifle matches held at Camp Perry O., recently ten Detroit policemen competing with officers from cities, won seventeen medals and thirty-nine bars. Inasmuch as the men had done most of their shooting on indoor ranges their scores were considered quite remarkble.

MOTHER

A Cross, Sick Child is Constipated!

Look at Tongue

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mothers, see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, diarrhea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup' and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruity laxative' because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grownups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup;" then see that it is made by the California Fig Syrup Company".

BATTLE CREEK MAN IS GIVEN MEDAL FOR SAFE AUTO DRIVING

A unique record for safety in interstate and trans-continental motor touring recently was recognized at Game Lodge, Rapid City S. D. when a solid gold medal was awarded James H. Brown, of Battle Creek, Mich., by officials of the Custer Battlefield Highway association. The presentation was made in the presence of President Coolidge.

Brown has been conducting automobile caravans for the past ten years. His caravan never has been composed of less than seventeen automobiles, and at one time comprised two hundred and fourteen. The grand total of tour members he has conducted over the various routes is in excess. of forty-two hundred and the aggregate distance traveled is thirty-one thousand nine hundred and seventy-two miles.

A remarkable feature of Brown's record is that not a single car in his caravan has ever been wrecked or otherwise put out of commission while en route.

FIRST OVERSEAS AIR MAIL BAG GETS PLACE IN FAMOUS MUSEUM

THE mail-bag in which Commander Richard E. Byrd carried the first mail across the Atlantic by aeroplane now occupies a place of honor in the Smithsonian Institute at Washington D. C. together with other relics and photographers of the epochal flight.

The bag and mail were rescued after Byrd's plane was wrecked in the sea off the French coast.

THIRD OF MILLION STUDENTS, SHARE

From forty-eight states, from thirty-five countries, from the other side of the world, ten thousand young men and women have come to enroll at the University of Michigan.

They spent a third of a million dollars just to reach the school; some were days on the way. for others the journey took weeks.

Why did Shu Ting Liu come all the way from Pekin, China.

Why did Dorothy Harrison leave Palm Beach, Fla., just at the time when so many northerners were planning to go South for the winter.

Why do so many girls in the East where there are so many colleges come West instead to Michigan.

Why do girls from Oregon, Texas, New York, Honolulu, Europe and Asia pick far-off Michigan.

The bond between the University of Michigan and China began in eighteen seventy, when James Burrill Angel, then president of the University of Michigan became minister to China. Following his return to his post at Ann Arbor, sons of friends he had made in the Orient followed him to Michigan for their western education.

One of the big reasons for coming to Michigan from far distant parts is relatives—mothers, fathers, and even grandfathers who attended Michigan. Some girls come because they believe Michigan to be the "co-ed's' paradise". Old prejudices against women are fast disappearing on the Ann Arbor campus, they say. Girls always have a good time at the University and still get an excellent education.

Some come because of the fame of Michigan's dormitories for women. Others come to get the benefits of the professional school which have international reputations.

GIVEN RIGHT TO VISIT U. S. TO TEACH AT ANN ARBOR

Word that visa had been issued by the American consul at Glasgow, permitting Professor P. M. Jack to enter the United States for a temporary visit was received by President Clarence Cook Little of the University of Michigan The university has been in correspondence with the state department seeking a ruling by which Professor Jack might be allowed to enter the United States. to take up his work as head of the rhetoric department.

GRAND RAPIDS GROWERS EFFECT REINCORPORATION

The Grand Rapids Growers Association one of the oldest co-operative truck marketing companies in the state has reorganized and reincorporated as the Grand Rapids Growers, Inc., with an authorized capitalization of seventy five thousand dollars of which fifty thousand dollars has been paid in.

The company has been reorganized, it was announced, to expand its operations in Western Michigan.

The assicoation ships greenhouse and truck products into about thirty eastern, southern and middle western states, besides handling supplies for its membership.

PHEASANTS VALUE TO FARMERS ISSUE

Is the Chinese ring-necked pheasant, colorful and distributed over the rural districts, an asset or a liability to the farmers.

Is he an impudent marauder, stalking through the corn fields and pulling up kernels of corn, as many farmers claim.

Or if he a noble benefactor, waging war, upon insects that otherwise would destroy the farmers' crops.

Ever since the pheasants were introduced by the Department of Conservation in nineteen seventeen, farmers have complained about them. By fostering and protecting the pheasant, they have argued, the State has brought upon them a curse almost as bad as the plagues of Egypt in the time of Moses.

"The pheasant ought to be boosted completely out of settled farming sections where the corn crop is of any importance, says R. G. Kirby, of Lansing, farmer and graduate of the Michigan State College.

And this thought is echoed by thousands of farm readers who have observed the pheasants in their fields.

But the sportsmen and naturalists do not agree that the pheasant is a sulprit. They declare investigations have demonstrated that seventy-eight per cent of the diet of the pheasant consists of insects that the harm he does is negligible compared to his good works.

"The time will come when the farmers wish for more pheasants instead of fewer," says Thomas A. McClure, Detroit chemist and naturalist.

Then Mr. McClure tells how last year he opened the crops of twelve pheasants that had been shot in standing corn in Macomb County.

"There were only two kernels of corn in the whole twelve", he says with emphasis. "These were partly decayed grains that had been lying on the ground. The rest of the crops were full of ragweed seeds and wild grapes.

"If enough pheasants could be concentrated in a potato patch, the farmers would not need to use any paris green.

"The time will come when the farmers will wish there were more pheasants instead of fewer. They will put them in the same category as quail. Only a pheasant eats about five time as much of noxious weed seeds and insects as one quail."

HALF OF ALMA LETTER MEN HAIL FROM DETROIT

Coach Roy Campbell, athletic director at Alma college will lean heavily on Detroit this year in his effort to capture his second straight Michigan Intercollegiate football championship.

Six of the twelve letter men available for the team this year hail from Michigan metropolis, and how valuable they are to the Alma cause is shown from the fact the four of the six men won All-Michigan intercollegiate honors last year. A fifth just missed the first honor team.

The men are Leslie Hawthorne, All-M. I. A. A. half; Edgar Krapp All-M. I. A. A, quarterback; Haurant Arozian, All-M. I. A. A. tackle; Ellsworth Simmons, All-M. I. A. A. center, who missed the first honor team last year by a single vote and took a guard job on the second honor team, and Russell Riley, guard from the team of three years ago, who is certain to see considerable action again this year.

"Dear me", sighed the hard-faced admiral, "I don't see how we can stir up the government to give us some more battleships, unless we can engineer another conference to disarm and thus make war impossible."

HARD WINTER SAY NATURE STUDENTS

With muskrats building larger houses in the swamps, crows eatling their fill of corn, the old sow gathering weeds to insulate the pig pens, the trees shedding their leaves prematurely and the corn husks abnormally thick, weather wise veterans in the rural districts are predicting that Michigan is likely to have a long and severe winter.

These long range weather prognosticators declare Nature has a way of anticipating prospective weather conditions. Certain animals, particularly the muskrat and sow, have an instinct to forsee an adverse situation and prepare for it.

In building a larger house, the muskrat insulates his home, with more marsh grass and cat-tails in anticipation of a cold winter, the weather-wise assert. The crows eat ravenously of corn in expectation of a long period of light rations. Up state farmers report crows destroying hundreds of bushels of corn.

Nature has a way of protecting the corn against the cold. It provides a thick husk to protect the kernels against winter injury to next spring's seed supply. Weather-wise folks report the husks are abnormally thick this fall.

Another tip on the weather, the old timers say, is to be found in the trees of the orchard and wood lot. They have displayed a tendency to shed their leaves prematurely.

Nothing can be selected arbitrarily as the most useless object in the world although, one leg on a fifteen dollar golf cup would be a strong candidate.

The average man spends a lot of time prosecuting the work of others that he would better spend in prosecuting his own.

Your mistakes may contribute to the wisdom of others.

ROAD SURFACING TOPS LAST YEAR

More state highways have been surfaced so far this year than in the corresponding period of nineteen twenty six, accoring to a highway department report..

The completed surface mileage totaled two hundred five and 7 tenth miles of which one hundred forty four and eight tenths were concrete about fifteen miles were other hard surface and the rest gravel.

Last year, up to the middle of August one hundred and seventy miles of surface were completed of which eighty nine miles were concrete.

Most of the projects finished this year where hold over contracts from nineteen twenty six. There were two hundred and six miles left over to be surfaced and since the first of the year contracts have been awarded for more than a hundred additional miles.

Indications are, according to highway officials, that the total completed mileage this year will compare favorably with that of nineteen twenty six when two hundred and eighty seven miles were finished..

GROWTH COSTS FIRM $340,000

Preparation for anticipated growth and installation of protective equipment to insure continuity of service is costing the Michigan Public Service company three hundred forty thousand dollars in nineteen twenty-seven. Nearly all projects will be completed by January first. The company operates nine hydro-electric and steam plants to serve communities from Whitehall to the straits of Mackinac and south from Cheboygan to Grayling

From Ludington to Whitehall, fifty miles a new thirty-three thousand volt transmission line is being built at a cost of one hundred twenty-five thousand dollars. A new line has been built from Whitehall around the east shore of White lake at a cost of ten thousand dollars. The company is completing an eighteen mile line from Whitehall through Lakewood to Twin Lakes at an expense of twenty thousand dollars serving four hundred to five hundred resort and permanent customers.

A new thirty-three thousand volt line is being constructed from Pellston and Cheboygan to Black river, where one of its chief hydro-electric plants is located. This twenty-two mile line will cost fifty thousand dollars. At the Black river plant a new one thousand kilowatt substation is under construction.

When these projects are completed there will be a thirty-three thousand volt line, two hundred and seventy five miles in length, connecting all towns served by the company. An extension was made from Grayling this year to serve the state military camp at Portage lake.

OLD CIRCUS CLOWN VISITOR TO FORD

The vagrant charm of the open road the thrill and the mystery of unknown things —romance—adventure—glory and excitement—these were the lure of the one-ring circus in the days when almost every boy had dreams of being a Barnum.

There is no romance any more and all the fun is gone, old Bob Sherwood mourns. The circus of the present day has lost the charm of its forerunner, he says, Sherwood is the last of the famous old time Barnum clowns. He spent twenty six years under the big top as an acrobatic funny man and he knows the circus inside and out as few others do today.

He is seventy-one and though he has been away from the circus nearly three decades he still carries the nickname of Petie that he got while he was a boy. He was the protege of the famous P. T. Barnum and it was because of this that he was named.

His hair is nearly white now and he walks with a little stoop that was not there before. But he came to Detroit to visit Henry Ford not many days ago and he danced a dozen of his old time dances with all the grace and vigor that helped to make him famous nearly fifty years ago.

He is a friend of Mr. Ford and of Thomas A. Edison. He is, in fact the friend of thousands and almost tens of thousands in every nook and corner of the whole United States. Mark Twain was his friend and John L. Sullivan, Thomas R. Marshall, General Tom Thumb and Ada Isaacs Menken.

He is a wholesale book dealer and publisher in New York now and a very successful one. But his mind and heart and spirit are back with his friends of the circus days.

DRY YOUR CORN M. S. C. WARNS

Seed corn will be damaged seriously this year if it is not stored properly. According to the farm crops department at Michigan State College a great deal of Michigan corn contains as high as forty five to fifty-five per cent moisture Temperatures of twenty eight to thirty degrees will spoil such corn for seed purposes if it is left out of doors.

Expensive equipment is not neccessary to properly care for seed corn to preserve the germinating quality. The farm crops department suggests the use of a vacant room in a house or brooder house. In some localities, commercial concerns will dry corn for a small charge per bushel.

According to the crops special-, ists, Michigan farmers who have a good strain of well matured corn will make a good profit on the time spent in preparing such corn for seed purposes. Good seed corn, they say will be scarce throughout the corn-growing states.

It is said to be more economical to dry the corn as early in the season as possible. The lower the temperature, the greater is the amount of heat required to eliminate the moisture in the corn. The source of heat should be below the corn during the drying process

CLICK OF CAMERA IS FATAL TO FAMOUS CRO-DECOY OWL

"Uncle Billy" Osmund, eighty-nine years old, Auburn Heights hunter and Judge Glenn Gillespie of the sixth judicial district are looking for an owl, one that can look into a judicial camera without being struck dead

Meanwhile, "Uncle Billy" has broken off all relations with the gentleman of the bench..

The reason is the loss of 'Uncle Billy's live decoy owl, a wise old bird that helped its master bag many a hawk and crow.

For six years this live decoy served the veteran hunter as faithfully as a dog serves his master.

But Judge Gillispie who, by the way, is as much an amateur photographer as he is hunter, became so interested that he journeyed to Auburn Heights to engage in both of his pastimes-hunting and photography.

Just exactly what happened when the judge arrived is quite vague—except that the owl is no more.

For, no sooner had the judge's camera clicked a picture of the bird than the owl dropped dead. With his death, the shooting of crows and hawks has stopped and the whole country-side is in mourning.

MAKE HENS MAKE MONEY

Now is the time when farmers should be serious about getting the pullets started out right for egg production", says County Agent Blander. "Because of the apparently high price of growing feeds and in many cases a shortage of good home grown feeds many many farmers having good pullets are going to let the hens come into production in a thin condition. The results will be that many flocks will be going into a molt before many weeks laying."

"The price of corn seems high but farmers are going to make a serious mistake if they take much out of their laying ration.

"Eggs are of such a price that farmers can well afford to feed them well, if they are going to keep them, otherwise it will be more profitable to sell the pullets now.

"There is one thing usually neglected with pullets and that is, expecting them all to be good layers. This is not true, as the average flock can be culled down fifteen to twenty per cent before going into laying quarters.

The two kinds most often taken out this time of the year are birds lacking in vitality such as the crow head type, and then the real slow, maturing, beefy type pullet.

Fifteen thousand burn to death each year in America.

Between a summerless summer and the rapid progress of electric refrigeration, Red Grange hasn't had a single picture in the roto sections since May.

WILL OF ECCENTRIC WOMAN DEFACED IN PENCIL IS HELD VOID

The will of Mrs. Julia Pond, eighty-nine years old, who died at Hillsdale last February, has been declared invalid by Arthur L. Guernsey, Judge of Probate. The document, disposing of a considerable estate in which she named her second cousin, Charles Wisner of Toronto, as sole heir, was found under a mass of paper in an old desk at the aged woman's home.

The validity of the will has been a matter of doubt since it was found, for although properly witnessed and drawn, it has been defaced and the notation. "No good —no god", had been written across the face in pencil.

Mrs. Pond, member of a former well known Hillsdale family, was the last of her immediate family. The had lived alone in the big house on Manning street for many years, a woman of marked eccentricity of character. Her house contained much fine old mahogany furniture china and silver, heirlooms dating back several generations, but in a bad state of neglect.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious. Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning; it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physician recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtless drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them. Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

Basket Ball In North Adams

The season opened last Wednesday evening with two games at Community Hall, and a good crowd of fans in the side lines. The first and second teams of Horton visited here and put up a rather stiff game, defeating our First team 23 and 7, and the second team 7 and 6. Coach Agnew is hoping that he will be able to switch his available material into good shape for the next game. The regular game of the schedule occurs here December 6th with Allen Schools.

Bargains in Canned Foods

A SHORTAGE of vegetables for the next twelve months, due to the unusually cold season, has just been announced by producers. Crops hardest hit by the continued cold weather are tomatoes, beans, corn, and peas.

Canned products, just now, are offered at the lowest prices which will be in effect for a year, owing to the heavy production of vegetables last season. For this reason, housewives who take advantage of the opportunity to stock their pantries with the 1927 pack while it lasts, will find the exceedingly low prices a money-saving measure.

Cold Weather Did It

Heavy frosts at Pacific Northwest points have also materially decreased the production of fruits as well as vegetables, and for this reason canned fruits are also being bought in quantity just now. California peaches will continue low in price for the coming year since a plentiful crop was harvested this year and a surplus of 2,000,000 cases remained from last year's record-breaking peach pack of 13,650,000 [illegible]. A No. 1 can of the best [illegible] of sliced peaches is now retailing for seventeen cents a can at the chain stores, some of which have special bargain sales once a week.

Other chain store bargains offered are as follows: canned tomatoes, No. 2 size containing one pound four ounces, 10 cents per can; No. 2 size canned corn, 10 cents; No. 2 size canned peas, 12 cents; No. 2 size canned stringless beans, 12½ cents.

The cold summer which has affected crops was predicted a year ago by H. H. Clayton, meterologist of the Smithsonian Institution. His prediction was founded upon calculations of the sun's radiations.

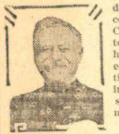
BAND TAX LAW IN 9 MORE STATES

Towns in 19 Now May Levy Special Assessment to Secure Municipal Band.

Elkhart, Ind.—Nine states have put band tax laws on their statute books since the dawn of 1927, according to the Conn Music Center here, which has just completed a survey of the laws concerning municipal music throughout the nation.



Maj. G. W. Landers.

This makes 19 states which, up to July 1, 1927, have passed a band tax law enabling cities, towns and villages to levy a special tax for municipal band purposes. Seven states have granted their municipalities the privilege of appropriating sums, up to a specified amount, and eight have issued city charters in which the privilege of appropriating money for this purpose is either expressed or implied. Only 14 of the 48 states in the Union have no provision for municipal music, although several of these have movements on foot for introducing band tax measures at early sessions of their legislatures.

This year's crop of states to pass the band tax law includes Arizona, Idaho, Florida, Maine, Minnesota, Missouri, North Dakota, Nebraska and Nevada.

Although the new AC tubes and the new rectifier tubes when employed in correctly designed circuits give satisfactory AC socket operation with most types of loudspeakers, nevertheless, the Radio Corporation has found no satisfactory substitute for the method of AC drive which it employs in Radiola 28 in combination with Loudspeaker 104; for the deep bass response of the Loudspeaker 104, from which it derives much of its tone quality, calls for an AC power supply system in which AC ripple has been reduced to the very minimum. This result is obtained in the 28-104 system of socket power operation, in which the filament current for the UX-199 tubes used in this set is obtained from the same source that provides the "B" current or plate supply for the receiver and the loudspeaker. Through this method, direct current, substantially free from ripples, is supplied to the filaments of the UX-199 tubes.

> "What is the matter with Mary Jane?
> And she won't eat her dinner—rice pudding again—)
> She's crying with all her might and main,
> What is the matter with Mary Jane?"

THE case of Mary Jane so charmingly presented by A. A. Milne in his volume of poetry entitled "When We Were Very Young" strikes a sympathetic chord in most of us. We get so fearfully tired of the same old routine things to eat!

Every housewife is apt to get into a rut in the planning of the family menu. Indeed it requires no end of ingenuity and resourcefulness to think of something different three times a day. There are, of course, lots of interesting things one might have—but at the crucial moment inspiration seems to fail and we go on eating the same old unimaginative dishes in an endless repetition.

Sometimes we grown-ups long to exercise some of Mary Jane's prerogatives and pout and kick off a shoe to register our disapproval over the menu. Anything that is done in rotation is sure to pall. Human nature loves surprises, they are so stimulating both to the mind and appetite. Many times, particularly in warm weather, the appetite requires cajoling.

Pineapple to the Rescue

Here are a few happy suggestions which are guaranteed to ward off tantrums when the dessert course appears, and which are, likely to induce hand-springs from the juniors of the household.

Marshmallow-Pineapple Delight: Drain nine slices of Hawaiian pineapple and cut in small pieces. Mix with one-half pound of marshmallows which have been cut in quarters. Pour one cup of cream over this mixture and let it stand overnight. Serve very cold.

Rice with Hawaiian Pineapple: Steam one-half cup of rice, add the well beaten yolks of two eggs, one-half cup of sugar and one-half can of Hawaiian sliced pineapple cut in small pieces. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of eggs and bake thirty minutes in a well-buttered dish. Serve with cream.

Hawaiian Pineapple Pudding:

1 cup pineapple syrup from can
1 cup water
1 lemon (juice)
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 eggs separated
1 cup pineapple cubes
whipped cream

Mix sugar and cornstarch, place in double boiler, stir in the pineapple syrup, water and lemon juice, and cook until smooth. Pour onto the beaten yolks, fold in the beaten whites and then the pineapple syrup, water and lemon juice Set baking dish in a slow oven and bake twenty minutes. When cool, top with whipped cream and serve.

Pineapple Pie is Good

2 tablespoons granulated gelatine
½ cup cold water
1 can grated pineapple
½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 pint cream
pastry

Prepare and line a pie plate with pie crust and bake in moderate oven. Heat the grated Hawaiian pineapple, three cupfuls in all, add sugar, lemon juice and gelatine softened in water. Stir until dissolved. Put in a cool place, stirring frequently. When the mixture begins to set, stir in the cream beaten stiff. Cool again until quite stiff, place in the pie crust and allow to chill till thoroughly set.

Pineapple and Strawberry Shortcake: Wash and slice one pint of strawberries, shred or dice one pint can of Hawaiian pineapple, adding about one-half cupful sugar. Make a biscuit dough using two cups flour, four tablespoons baking powder, one teaspoon salt and about three-fourths cup milk, shaping into individual short cakes. Open while very hot, butter, and on the lower piece place a spoonful each of strawberries and pineapple. Put more fruit over the top and pour on a sauce made as follows: boil one cup of sugar with one-half cup water until a heavy syrup is formed. Remove from fire and add one and one-half tablespoons lemon juice and two teaspoons butter.

Hawaiian Delight: Sift together one and one-half cups pastry flour, three teaspoons baking powder, one-half teaspoon salt, and one tablespoon sugar. Beat one egg very light and add to it three-fourths cup of milk and one tablespoon melted butter. Add gradually to the dry ingredients, stirring constantly. Place in a greased pan and sprinkle the top with a mixture of one tablespoon sugar and one-fourth teaspoon cinnamon. Cut in squares and serve hot with crushed Hawaiian pineapple over the top.

Why Sheetrock is a different wallboard
What it is: Sheetrock is gypsum plaster cast in thick, rigid sheets. It is fireproof, non-warping and permanent. It can be sawed and nailed like lumber. Takes any decoration—wall paper, paint, or Textone in the new stipple finishes.
What it does: Sheetrock makes solid, highly insulating walls and ceilings that keep rooms warm in winter and cool in summer. That means more comfort and lower fuel bills. Then, too, Sheetrock walls and ceilings make buildings dust-tight, soundproof and vermin-proof.
Where it is usea: Sheetrock is the economical wall and ceiling material for many types of new construction and for all remodeling and repairs. It is just the thing for attic rooms, furnace rooms, fruit cellars, garages, offices and stores.
Where to get it: Get your Sheetrock from us. We carry it in standard ceiling heights and widths. Our trucks make prompt deliveries.

At the opening of bids, however, he requested that his bid be withdrawn. The next low bid was that of seventy thousand seven hundred and ninety dollars made by A. B. Lynch Company of Milwaukee Wis.

The BABY

Why do so many, many babies of today escape all the little fretful spells and infantile ailments that used to worry mothers through the day, and keep them up half the night.

If you don't know the answer, you haven't discovered pure, harmless Castoria. It is sweet to the taste and sweet in the little stomach. And its gentle influence seems felt all through the tiny system. Not even a distasteful dose of castor oil does so much good.

Fletcher's Castoria is purely vegetable so you may give it freely, at first sign of colic; or constipation; or diarrhea. Or those many times when you just don't know what is the matter. For real sickness, call the doctor, always. At other times, a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria.

The doctor often tells you to do just that; and always says Fletcher's. Other preparations may be just as pure, just as free from dangerous drugs, but why experiment. Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

GREENVILLE PROVES CLAIM TO TITLE OF STATE SPUD CAPITAL

Greenville's claim to the 'potato capitol of Michigan', is given support in the summary of the nineteen twenty-six twenty-seven potato deal as prepared by R. H. Shoemaker, representative of the State and Federal Department of Agriculture.

The summary shows Greenville shipped more than twice as many cars as its nearest rival, Gaylord in Otsego County. A total of eight hundred and ninety four cars originated from Greenville, Gaylord shipped four hundred and two cars Montcalm county in which Greenville is located shipped about three times as many cars as any other county in the state. It loaded three thousand eight hundred and seventy four cars or twenty per cent of the total shipments from the state last season.

Ohio was the leading consumer of Michigan potatoes, taking a fourth of the cars shipped. Excluding shipments by motor trucks, Michigan ranked second and Pennsylvania third.

Michigan's potato industry makes little use of its water transportation to market potatoes. Only fifty three cars were shipped by boat.

EXHIBIT PLANS LAID BY M. S. C.

Preparations for the annual horticultural show manager by Michigan State college students, which will be held during Farmers Week, January thirty to February four, were launched at East Lansing, with appointment of student committees, headed by Harry F. Smith, of Romeo, as general chairman.

Committess will start immediately, to work on plans for the show, which they assert will be larger even than that of last year and will include displays of flowers, vegetables and citrus friuts, as well as apples.

Arrangements will be parctically complete by the close of the fall term in December.

Several of the entries have already arrived and been placed in storage in the horticultural building. The M. S. C. Horticultural club will be in charge.

COURSES EXPANDED AT MINE COLLEGE UNDER NEW LAWS

Under authority given by the last state legislature, the faculty of the Michigan College of Mining and Technology has prepared full four year courses in civil mechanical, electrical and chemical engineering. Heretofore, only the first two year's work was given in the courses.

Mining and metallurgy also may be taken in four years, but the college has made it possible for a student to finish any course in three years. Students electing four term or eleven months a year may complete the full course in three years The four year course consists of three terms or nine months each year.

A considerable number of this year's freshman class which is the largest in history, will take the four year course.

FREE COUNTY FAIR FAILS TO GET ACTION

Although the subject of a free county fair was brought up at the annual meeting of the Jackson County Agricultural society, action was not taken on it.

Recommendations were made that superintendents of the departments, ticket sellers, and takers serve at the fair next year without pay.

Officers elected are; president, W. N. Armstrong; first vice president, Bruce Crum. second vice president, Ray Reed; secretary, J. C. Mack; treasurer, A. J. Whitney. Many of the executive committee were re-elected.

FARMERS HOLD 1927 POTATOES

Michigan farmers are expecting potato prices to average considerably higher this winter and they are holding the major portion of their nineteen twenty-seven crop for the advance.

Shipments from Greenville, the potato capital of Michigan, and from all other loading points, have been abnormally light this season. Only a fifth as many cars have been shipped to date as in nineteen twenty-six. The movement passed the one thousand car mark during the first week of November while a year ago the total exceeded five thousand cars.

Not all of the shipment shrinkage is the result of growers holding their spuds. The crop is short perhaps a third smaller than a year ago, and it has matured late.

Most of the spud belt escped a killing frost until the middle of October, while few tubers were harvested during the first half of the month on account of the rainy weather.

Clear weather during the last half of October tended to keep the growers busy with the fall harvest and kept them from hauling potatoes. Reports reaching Greenville now indicate the big end of the spud crop is out of the ground, yet deliveries at country loading points continue light. This is chiefly due to growers holding their crop for higher prices.

Farmers are predicting the November crop report, due next week, will show further reduction in Michigan's production of potatoes. They say the October estimate of two million, seven hundred seventy thousand bushels was based upon field conditions late in September before the actual harvest got under way. Yields have been disappointingly low, they report. Many fields are yielding fifty to one hunderd bushels per acre instead of one hundred and fifty to two hundred as expected.

The light production is the result of the ten week drought last summer which caused a light set in the hills and stunted the tubers. Few rough or oversize potatoes were produced in the nineteen twenty-seven crop.

FIRST WEEK TESTS STAMINA OF GIRLS AT STATE COLLEGE

"Mama and pap" were the names given for her parents by one freshman girl last year, according to the Michigan State College "Wolverine," the annual publication which reports the serious and frivolous affairs of the campus. And anyone who has been an onlooker during the first few days of a freshman girl's life, cannot find her answer so surprising. If the first week was not the hardest, it at least was the fullest, and were not M. S. C. an old and well established institution it would have never survived the activities planned for its new citizens.

Freshman girls, most of them, actually began their college life last spring when they received with a freshman program a letter from some girl, now a sophomore, giving her impressions of the first year she had spent at M. S. C. Many of these girls continued corresponding throughout the summer and the freshman landed with at least one whom she considered a personal friend on the campus.

If she arrived by train she was met by a group of friendly helpful girls, upper classmen who wore identifying ribbons of green and white and a welcoming smile.

KENT COMMISSION WORKS ON SYSTEM OF COUNTY ROADS

A county plan for arterial and secondary highways in the townships surrounding Grand Rapids is being considered by the county road comimssion with a view of eliminating any further objectionable features in the road systems provided in the new plans.

A nineteen twenty-seven statute requires owners of new plats abutting on or including roads of the county road system to submit their proposed plats to the county road commission for approval. The proposal for a county plan for highways in this area was made by W. B. Williams, a surveyor.

He insisted that the road commission, co-operating with the planning department of the city of Grand Rapids and the township boards of the townships adjacent to the city, could perform a public service by laying out a highway system in the suburban area.

This plan, if carried out, will not be confined to streets that are now dedicated but will provide for principal and secondary highways, located and designated as to width with the objective of meeting future needs when the outlying districts become thickly populated.

LIBRARIAN TELLS HOW TO LEARN OF BOOKS FOR STUDENTS

A little applied psychology combined with chats with the students teachers and one can determine the literary preferences of the majority of the pupils in high school, according to Miss Mary Frances Beeman, Mt Clemens high school librarian.

'It takes quite a little research,' Miss Beeman says. to obtain onverts to the habit of regular reading. The English teachers in particular co-operate with me. By the subject matter and types of themes a pupil writes and by watching their outside activities, as well as having occasional chats with their parents and studying their home environment, it is possible to tell almost exactly what a pupil will read."

Miss Beeman was born in Mason Mich., and was graduated from the Jackson high school and the University of Michigan with a bachelor of arts degree. She is a member of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority and of Phi Beta Kappa honorary educational fraternity.

John Huxford's Mary

Strange it is and wonderful to mark how upon this planet of ours the smallest and most insignificant of events set a train of consequences in motion which act and react until their final results are portentous and incalculable. Set a force rolling, however small, and who can say where it shall end, or what it may lead to. Trifles develop into tragedies, and the bagatelle of one day ripens into the catastrophe of the next. An oyster throws out a secretion to surround a grain of sand, and so a pearl comes into being; a pearl diver fishes it up; a merchant buys it and sells it to a jeweler, who disposes of it to a customer.. The customer is robbed of it by two scoundrels, who quarrel over the booty. One slays the other and, perishes himself upon the scaffold Here is a direct chain of events with a sick mollusk for its first link, and a gallows for its last one. Had that grain of sand not chanced to wash in between the shells of the bivalve, two living, breathing beings with all their potenialities for good and for evil would not have been blotted out from among their fellows. Who shall undertake to judge what is really small and what is great.

Thus when in the year of eighteen twenty-one, Don Diego Salvador bethought him that if it paid the heretics in England to import the bark of his cork oaks, it would pay him also to found a factory by which the corks might be cut and sent out ready made, surely at first sight no very vital human interests would appear to be affected. Yet there were poor folks who would suffer, and suffer acutely—women who would weep, and men who would become sallow and hungry looking and dangerous in places of which the don had never heard, and all on account of that one idea which had flashed across him as he strutted, cigarettiferous beneath the grateful shades of his limes, So crowded is this old globe of ours, and so interlaced our interest that one cannot think a new thot without some poor devil being the better or the worse for it.

Don Diego Salvador was a cap[illegible]t, and the abstract thought soon took the concrete form of a square, plastered building wherein a couple of hundred of his swarthy countrymen worked with deft, nimble fingers at a rate of pay which no English artisan could have accepted. Within a few months, the result of this new competition was an abrupt fall in prices in the trade which was serious for the largest firms and disastrous for the smaller ones. A few old established houses held on as they were, others reduced their establishments and cut down their expenses, while one or two put up their shutters and confessed themselves beaten. In this last unfortunate category was the ancient and respected firm of Fairbairn Brothers of Brisport.

Several causes had led up to this disaster, through Don Diego's debut as a cork-cutter had brought matters to a head. When a couple of generations back, the original Fairbairn had founded the business, Brisport was a little fishing town with no outlet or occupation for her superfluous population. Men were glad to have safe and continuous work upon any terms. All this was altered now, for the town was expanding 'nto the center of a large district in the west, and the demand for labor and its renumeration had proportionately increased. Again, in the old days when carriage was ruinous and communication slow, the vintners of Exeter and of Barnstaple were glad to buy their corks from their neighbor of Brisport; but now the large London houses sent down their travelers, who competed with each other to gain the local custom until profits were cut down to the vanishing point. For a long time the firm had been in a precarious position, but this further drop in prices settled the matter and compelled Mr. Charles Fairbairn, the acting manager, to close his establishment.

It was a murky, foggy Saturday afternoon in November when the hands were paid for the last time, and the old building was to be finally abandoned. Mr. Fairbairn, an anxious faced, sorrow worn man stood on a raised dais by the cashier while he handed the little pile of hard earned shillings and coppers to each successive workman as the long procession filed past his table. It was usual with the employees to clatter away the instant that they had been paid, like so many children let out f school; but to-day they waited, forming little groups over the great dreary room, and discussing in subdued voices the misfortune which had come upon their employers, and the future which awaited themselves. When the last pile of coins had been handed across the table, and the last name checked by the cashier, the whole throng faced silently round to the man who had been their master, and waited expectantly for words which he might have to say to them

Mr. Charles Fairbairn had not expected this, and it embarrassed him. He had waited as a matter of routine duty until the wages were paid, but he was a taciturn, slow-witted man, and he had not foreseen this sudden call upon his oratorical powers. He stroked his thin cheek nervously with his long white fingers, and looked down with weak, watery eyes at the mosaic of upturned, serious faces.

"I am sorry that we have to part my men." he said last in a crackling voice. "It's a bad day for all of us, and for Brisport too. For three years we have been losing money over the works. We held on in the hope of a change coming but matters are going from bad to worse. There's nothing for it but to give it up. I hope you may all be able to get work of some sort before very long. Goodby, and God bless you."

'God bless you sir.' God bless you" cried a chorus of rough voices. "Three cheers for Mr. Charles Fairbairn" shouted a bright-eyed, smart young fellow, springing upon a bench and waving his peaked cap in the air. The crowd responded to the call, but their huzzas wanted the true ring which only a joyous heart could give. Then they began to flock out into the sunlight, looking back as they went at the long deal tables and the cork strewn floor—above all the sad faced, solitary man, whose cheeks were flecked with color at the rough cordiality of their farewell.

"Huxford', said the cashier, touching on the shoulder the young fellow who had led the cheering, "the governor wants to speak to you."

The workman turned back and stood swinging his cap awkwardly in front of his ex-employer, while the crowd pushed on until the door way was clear, and the heavy fog wreaths rolled unchecked into the deserted factory.

"Ah, John", said Mr. Fairbairn, coming suddenly out of his reverie and taking up a letter from the table. "You have been in my service since you were a boy, and you have shown that you merited the trust which I have placed in you. From what I have heard, I think I am right in saying that this sudden want of work will affect your plans more than it will many of my other hands.

"I was to be married at Shrovetide", the man answered, tracing a pattern upon the table with his horny forefinger. "I'll have to find work first."

'And work, my poor fellow, is by no means easy to find. You see you have been in this groove all your life, and are unfit for anything else. It's true you've been my foreman, but even that won't help you, for the factories all over England are discharging hands, and there's not a vacancy to be had. It's a bad outlook for you and such as you."

"What would you advise, then sir" asked John Huxford.

"That's what I was coming to. I have a letter here from Sheridan and Moore, of Montreal, asking for a good hand to take charge of a work-room. If you think it will suit you, you can go out by the next boat. The wages are far in excess of anything which I have been able to give you."

"Why sir' this is real kind of you the young workman said, earnestly "She—my—girl—Mary, will be as grateful to you as I am. I know what you say is right, and that if I had to look for work I should be likely to spend the little that I have laid by toward housekeeping before I found it. But sir, with your leave I'd like to speak to her about it before I made up my mind. Could you leave it open for a few hours.

"The mail goes out to-morrow," Mr. Fairbairn answered. "If you decide to accept you can write to-night. Here is their letter, which will give you their address."

John Huxford took the precious paper with a grateful heart. An hour ago his future had been all black, but now this rift of light had broken in the west giving promise of better things. He would have liked to have said something expressive of his feelings to his employer, but the English nature is not effusive, and he could not get beyond a few choking awkward words which were as awkwardly received by his benefactor. With a scrape and a bow, he turned on his heel, and plunged out into the foggy street.

So thick was the vapor that the houses over the way were only a vague loom, but the foreman hurried on with springy steps where the fishermen's nets were drying, and over cobble stoned alleys redolent of herring, until he reached a modest line of white washed cottages fronting the sea. At the door of one of these the young man tapped, and then without waiting for a response pressed down the latch and walked in.

An old, silvery haired woman and a young girl hardly out of her teens were sitting on either side of the fire place, and the latter sprung to her feet as he entered.

"You've got some good news, John", she cried putting her hands upon his shoulders, and looking into his eyes. "I can tell it from your step. Mr. Fairbairn is going to carry on after all."

"No dear, not so good as that," John Huxford answered, smoothing back her rich brown hair; but I have an offer of a place in Canada with good money, and if you think as I do, I shall go out to it, and you can follow with the granny whenever I have made all straight for you at the other side. What say you to that, my lass."

"Why surely, John, what you think is right must be for the best, said the girl, quietly, with trust and confidence in her pale, plain face and loving hazel eyes. 'But poor granny, how is she to cross the seas."

"Oh never mind about me," the old women broke in cheerfully. I'll be no drag on you. If you want granny, granny's not too old to travel; and if you don't want her, why she can look after the cottage and have an English home ready for you whenever you turn back to the old country."

"Of course we shall need you, granny", John Huxford said, with a cheery laugh. "Fancy leaving granny behind. That would never do, Mary. But if you both come out and if we are married all snug and proper at Montreal, we'll look through the whole city until we find a house something like this one, and we'll have creepers on the outside just the same, and when the doors are shut and we sit around the fire on a winters night I'm hanged if we'll be able to tell that we're not at home. Besides, Mary, it's the same speech out there, the same king, and the same flag; it's not like a foreign country.'

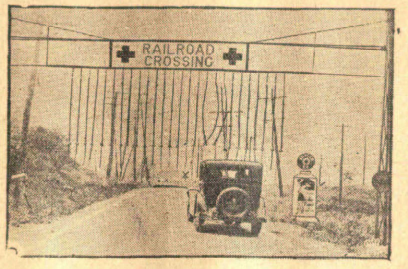
NEW SAFETY DEVICE FOR RAILROAD CROSSINGS



A NEW safety device to lessen the element of danger at railroad crossings is now in operation at Vermillion, Ohio, and proving quite an effective means of halting reckless or "absentminded" motorists

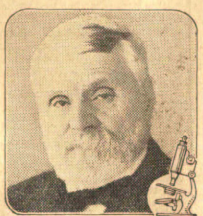
The arrangement—pictured at the right—warns the motorists that he is approaching a railroad crossing. As he nears it, straps suspended from the bar overhead knock against the top of his car, notifying him of possible danger ahead. Very practical—we'd say.

What I Have Learned in 47 Years Practice

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for forty-seven years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it. Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation known as Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It doth not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of forty-seven years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly more cleanly and gently, without griping and harm to the system

Keep free from constipation. It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one fo the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.



W. B. Caldwell MD

Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house and observe these three rules of health; Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin", Monticella, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.

MICHIGAN APPLES STILL RANK FIRST

Competition of orchardists in other states and the growing demand for canned fruits threaten the supremacy of the Michigan apple, farmers attending the Top-o- Michigan Apple and Potato show here were told recently by R. W. Rees, horticulturalist for the New York Central lines.

H. S. Cardinell, horticulture extension specialist at Michigan State college, and R. C. Bennett, of Alba, president of the show association and of the Michigan Potato Producers' association, also were speakers at the meeting.

"During the last five years, competition from other fruits which the apple must meet has increased by thirty-five per cent." Mr. Rees declared.

"The increased number of people living in apartments and the small storage space available to them has cut down the demand for fresh fruits and strengthened the demand for canned fruits. The amount of canned pineapple marketed now is approximately eight million cases as compared with a few thousand cases fifteen years ago.'

Consumption of oranges, pears, peaches and apricots, Mr. Rees said, has increased by one hundred and seventy-five per cent within ten years.

"Apple growers of Michigan must also face competition from the apple orchards of other states, some of which are increasing their plantings", he added. "The best way to meet that competition is by marketing a better product than theirs. It is not a time to expand acreage in Michigan, but to use the present acreage and make good with it."

TRAIN WHISTLE ROUTS BEARS OFF OF TRACKS

Since the legislature has given the lowly bear as mush protection as the deer, the bruins have in-northern Michigan.

Motorists have reported seeing bears at a number of places between Reed City and Petoskey. The animals have shown little alarm by the presence of pedestrians or the passing of automobiles, continuing on their way gathering acorns from the oak groves and grubs from rotting logs.

Pere Marquette trainmen report that bears occasionally are seen to cross the right of way ahead of approaching trains. They scamper into the brush only after the engineer blows the locomotive whistle.

STATE PROFITS BY RING BOUTS

Thomas W. Bigger, boxing commissioner, and members of the State Athletic Board of Control will hold a round table conference with boxing promoters, managers and club representatives in Detroit December eight.

Efforts will then be made to introduce new rules governing the holding of boxing contests, which are growing rapidly in all principal Michigan cities. The state's ten per cent tax on boxing exhibitions this year has already reached a total of forty-three thousand eight hundred and ninety-five, as compared with fourteen thousand nine hundred and twenty-six dollars collected during the whole of nineteen twenty-six, it was disclosed at a meeting of the board yesterday.

The licenses of Frank Grover, Kalamazoo boxer and his manager Jake Latshaw, Battle Creek were suspended on account of the former's failure to appear for weighing-in at three p. m. on the day of a scheduled contest.

Charlie Moore, manager of a string of boxers in Detroit, who was suspended some time ago for arguing with Referee E. W. Dickerson, of Grand Rapids, was reinstated.

KENT COUNTY ASKS FULL TIME HEALTH OFFICER

Employment of a full time county health officer will be asked of the Kent County board of supervisors by the rural school teacher and the parents teachers' associations of the county. The organizations are supported by Dr. Guy L. Keifer, state commissioner of health, and Dr. L. L. Lumsden of the United States public health service who may appear before the board.

PASTOR'S FLOCK STRAYS, 'AD' OFFERS 'EM 'FODDER'

So many of the flock of the Rev. J. B. Ennis pastor of the Gainsville Methodist congregation, are staying away from church that he has published the following advertisements in local newspapers recently.

"LOST. STRAYED OR STOLEN

A large flock of Methodist sheep They have been gone for some time When last seen they were browsing along the road of indifference. Anyone finding these sheep please bring them home if possible and you will receive ample reward. If they refuse to come home, drive them into the nearest fold and lock the door and report to the undersigned—Rev. J. B. Ennis. Plenty of fodder will be provided Sunday.'

FAIR DATES FIXED FOR NEXT YEAR IN UPPER PENINSULA

Dates for the several upper peninsular county fairs and for the Upper Michigan state fair at Escanaba were set at a meeting of the Upper Peninsula State Fair association. Other business matters taken up at the gathering comprised election of officers for the nineteen twenty-eight association, and discussion of the relationship between the county fairs and the state exposition.

With the exception of Luce and Houghton counties the tentative schedule of fairs drafted by E. G. Amos of Marquette, secretary of the organization, was satisfactory to the county representatives. The delegates from Luce and Houghton counties agreed to take the matter up with their respective fair board in an attempt to agree on the dates set in the schedule.

W. G. Stevens of Manistique was elected president of the nineteen twenty-eight association succeeding G. W. Putman, of Chatham. E. G. Amos of Marquette was re-elected secretary. The next annual meeting will be held at Manistique

August twenty to twenty-four—Soo fair, Chippewa county.

August twenty seven to thirty-one—Luce, Iron and Pickford.

September one to eight—Marquette, Dickinson, Goebic and Baraga.

September ten to fifteen—School croft, Alger, Menominee, Houghton and Mackinaw.

September seventeen to twenty-two—Upper Peninsula State Fair, Escanaba.

GRANGE DELEGATES SEEK FARM RELIEF

Cooperation with other farm organizations will be urged by the delegates of the Michigan Grange when the national organization met at Cleveland last week, officials here announced recently. Adjustment of the tariff to equalize protection of agricultural and industrial products also is in the instructions which the Michigan members will carry with them to the annual meeting.

The stand of the state members upon the matter was disclosed here by Mrs. Dora Stockman in making public a resolution passed at the recent state meeting of the Grange at South Haven. The resolution was a substitute for one brought to the floor by the committee which referred to the surplus control bill. The substitute resolution which follows, was submitted to the convention by Mrs. Stockman after a long discussion of farm relief. It leaves the Michigan delegates free to support the most practicable method of farm relief that appears on the floor at the Cleveland convention.

The text of the resolution follows.

"Whereas, the question of farm relief is the most important question before the nation today, involving not only the prosperity of agriculture but industry also.

"And whereas we believe that agriculture can and should be assisted by national legislation as has benefited industry;

"Therefore, we ask the national Grange to urge and promote such adjustment of the tariff as will more nearly equalize the protection with industrial products.

"Further; That we instruct our representatives to the national Grange to most earnestly urge the national Grange to promote farm relief legislation, and also to cooperate with other national farm organizations on a farm relief bill which all farm organizations can unite in solidly supporting.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

W. C. T. U. Convention Report

"Wear the white ribbon, my sister,
'tis service most sweet;
Then when in mansions of glory
your Lord you shall meet
Just haply someone may be there who will say—
'Twas the mute fervent prayer of that little white ribbon they wear
That brought me to His feet."

Thursday afternoon we heard wonderfully encouraging addresses by Congressman Joseph L. Hooper and Attorney Douglass Graham of Detroit. Mr. Hooper analyzed the situation in Congress concluding by saying that the wets continue to agitate in hopes that sometime they may get what they want, but though there is much talk it is an obvious fact to those in Congress that nothing will be done about the changing of the 18th amendment. It is necessary for the friends of prohibition to be on their guard and to see that honest men are chosen for office.

Just here we had a demonstration of Press work by a woman who had pasted in double column on a stripe of cloth the articles that she had put in her local paper in W. C. T. U. inter sts this year. It was a large roll and as she unrolled it and praised the editor who kindly printed so much, every one applauded. I wished I had done the same as I am sure we have had much more than she had thanks to our prohibition editor who surely does much for the cause by granting us weekly so much space. As it was, I was called to the front as one of the very few editors of W. C. T. U. coluumns in the state and was pleased to learn that a copy of the North Adams Advocate had been exhibited at the National Convention in Minneapolis last July as an example of what one small town paper was doing in publicity work.

Mr. Graham emphasized the need of more men and more money to enforce the prohibition laws. "We ought to have $50,000,000 to $100,000,000 annually for this work. Even then, it would be a pittance as compared with the material benefit of prohibition."

In the evening came the Grand Gold Medal Contest with five contestants all of whom were very good. The address of the evening was given by Congressman Grant M. Hudson of the 6th district. The local paper reported him as follows:

He particularly stressed the report of the judiciary committee of the United States senate. "I wish that you would write in your notebooks and in your memories these words by the committee: 'We believe that this amendment is morally right and economically sound.' This is the report of the committee after the 18th amendment has been in effect for seven years, in the face of the most determined opposition by its opponents who declare it ineffective and unwarranted."

Mr. Hudson scored the opponents of the amendment, citing an editorial in a metropolitan paper which states that "Chief of Police Collins of Chicago and Mayor John W. Smith of Detroit will pass on but prohibition and the 18th amendment will remain with us." The ridiculousness of asking public officials whether they will enforce the laws was pointed out by Mr. Hudson, who said:

"Isn't it about time that we quit asking a candidate for office if he will enforce the law? There ought to be no question about that. Any man who seeks public office and yet does not expect to enforce all the laws is a poltroon."

Mr. Huron reprimanded those who, though opposed to strong alcoholic drinks, serve wine in their homes "as social grace." Isn't there a better way to show social grace than to serve wine in the home?" he asked. He advocated refusal to trade with merchants who display pocket flasks, cocktail shakers and other accessories to prohibition violation. He called attention to the home papers, which are supported largely by the advertising of the home merchants "We need a fair and square deal from the papers. Would it not be wise to say to your home merchants, 'If the paper you support is not fair in its presentation of the prohibition situation, do you think you ought to patronize it?"

In the conclusion of his speech, Mr. Hudson said, "I want you to feel that this thing is permanent that the 18th amendment has come to stay, and that out of the turmoil of today, things are getting better and better."

Mrs. Charles E. Stewart, delegate-elect to the World convention of the W. C. T. U. at Lausanne, Switzerland, next year, spoke of the past conventions and her experiences in Europe. Dr. Kellogg gave a short talk and displayed part of his film on alcohol. "Education is the only final method of securing prohibition", he stated. "Our young people must be made to realize the harm that the twin devils alcohol and nicotine, can work upon them." The film showed an experiment wherein a gold fish was placed in a two and a half percent solution of alcohol, got drunk and died in 30 minutes.

Dr. Kellogg's talks were very forceful. Following we had a beautiful program given by the Junior Girl Reserves.

Friday morning we heard reports of committees and the formal closing of the convention. Delegates were given a luncheon by the Postum Cereal Company and this proved to be very nice as was also the trip through the factory. Then the Chamber of Commerce gave an interesting trip around the city to all who wished to go taking us to Camp Custer also. We had printed directions so we knew what we were seeing.

The music was fine throughout the Convention and the courtesy of the Boy Scouts and Girl Reserves was a beautiful part of our visit.

W. C. T. U. Convention is in Lansing next fall and I hope some one can go from here. I surely hope that someone will have as profitable a time as I did and I hope to be able to give some service to our union because of the inspiration I received. I thank all who made it possible for me to go.

The End

Sheriff's Report for week ending November 26, 1927

On Monday at about 5 a. m., a Chicago-Detroit bus ran into a freight train which was passing through Jonesville on the main line. Careful inquiry could fix the blame on no person. The conditions and weather alone causing the injury to a score of people, happily none seriously.

In the Circuit Court on the same date, Alfred Mingus, who was charged with breaking and entering the Ry Station at night time pleaded guilty and was sentenced to Jackson Prison for 1½ to 15 years. Mingus, it will be remembered, also stole a car in Toledo and passed a forged check.

Dogs, Dogs, Dogs, The entire county was placed on the Quarantine list by the Commissioner of Agriculture. All dogs must be Tied up, Muzzled securely or vaccinated by Reg. Veterinary. At a meeting Tuesday evening at the Sheriff's Office the County Veterinary Association recommended the use of the vaccine and agree to apply the treatment to dogs brought to their respective offices for a nominal charge. This includes the certificate for the owner and the tag for the dog. Don't forget vaccinated dogs must wear their tags on their collars at all times when running loose, even if the owner and the certificate is with them, and further the Sheriff is required to kill all dogs that do not comply with these requirements.

On Wednesday the following Federal prisoners were received from the U. S. Court at Detroit: Robert Farley, 5 months; Jack Keich. 6 months; Philip Kissler, 7 months; Joe Castello, 10 months all for liquor law violation.

On Thursday Claude Duncan and Mrs. Susan Hartman were arrested and charged with illegal cohabitation; they were living on North Manning St. when arrested. Warrant was issued on complaint of Mr. Hartman who, we have since learned, has spent 50 per cent of the past two years in Monroe Co. Jail- The case against these two young people will be dismissed for lack of evidence and also because Mrs. Hartman has four children, the youngest 6 months old to support.

Mr. Westfall of Frontier is in the Hospital here with a broken leg and other injuries due to an auto accident in Frontier on Thursday. Two black hogs, the property of Mr. Westfall, which were being driven home along the Highway just at dusk were the cause of the accident.

On Friday, C. K. Kidd, was arrested near the Arkansas school on the complaint of parties living in the neighborhood. He was attempting to drive a truck while intoxicated, Kidd is in jail. He was arraigned Saturday and case postponed until Monday.

Owen Bidlack of Camden Twp was arrested on the complaint of Mr. Katonis, for assault. Bidlack was arraigned Friday, demanded a trial and case set for early in December. Meanwhile he is at liberty on $500 bond.

On Friday night, the Sheriff's forces descended upon the Nesbit home north of Montgomery and, in a short space of time, one of the principal wet sources of Camden Twp was quickly dried up. The search warrant in this case was directed jointly against Geo. Nesbit and Era Hutton and at the time of our visit Mr. Hutton was away and as we had reason to suspect his mission, we waited quietly until he did return and then arrested him and his companion Hugh Duncan, also of Montgomery and confiscated the Ford roadster and 4 gallons of High Power they were transporting. Both are in the County Jail today (Sunday) and we have reason to believe that while there are several parched throats in S W Hillsdale county, today, there are also many people who breathe easier and feel safer. It is too bad that this raid could not have taken place several weeks earlier. It might have made a difference.

Glen Kane, age 19, of Jerome, was sent to jail Saturday evening by his mother as an incorrigible. Glen is on parole from Jackson Co for burglary and he will be returned to that county.

Total prisoners in Co. jail 13. Under sentence 6, Awaiting trial 7 Total 13.

Col. E. H. Kerr, Sheriff

That Herbert Hoover may be one of the main speakers at the annual M. S. C. Farmer's Week, to be held the first week in February, was revealed here today with the announcement that an official invitation had been extended the cabinet member. William Oxley Thompson, president-emeritus of Ohio State University, and Hon John C. Ketchum, Michigan congressman, have been definitely announced as two of the speakers who have already accepted invitations to address the big state agricultural conference. Others who are considered as likely speakers are Dean Russell, of Wisconsin, and Dean Curtis, of Iowa, heads of the agricultural schools in their respective states.

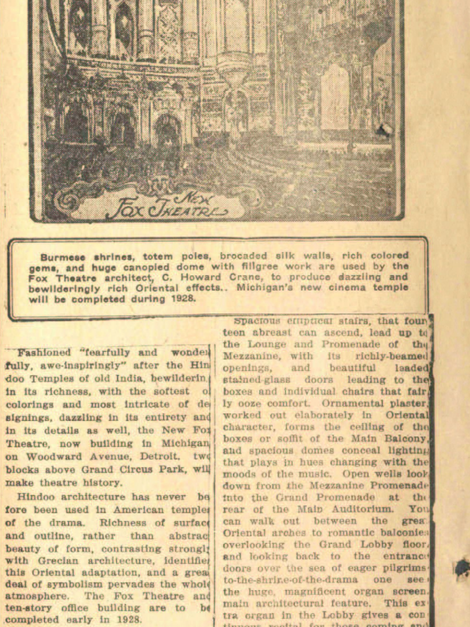
MICHIGAN WILL HAVE FIRST HINDOO TEMPLE TYPE THEATRE IN THE WORLD

Largest Drama Palace Outside New York is Being Built in Detroit by Fox Theatres Corporation—Costs Over Ten Million Dollars—Capacity 7500



Burmese shrines, totem poles, brocaded silk walls, rich colored gems, and huge canopied dome with filigree work are used by the Fox Theatre architect, C. Howard Crane, to produce dazzling and bewilderingly rich Oriental effects.. Michigan's new cinema temple will be completed during 1928.

Fashioned "fearfully and wonderfully, awe-inspiringly" after the Hindoo Temples of old India, bewildering in its richness, with the softest of colorings and most intricate of designings, dazzling in its entirety and in its details as well, the New Fox Theatre, now building in Michigan, on Woodward Avenue, Detroit, two blocks above Grand Circus Park, will make theatre history.

Hindoo architecture has never before been used in American temples of the drama. Richness of surface and outline, rather than abstract beauty of form, contrasting strongly with Grecian architecture, identifies this Oriental adaptation, and a great deal of symbolism pervades the whole atmosphere. The Fox Theatre and ten-story office building are to be completed early in 1928.

Gems of all colors, pierced screens, exotic Hindoo and Indian ornaments, huge ox-blood red marble columns sentineling the six-story Grand Lobby and the Main Auditorium, elaborate gold and silver mirrors, brocaded silk walls, huge incense burners, all are features of Michigan's new Fox Theatre that make it unique in the annals of theatre history.

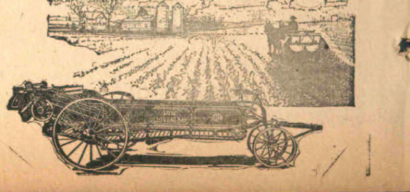
Hindoo Type of Architecture

Heavily ornamented brackets, in the Grand Lobby, decidedly Hindoo in character, rest on gigantic columns of red-gold and in turn support the heavily decorated and ornamented ceiling. Large and ornate drops, exquisite in their detail of form and color, hang "three stories down" from the ceiling which displays various coffers, niches, and pierced screens, all in brilliant colors, the general tone a fiercely glowing dull red with golds and blues picking out the various ornaments in detail. The enchantment of Arabian Nights is everywhere about, rioting and pirouetting in rainbow hues.

Spacious elliptical stairs, that fourteen abreast can ascend, lead up to the Lounge and Promenade of the Mezzanine, with its richly-beamed openings, and beautiful leaded stained-glass doors leading to the boxes and individual chairs that fairly ooze comfort. Ornamental plaster, worked out elaborately in Oriental character, forms the ceiling of the boxes or soffit of the Main Balcony, and spacious domes conceal lighting that plays in hues changing with the moods of the music. Open wells look down from the Mezzanine Promenade into the Grand Promenade at the rear of the Main Auditorium. You can walk out between the great Oriental arches to romantic balconies overlooking the Grand Lobby floor, and looking back to the entrance doors over the sea of eager pilgrims-to-the-shrine-of-the-drama one sees the huge, magnificent organ screen, main architectural feature. This extra organ in the Lobby gives a continuous recital for those coming and going.

Widest Balcony Span

But from the Balcony one feels nearer to the heart of this brilliant theatre. Almost a block wide (17 feet), and 95 feet deep, of the clear span type, this Fox balcony is the largest clear span balcony in the world. The Main Auditorium with its Burmese shrine entrances is best seen from the Balcony, in all its spacious magnificence. Resting on the multi-columned shrine openings are unique oriental-looking arches of Hindoo design, very elaborately ornamented on the soffit and sides; the arch-surmounted columns form arcades down both sides of the Auditorium, similar to the great Alhambra temple at Granada. Above and between the arches the walls are painted like brocaded silks, and far above is the cornice, superbly done in ornamental plaster and jewels set in clusters.



This Would Be Good In Michigan

Four hundred French peasant maidens of marriageable age and passably good looking of all descriptions, long, short, thick, narrow and medium, bedecked in their finest duds, ribbons and jewelry galore, are offered each year in the Lovers Fair to the highest bidder. This is an old institution known since the days of Napoleon and is just as popular now as it was then. The whole deal is looked after by the police the parents of the young people concerned and is as orderly as you please. Since the World war it is said there is a scarcity of marriageable men and as a rule there is no trouble in auctioneering these girls off.

From northern France, from Belgium and Luxembourg, just across the frontiers, came hopeful maidens. Some came in modern French autos, others walked into town in clacking wooden shoes, a few rode muleback or were wedged in between fond parents in the family carry all, a high two wheeled cart behind a patient mare.

Realizing that the supply exceeds the demand, and that the competition would be keen, each of them dressed in her best, powdered her cheeks and adorned herself with family jewelry.

Some of the parents went thru the crowd whispering diplomatically that the men who married their daughters would come into possession of a "dot", a sort of prize award which might consist of a few thousand francs, several acres of land or a pair of calves.

In the old days a lovers' fair never was considered a success unless it resulted in a score of marriages. The success of the fair will not be known until the bans are published.

It strikes the novice that some such arrangement in this village would be quite the proper thing for a few of our dyed-in-the-wool bachelors. There is a certain number who will not run into matrimony under any circumstances unless they are compelled and this might help some! While the average girl of marriageable age here might possibly object to being sold to the highest bidder, yet the advantages of getting the strays hooked up somehow might offset their scruples.

It will be a source of much satisfaction to the average citizen to learn that the days of snow bound roadways is past and the automobile will be able to negotiate practically every main road through the winter season no matter how deep the snow or how inclement the weather. Not many years ago when we were boys this was not the case, and many of us remember with unerring certainty how the bob sled and the team had to wallow through great drifts ten feet deep in the road and more often how we used to cross-cut the fields and leave the road altogether until spring. The State of Michigan is now fully prepared with trucks and tractors to plow out every main trunk line and never again will it be necessary to hook on a team of horses to the machine and drag it from a drift. The more the average citizen considers the advantages in this country over those of twenty years ago the more glad he is to be alive. Of course road tax is bound to be a little high as well as other taxes, and the up-keep is not the least of these. Some of us may possibly not agree with the method of carrying on this up-keep but all admit without it we would be blocked in mid-winter. During the summer months the road scraper is kept on the go (often unnecessarily) to level the surface, but in the winter how we do enjoy the absence of snow drifts in the beaten track! While there is no doubt an unusually large number of road users who kick about the up-keep tax yet most of them we find drive constantly and find the passable roads a great convenience in their business if it does cost a little more than it used to.

The New York Central Potato Train

New York Central Lines are preparing to send out their 1927 Potato Show Train over the lines for ten days in ten different counties of Michigan beginning December 6th 1927 and this train will be in Hillsdale Friday December 16th on the side track for your inspection and education. If you are in any way attached to the potato business either as a producer or consumer, you should take this day off and go through this train and see the splendid exhibits, take in the lectures given by experts from M. S. C. who will be aboard for this purpose. They will give you the best of their experience and science in fertilizing, planting, harvesting and storing the crop.

One big feature of this train is the prizes offered by the Company and the State of Michigan for the best exhibits of potatoes of Russet Rurals, Irish Cobblers, White Rurals. $18 will be paid to the best exhibits of Russet Rurals and Irish Cobblers; $11 to White Rurals and $1 to all other varieties competing. This is in the adults class. In the Boys and Girls Clubs there are prizes of $9 on Russet Rurals and Irish Cobblers and $6 on all other varieties. In addition the New York Central Lines offer a bronze shield to the exhibitor of the best peck (32) potatoes inside the ten counties visited.

If you have exhibits get them to the train between 10 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. after which a short program will be given at 1:30 p. m. This is well worth your time to attend and remember the date December 16th, 1927.

Somerset Congregational Church

The discourse "Voice of God" was the subject of a masterly discourse at the Somerset Congregational church, last Sunday at 10 a. m. central Standard time, given by Prof. W. H. Roberts of the Department of History, Hillsdale College.

Prof. Roberts is a graduate of a Theological Seminary and has been all his life an earnest student of the bible, which he believes contains more of the voice of God than any other book written, but he hesitates to go as far as some in insisting that all of the bible is the voice of God.

The King James version is a compilation of sacred writings made by man. Some writings were excluded by the learned scholars appointed by his majesty for the purpose.

It is a mistake to say that the Christian faith is undermined unless one accepts the entire bible as the word of God because we have, as promised by the scriptures the Holy Spirit constantly with us if we have a longing to hear the voice of God as a guide to our every day acts.

Elizabeth Smith sang a solo which came in nicely with the sermon.

The toiler outside the church who was brushed aside by the rich man entering, exemplified the God underneath his rags, to a greater degree, without knowing it, than did those inside who were going through the elaborate form of worship. The song ended with this thought as its climax, which was also in keeping with the Sunday School lesson from Isaiah. Our religion is apt to become a mere ritual.

There was a very large attendance in the adult bible class. Men are attending as well as the women, though still somewhat in the minority. There was more discussion about an aim for the class. This will be decided upon at a later session of the class.

The class will be honored with a visitor next Sunday which will be kept as a surprise. The intended visitor is known throughout the state and Nation, and has expressed himself as desiring to attend the class and say something on the topic of "class aim."

U. OF M. MAN LISTS VATICAN LIBRARY

Dr. W. W. Bishop Will Re-Catalog Archives Centuries Old

The Vatican library, one of the greatest collections of literature in the world today, is soon to be completely re-cataloged under the direction of Dr. William Warner Bishop, librarian of the University of Michigan. The modernizing of this tremendous collection of books and manuscripts, one of the world's largest and most valuable libraries, is expected to prove of great benefit to scholars all over the world.

The cost of the work is being met by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace and Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of the Endowment, visited Rome early in the summer to conclude plans of action.

Dr. Bishop went to Rome last June to study the situation. At the same time Msgr. Tisserant, assistant librarian of the Vatican, came to the United States to study the library systems of Harvard, Columbia, Princeton, Michigan and Chicago Universities and the Library of Congress at Washington.

Shortly afterward four members of the Vatican Library staff were appointed to spend the next academic year in the United States, studying library organization and methods. Two of these will, in all likelihood, work under the staff of the Congressional Library and the other two will follow the advanced instruction in library work offered by the School of Library Service at Columbia University.

The present index of the Vatican Library consists of 658 huge tomes, compiled over a period of many centuries. This index is obscure and complicated and the re-indexing of the collection is expected to bring to light archives which have escaped the attention of scholars for many years.

THE NATIONAL FARM NEWS gives the farmer and the rural town man an all-agricultural survey of the week's news, with a leaning toward the economics of production and marketing. The editorial staff is in close touch with the marketing machinery of the Agricultural Department and all the heads of the various cooperative marketing associations that are located in Washington.

WASHINGTON is the great clearing house of farm news. Every day brings the National Government into more intimate relationship with the country's basic industry—farming. Congress is just at the beginning of its real farm legislation. The wild scramble of blocs and panaceas that marked the past few years has subsided. But from now on there will be a steady, constructive program developed for the permanent improvement of farming.

Washington is the headquarters of the United States Department of Agriculture. This vast governmental agency is constantly at work on farm problems. It concerns itself not only with production, but with the business side of agriculture.

Washington, too, is the headquarters of many other branches of the Federal Government whose work touches in many vital ways the business of the farmers.

Most of the big farmers' organizations recognize the strategic advantage of being close to the governmental wheels. They maintain headquarters at the National Capital.

Washington is the center of farm news.

IN addition to its news, The National Farm News Carries some carefully conducted departments. For the housewife there is the women's page, where interests and matters pertaining to the household are discussed.

FALL FOODS MADE DIGESTIBLE

AS the days grow chilly, the body begins to crave more food to keep it warm and to furnish it energy for active work and winter sports. Even a slightly thickened coat of adipose tissue is not to be despised when the first zero weather draws near. Food does for the body what coal does for the furnace, and a combination of protein and fat serves to stoke the stomach furnace for a longer period than any other fuel. This fact explains why fat meats begin to appeal as the year grows older and colder.

Do you recall that almost every year a morning comes when your mouth waters at the thought of sausages served with pancakes and syrup, Philadelphia scrapple, bacon with waffles, or ham and johnny cake, a morning when you would not even shudder at the thought of the apple pie and doughnuts so dear in older New England?

We have sneered and turned up our noses at those imposing old heavy breakfasts but if we should have to work out of doors in a cold climate and go indoors to a house heated only by a wood burning kitchen stove with a possible supplementary air tight parlor stove, we too would have to eat largely of heating, energy supplying foods.

You Can Eat Sausages

Since most of us are not so active as were our pioneer forbears, we have to compromise between our need for heat producing foods and our digestive capacity. You may think that you, as a sedentary worker, must avoid sausage for example, or pass an uncomfortable day. The probabilities are that if you combine it with pineapple or serve it at the same meal you will have no digestive difficulties.

Pineapple is known to be rich in a digestive enzyme called bromelin which acts powerfully on protein foods. Each one of us has in our saliva, our gastric and intestinal juices various enzymes or chemical substances which specialize in the breaking down of starch into sugars, of fat into acids and glycerine, and of meat and other proteins into their simplest forms. These processes enable the body to use the food for energy and the building of bone and muscle. Therefore the wisdom of using pineapple to accompany meat becomes apparent, although its delicious supplementary flavor is reason enough.

Appetizing Combinations

Pineapple Pancakes with Sausages: Sift together two cups of flour, one-half teaspoon of salt and four teaspoons of baking powder. Add one beaten egg mixed with one and one-fourth cups of milk, one cup of crushed Hawaiian pineapple and one tablespoon of melted fat. Bake on a hot griddle, and serve with remainder of can of pineapple heated with one cup of sugar and one-half cup of water. Put one pound of breakfast sausages in a dripping pan with four tablespoons of water, and bake until brown, about one-half hour. Serve with pancakes.

Philadelphia Scrapple with Pineapple: Cut one-half inch slices of scrapple and brown in a skillet with a little butter or pork fat. Remove to a hot platter and cover each slice with a slice of Hawaiian pineapple dipped in flour and browned in the same skillet. Fill each center cavity with chopped parsley and serve.

Pineapple Luncheon Dishes

Pineapple Cocoanut Shrimp: Melt four tablespoons of butter with four tablespoons of flour, add one cup of Hawaiian pineapple syrup from can, and one cup of cream, or evaporated milk and stir until mixture thickens. Season with salt, paprika and a little cayenne. Add one can of shrimps or one and one-half cups of fresh shrimp, boiled, and one cup of shredded moist cocoanut. Dip six slices of pineapple in flour and sauté in hot fat. Serve the pineapple on hot buttered toast and pour over all the shrimp mixture. Crab or lobster meat goes equally well in this dish.

Baked Ham with Hawaiian Pineapple: Cover a two inch slice of ham with cold water and bring slowly to a boil. Cook for thirty minutes. Drain off the water and place ham in a shallow baking dish. Cover with a cup of crushed pineapple, sprinkle with a mixture of one-fourth cup of brown sugar, one-fourth cup of dry bread crumbs and a dash of ground cloves. Bake one hour in a moderate oven, and serve with the remainder of the No. 2 can of pineapple.

Pineapple Stuffed Pork Chops: Brown six chops, cut one and one-half inches thick, in a skillet. Remove and slit meat to the bone as if cutting in two, and fill the cavity with the following mixture. To two tablespoons of the fat in the pan add two tablespoons of flour, one tablespoon of chopped onion, one tablespoon of chopped pimiento and one cup of crushed Hawaiian pineapple. Cook until thick, and season with salt and pepper. Hold two sections of chop together with toothpicks, and bake in a moderate oven about half an hour. Serve with remainder of stuffing mixture, or, if none is left, a second supply can be prepared, or the original recipe can be doubled by using a whole No. 2 size can of pineapple.

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid gassy stomach, and relef will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine 'Phillips Milk of Magnesia' has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three time as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gasses. POTATOES SUPERIOR DESPITE BAD CROP

Higher quality potatoes despite a sixty per cent normal crop were on exhibit at the Thumb of Michigan potato show last week. Michigan State college specialists declared the quality crop this year is due to better cultural methods employed and to the dry season which prevented damage by disease.

Henry C. Moore college specialist, speaking at the annual banquet of the show which opened last week in Detroit declared the demand is making the Thumb district one of the most intensive potato producing sections of the United States. Farm lands near the city are being converted into subdivisions and the potato-producing area constantly is being pushed farther out, he said.

'Oakland and Macomb counties leaders in potato production, are certain to yield their places to the counties north of them." he said. "Furthermore this district is favor ed by a sandy loam and an even distribution of rainfall adapted to potatoes."

The show had one hundred and seventy-five entries this year as compared with less than last year.

Prize awards were made. M. C. Mount of Mayville, won the sweep stakes for late varieties with a russet rural exhibit and John Lyons seventeen of Mayville, won sweep stakes in the exhibit of bliss triumphs. Winners in the russet rural division of thirty-two potato exhibits were John Valentine, Mayville, first; M. C. Mount, second, and Stanley Stokes of Kingston, third.

ST. CHARLES MINER DIES IN EXPLOSION

Fred Pike, night pumpman at the No, nine Robert Gage coal mine near St. Charles was instant ly killed some between eleven o'clock Tuesday night when he went on duty, and Wednesday morning of last week by the explosion of a quantity of dynamite or black powder which had been stored in the mine. The body was blown to shreds.

The explosion is thought to have been caused by an accidental fall of rock in a part of the mine where the miners had been working during the day and through which Pike passed in making his rounds. Veterans of the mine crew gave it as their opinion that the slight jar of Pike's footstep in going through the cut may have caused the slate to fall.

FLINT COMPLETES TASK OF CLEANING RIVER OF SEWAGE

The biggest civic improvement problem ever undertaken by Flint —the cleansing of Flint River of sewage pollution by establishment of a disposal system has been completed.

The system operates as follows.

Local sanitary sewers in all streets connect with big trunk line sewers that run directly to interceptors extending along the banks of the river on either side. The interceptors convey this sanitary sewage to the pumping plant, from where it is forced to the disposal plant.

The storm water is carried thru a separate system of local lines into trunk lines so big that an automobile can be driven through them and empty directly into the river..

Passing through the disposal plant the sewage is sixty per cent purified. Purification is completed by the restoration of oxygen thru the process of filtration and the use of chemicals.

The cost of the entire project, including the construction of intercepting sewers is about twenty five hundred thousand dollars.

GRAND RAPIDS NEW CARS HAVE 6 WHEELS

Following the winning of the Cof fin award by the Grand Rapids Railroad company for the greatest achievement during the past year in the development of street railtransportation, the city is to exper iment with another type of street car claimed to be far in advance of the newest equipment.

This latest product is constructed of duralumin reducing the weight to thirteen thousand five hundred pounds and consequently lowering the current requirements and is declared to be unique in the transportation field. It was manu factured after two years of conferences and co-operative labor of consulting engineers, officials of the Grand Rapids Railway company.

It is known as a six-wheel coach and is equipped with two twenty-six inch wheels in front and four of the same size in the rear, the latter being on a radical truck. A motor operates both front and rear sets. It is equipped with all the attachments designed for convenience. It has a seating capacity of thirty-two passengers, is twenty-six feet long, has rear exits, operates from the front end, has Westinghouse brakes and embodies several automotive features such as a differential and universal joint.

OBSOLETE LAW ACT WORTHLESS

The act passed by the nineteen twenty-seven legislature designed to rid the statute books of scores of obsolete laws, is legally worthless, it was discovered. The measure was adopted and signed by the governor, without carrying either an enacting clause or any mention of repealing the old acts except in the title. It represents nothing more than a list of old laws. The only way it could be made effective would be to carry a test to the supreme court and take the chance that tribunal might decide it was the intent of the legislature to repeal the laws and construe the act valid.

Obsolete law act, which was prepared by an assistant attorney gen eral and represented months of scouring musty statute books is listed in the nineteen twenty-seven acts as Act No. two hundred and eleven. As a matter of fact, the attorney general said it is not as act in the accepted form. Since it was passed and signed, however, the secretary of state was advised to give it a number and print it in the public acts pending a possible test.

The faculty measure carries the title "An act to repeal certain obsolete and inoperative laws. Under the title, without an enacting clause, more than one hundred and twenty-five old statutes, sections and resolutions are listed. But at the end there is nothing to indicate the act repeals them. Many of the laws the legislature thought it was wiping out so the statute books might be less cumbersome dealt with saloon regulations, old game limits and so forth. Others since have been consolidated or abolished.

What will you be doing at 65?

Statistics show that out of one hundred average men reaching the age of sixty-five, six are wealthy and are able to retire or enjoy the niceties of life without worry. Nine are self-supporting but are compelled to work. Eighty-five are dependent upon children, relatives or charity.

This is a sad state of affairs and could, in most cases be avoided.

Our booklet "Building An Income Fund" shows how easy it is for a man, during his active years, to lay by a fund which will provide a certain income in his old age. PLANE FALLS PASSENGER DIES

A frightened passenger a 'green' pilot crashed from one thousand feet to a field on the Max Kretchner farm near Mt. Clemens and when they pulled Harold Albright twenty, out of the wreckage he was dead.

The pilot, nineteen year old, Hollis Woodworth, who was making his third flight without an instructor was uninjured.

The boy recounted Monday how he had struggled with his friend and passenger when the latter became stricken and grabbed the joy stick, sending the plane into a nose dive.

"I gave her the gun to straighten up." Woodworth said, "but Albright was scared to death and he held on like he was mad. I cracked his knuckles to make him let go but he held on fast. The next thing I realized we hit the ground."

Woodworth said he was a student flier at the Curtis Wright flying field and had made only two solo flights before taking Albright into the air at the latter's request The struggle in the air ensued and Albright was killed.

The plane was an old army "Jenny" of the type condemned by the war department officials and sold to private organizations and individuals. It was the property of the Curtis Wright Flying club and organization of forty aviation enthusiasts who used it to qualify for pilot licenses.

JAIL BUILT SINCE SPRING IS HOUSING ITS FIRST "GUESTS"

East Lansing boasts a fire and police department, council and justice of the peace. Also a jail..

The jail has a history. Before it was completed this spring, it had long been a bone of contention in the college city. Two cell blocks and an equal number of cots constitute East Lansing's jail, which is located in the fire and police station combined. In the April election nineteen twenty six completion of the jail was the major issue.

After much struggle and disagreement the jail was at last completed and outfitted.. Months passed by, and the jail had no occupants. Practically the only arrests in the college city—even during the college year—are of reckless motorists and they pay fines.

Recently, however, the spell was broken. Two itinerant gentlemen, giving their names as Joe Moore and William Boyer, no address, were discoverid entering a vacant house in search of a place to sleep. They spent the night on the cots in the East Lansing jail as the first visitors..

TESTS OF WATER BRING WARNING

Water contamination in Michigan counties runs from nineteen and one tenth per cent to as high as sixty-four and five tenths per cent according to analysis made at the state department of health laboratories in Lansing of samples collected during a tour of the State of Michigan State college extension specialists this summer.

The samples were submitted for analysis by farmers from six counties visited by specialists from the college agricultural engineering and home demonstration departments, in order to determine the percentage of water contamination in rural communities. The experts urged that farmers take advantage of modern means in order to dispose of household sewage.

A total of five hundred and twenty five bottles were returned while three hundred and four farmers who took bottles for well water samples failed to send them in for analysis.

According to results announced twenty three and one tenth of the water examined coming from Barry county was unsafe; nineteen and one tenth of the water from Kent county; thirty-seven and five tenths per cent from Mecosta forty three and four tenths per cent from Newaygo; and sixty-four and five tenths per cent from Ottawa.

The number of water bottles given out in the counties is as follows Barry twenty-two; Kent one hundred and fifty; Mecosta one hundred and twelve, Midland, one hundred and fifty two; Newaygo forty; Ottawa, forty-nine.

Analysis by the state health department indicates that most of the unsafe water comes from counties that are low, and in which there are many shallow wells, indicating that deeper wells furnish a safe supply of drinking water.

FISH AT HATCHERY EAT OUT OF SPOON

To the average person a fish hatchery is just so many buildings and ponds and what is done there is given little thought, but not so with the sportsman.

Replete with thrills is the nursery of the finny tribe in the judgment of the out of doors man, and he can spend hours looking over the place with out once exhausting his curiosity of just what is being done in the matter of fish propagation.

Response of the fish to the dinner "bell" is also an interesting sight. When feeding time rolls around each day, the attendant goes forth to the ponds with a bowl of ground liver. He need not worry about all the fish getting a square meal, for no sooner than he strikes the side of the dish with a spoon than the hungry trout scurry across the pond to the feeding grounds. So hungry and so tame are they, that they often-times jump clear out of the water in a forward leap to out distance another of his kind who may be in his way of the first spoonful.

The trout are so tame that they will strike at everything that moves, many times to their own regret. In several instances, some of the fish have died as a result of swallowing a small stone,or some like substance thrown into the ponds by visitors.

the outskirts of the town after which it was named. A visit to this place fills one with wonderment at the work that is being accomplished, and the effect that work has on the trout which are "grown" there

One of the most amazing sights to be seen is the feeding of trout from a spoon and even from a person's bare hand. To the average persons it seems unreasonable but only a visit to this nursery is needed to convince the most skeptical. Feeding from the bare hand is an actual fact, and one that is repeated day after day.

Response of the fish to the dinner "bell" is another interesting sight. When feeding time rolls a-

Merrill C. Adams, vice president and secretary of the Union Trust company of Detroit, and Dr. W. R. Fruit of Flint were chosen to serve for three years representing the Detroit conference. Charles B. Warren. director of the Union Trust company; Charles R. Talbot president of the Peoples State Bank of Pontiac and Arnold H. Goss Detroit were re-elected for three years.

Howard Lawrence, secretary to Governor Green is the newly elected member representing the Michigan conference. Dr. F. L. Blewfield of Grand Rapids, was a re-elected member representing the same conference.

U. S. GOVERNMENT PLANTS TREES

How Michigan is reforesting and how the government is acquiring lands for reforestation purposes was sketched by Fred R. Johnson chief of planting for district No. two, United States forestry service on his tour of inspection of forestry work in the lake states.

The director who has his headquarters in Denver and who visits the Michigan forests every other year, pointed to activities near East Tawas as an example of the accomplishments. There a crew of sixty men is setting out two year old Norway pine seedlings in a four thousand acre tract this fall, he said. The crew which has set up a camp, cut furrows through the scrub and plants the seedlings in the trenches.

According to Director Johnson, about sixteen thousand acres have been planted in that section at a cost of three dollars and forty-five cents per acre. The program provides for the beginning next fall of an annual planting of five thousand acres. Land along both sides of the Au Sable river are being purchased by the government which recently obtained fifty thousand acres from Michigan State college.

The director, not long ago, stopped at Cass Lake, Minn., which boasts of the last tract of Norway pine of any size in the lake states. The government is collecting pine seedlings there. Seeds from the cones collected in that stand are being utilized in the Michigan and Minnesota nurseries, the East Tawas nursery alone having a capacity of ten million seedlings.

Squirrels, said the director, are of considerable assistance in the collection of seeds, especially in northern Michigan. A rate of two dollars a bushel is being paid Chippewa Indians for the cones and although the Indians pick some of the cones, they usually wait until the squirrels have collected them and stored them away and then dig them up and carry them to market.

TABLET FOR BLAIR GIVEN TO JACKSON

In memory of Austin Blair, governor of Michigan during the Civil war, a large boulder was recently dedicated on the site of his former home in Jackson now occupied by the Mercy hospital.

Miss Marjorie Greene, great grand daughter of the noted statesman, unveiled the marker, which was presented by Mrs. E. C. Taylor and received in the name of the city by F. R. Harris, city manager Sarah Treat Prudden chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution were the donors.

The inscription on the bronze tablet set in the stone reads; ,

"Upon this site stood the home of Austin Blair, one of the founders of the Republican party, and Michigan's war governor, eighteen sixty one to eighteen sixty-five.

He stayed up Lincoln's hands during the life and death struggle of the Republic.'

GIRL 16 CATCHES POISONOUS SNAKES SKINS AS TROPHIES

Sixteen year old Mildred Hartford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Hartford of Grand Rapids, has disproved the theory that girls are afraid of snakes, and she has three prized trophies captured during a visit to Gun lake.

These trophies are the skins of a five and one half foot rattler, a 3 foot water moccasin and a rattler with three rattles and a button she killed single handed.

Her interest in snakes was aroused when, in company with Miss Shirley Cunningham, twelve years old, she stumbled oved a large object which lay in the grass near there. Investigation disclosed a big blue racer coiled in a heap. With a small board broken from a nearby fence she clubbed the reptile until it was senseless. Because it was so heavy to carry, she coiled it around her neck only to discover that it wasn't dead. The snake kept winding its tail tightly around her neck.

The girl, who is a freshman at the South high school, carried the snake to the cottage where she dispatched it with an ax, skinned it and cured the skin.

Two days later she found several wriggling snakes in bushes near the lake and with the ax she killed the water moccasin and its skin was soon drying beside that of the rattler. During the next three days she encountered a lizard and killed a mean" green snake which she caught as it was robbing a bird's nest.

Then she found a rattler, switched it into submission, carried it by the tail to the cottage, unperturbed by its incessant snapping at a stick she carried and by its sissing At the cottage she killed it and skinned it.

MOTHER!

Look at Child's Tongue if Sick, Cross, Feverish

Look at the tongue mother. If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle thorough cleansing at once.

When peevish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat diarrhea full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup". and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless, "fruity laxative". they love its delicious taste and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company". Refuse any other kind with contempt.

Genuine BAYER ASPIRIN

SAY "BAYER ASPIRIN" and INSIST!

Unless you see the "Bayer Cross" on tablets you are not getting the genuine Bayer Aspirin proved safe by millions and prescribed by physicians for 25 years.

DOES NOT AFFECT THE HEART

Safe Accept only "Bayer" package which contains proven directions.
Handy "Bayer" boxes of 12 tablets
Also bottles of 24 and 100—Druggists.

Bible Reading in Schools

This week we received from far off New Zealand a letter purporting to have been written by Knox Smith, who is secretary of the Bible Schools Committee of New Zealand and he says he understands the State of Michigan is agitating the question of daily bible reading in the public schools He says:

"It may interest your readers to know that there is at present also a 'Bible in schools'' bill before the New Realand legislature that will also provide for the learning of the Ten Commandments which all creeds are agreed upon. The Education department is to draw up a syllabus of Scripture lessons to be read. You see then, that we are copying the American states, Pennsylvania, Alabama, Tennessee, New Jersey and Georgia, as these states have passed in recent years bible reading in school bills.

I would respectfully suggest that those interested should first take a vote of the parents and scholars. Your Board of Education can supply their names. This has been done here with success, and I have enclosed a copy of the ballot paper used, also statements in favor of Bible in schools made by our leading educationists. I notice that your American readers favor Bible reading in Schools and they state that Bible reading will aid in reducing juvenile crime. Bible in schools was made a political question here; the Reform party who favored it were returned to power by a large majority.

Trusting you will excuse this liberty,
Yours truly,
Knox H. Smith.
Secretary Citizens' Bible in Schools Committee

AN APPLE TWICE EACH DAY

"WHAT price health" is a question interesting to every person over or under thirty. From that vantage point the elders with hypertension, the various forms of so-called rheumatism, indigestion in its manifold expression are examples to avoid, the sturdy health of the youngsters must be preserved and a vital middle age prepared for and anticipated. Our laboratory workers and physicians say that plenty of milk, fresh vegetables and fruits is the answer to this question.

The milk and vegetables are gradually getting their due measure of attention but the fruits have not yet taken their proper and allotted place in our daily scheme of living. Fruit twice a day offers a pleasure appreciated by most palates in addition to high health insurance.

Under Many Guises

Let us see what can be done with one raw fruit and one canned fruit such as pineapple in the day's menu. If our raw fruit is orange juice or half a grapefruit to begin the day, the pineapple could appear in various guises for either lunch or dinner. Pineapple is used in fruit soups, in cocktails or compotes, in salads, desserts and more recently combined with meats or vegetables in the main course. Pineapple and lamb chops have become traditional fare for the person seeking a slimmer or less bulging silhouette. Sweet potatoes with pineapple would help the too slim acquire a suggestion of the curves so necessary for feminine beauty. Either would delight the average person seeking to maintain health and hold down weight.

At All Meals

A plate breakfast would dispense with raw fruit in favor of sausage with sautèed sliced pineapple and waffles served with pineapple syrup made by heating the pineapple syrup drained from the fruit with one cup of brown or three-fourths of a cup of white sugar.

Try tomatoes stuffed with pineapple for your main luncheon dish or to accompany that big juicy steak you are going to have for dinner one night this week. At luncheon a little left over chopped meat will add interest and satisfaction to this dish, but it is not necessary.

Tomatoes with Pineapple: A medium sized tomato per person is usually sufficient. For six servings, wash and remove the stem of the tomatoes, scoop out part of the pulp and combine with one-half cup of crushed Hawaiian pineapple and one and one-half cup of stale bread crumbs. Season with salt and pepper and fill tomatoes with mixture. Top with buttered bread crumbs and place in a baking pan with a little water. Bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven.

This Trained Army is at Your Command
One hundred and seventy thousand men and a vast equipment of engines and cars worth over $725,000,000 move to market the products of shippers on New York Central Lines.
From the men who walk the 12,000 miles of road, to the great corps of officers who are planning to meet your future transportation needs, each New York Central man is alert to serve you well.
Some idea of New York Central's task may be had from the equipment it now has in use—127,822 box cars, 5,753 stock cars, 116,706 coal cars, 1,013 coke cars, 7,588 flat cars, 464 container cars, 2,700 caboose cars, 13,862 refrigerator cars, and 5,100 passenger coaches. These are hauled by more than 6,000 locomotives.
But more vital in every shipper's mind are the cars that will be waiting on his siding when he wants them. Providing them when and where they are needed, and moving them promptly to destination, calls for constant cooperation between shippers and the railroad. The high character of New York Central Service is in no small measure due to this cooperation.

The Board of Trustees of the Congregational Church are making plans for the church's budget for 1928. The church is making a strong effort to clear up its few financial obligations. We are particularly anxious to liquidate the sum that has to do with the building mortgage. We should like all those who made pledges, whether in large or small amounts, to co-operate with us in our effort to discharge this debt Will you not, therefore, pay your pledge at the bank, or if you cannot now take care of it, please do so, if at all possible before the new year begins?

The Trustees of the Church express their appreciation for all the members, to all, both within and without the Church, who have in any way contributed toward liquidation of the mortgage, as far as it has been possible. It is our sincere hope that the Church's new year can be begun free of incumbrances of any kind.

Low Cost Temporary Fences

Quickly Erected with "RED TOP" Steel Posts

A GOOD many farmers right around here have found it pays to use temporary fences to provide temporary pasturage and to hog down a part of their corn. This saves the expense of husking, cribbing, reloading and feeding. Rustling for himself does a hog a lot of good aside from this saving.

We recommend "RED TOP" Steel Post as the most economical post for temporary fences. We have sold a lot of them for this purpose. "RED TOPS" are so easily driven with the One Man Driver. The fence wire is quickly attached. Post can be pulled and the fence moved over when new areas are to be cut off. The amount of labor and time required is surprisingly small.

SAVE MONEY

Build New Fences—Repair Old Ones Now

Our advice is to build your new fences and repair your old ones now. Prices on the "RED TOP" Post and fence are unusually low. You can make a real saving if you buy at this time. And fall is the best time to do your fencing, rather than trying to crowd it into the busy season next spring. You have so much other work to do then.

"RED TOPS" are easily and quickly driven no matter how hard and dry the soil. They have made fencing a fall job around here. They have a mighty strong service record behind them in this community. You take no risk when you buy them. We stand behind every "RED TOP" we sell with a guarantee.

Come in right away and get our low prices. If you have never used the "RED TOP," we will show you why we are able to guarantee it. It's the biggest time and money saver we have to offer.

Patrolman Albert Yarema of the harbormaster's force was patroling the lower end of Belle Isle, Detroit when caught sight of four men, landing from the basin of the Scott fountain, where they had anchored a rowboat equiped with an outboard motor.

Three of the men carried handbags, Yarema halted them and found that the trio with luggage could not speak English. The fourth man, Charles Dufriend was arrested on a charge of smuggling aliens. His three companions, Russians, were held for immigration authorities.

Better than Soda

Hereafter instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid gassy stomach, and relef will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine 'Phillips Milk of Magnesia' has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three time as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gasses. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowls and gently urges the souring taste from the system without purging. Besides it is more pleasant to take than soda. WONDER what a motorcycle stunt rider thinks about while in the air performing a "hair-raiser" like that pictured above. Probably doesn't think at all. Just hopes—for a "soft" landing. Anyhow, the rider is an Englishman who, to make the crowd hold its breath, put on this stunt during a motorcycle steeplechase. Nice pastime, eh.

CHURCH CLOSED BY OLD MURDER

For eighteen years a little church at Rattle Run, near Mt. Clemens has been fighting for existence, the spirit of the church pitted against the memory of a murder committed by a minister within its walls.

Recently the struggle ended and the structure is now abandoned, the stained glass windows broken, and the grass, waist high about its doors.

According to the story, a man named Gideon Browning, a decorator, was seen getting into a cutter driven by Rev. John Carmichael in mid-winter of the year of nineteen hundred and nine.

The man was to inspect the church to submit estimates on some decorations. The two reached the building, and neither was ever seen alive again.

Browning's coat buttons were found in the old stove. Police officers began a search for Carmichael. When they found him he had taken his own life.

For almost a year after the double tragedy, the church closed. then an effort was made to reopen services and bring together once more the large congregation that had made the old church one of the most prosperous in the vicinity.

The building was redecorated and it seemed for a while that all memories of the killing had been banished.

However the stories persisted. The attendance gradually dwindled until a mere handful of the old congregation remained. Recently, the last of the old guard sought newer churches and the church of Rattle Runn closed its doors for good.

U. OF M. EDUCATOR BAFFIN EXPLORES

Fancy a spot on earth, so desolate that it has remained one of nature's few fastnesses almost since the beginning of time; so bleak that neither man nor beast is able to survive on its chilly wastes; so unfit for any use as to make it wholly worthless. If a full understanding of such a condition can come within the scope of imaginatfor then, and only then, can one comprehend obstacles which the George Palmer Putman Baffin Island expedition faced, when, in the staunch ship Morrissey, it reached the southwest side of Baffin island

The land is described by Dr. Lawrence M. Gould, professor of geology of the University of Michigan, who recently returned from New York, following the arrival there of the expedition. Until the recent discoveries, this section of Baffin island was the largest known spot on the globe which remained unexplored.

The Palmer expedition settled everal issues geographical and geological, which up to this time had been clouded. First, it discovered that from five thousand to six thousand square miles which it it had been believed was land in reality is water. Next, it learned that the mesa, a formatiion heretofore known in arid lands exists in the northland as well, by finding the home of the well-known blue goose. Fourthly, it discovered one of the most rapid-running and dangerous tides that is known.

The land was a precambrian rock formation, on which grew only moss, used for food by occasional small herds of caribou. A short distance back from the shore was seen the mesa, rising to a height of from eight hundred to one thousand feet, and expressed by Dr. Gould as "an astonishing, wholly unexpected physiographic formation." It was flat, a tableland, a mesa, as perfect as those seen in the south.

The party strayed upon the home of the blue goose on its trip locating the breeding ground in a large swamp, after David Binney Putman son of the director, shot a specimen one afternoon. Countless thousands of the birds were seen. The blue goose known in this climate, migrates as far south as Louisiana in winter, and spends its summers in the Baffin island marsh.

Returning from the explorations the party stopped at the Hudson Bay company posts on the south side of the island, and became acquainted with the Eskimos spending the summer there. It learned that the Eskimos are the most perfect outdoor people in the world and even though starvation is 'just around the corner" are the happist people. Men and women chew tobacco and the trading of children is as common as the trading of wives in Greenland. The Eskimos visited by the party were altogether an interesting lot. Given trinkets, they radiated happiness, provided with cornmeal they "dived into it", figuratively and literally speaking.

The expedition returned home early in October, after being held up by storms which lashed the coast of Labrador for days, making progress impossible.

FLINT GIRL HEADS GROUP TO DRIVE OUT COLLEGE BLUES

Miss Olga Harren of Flint and her eleven captains have made life pleasant on the Michigan State Normal college campus for freshmen arriving at college. Miss Harren and her co-operators who will be teachers in a year or so, are members of the Big Sisters' organization, formed by the girls through the Woman's league.

Remembering the dismal days that were in store for them when they entered college, the co-eds banded together this year and met every freshman girl. There was not a freshman left alone during the first weeks of college.

Miss Harren's assistants include Lillian Faber, Detroit; Mildred Alexander, Ypsilnati; Helen Benson, Detroit; Florence Mann, Romeo; Esther Ewell, Ypsilanti; Doris Billman, Kaleva; Clara Baker, Ypsilanti; Barbara Devel, Elsie Gladys Bayler, Ypsilanti. Audrey Pray, and Marie Samson, Ypsilanti.

The nutting season comes to a close. Likewise football, electioneering and automobile touring.

SUITS TO CONDEMN LAND FOR WILDERNESS PARK

The Emmett wilderness park is now a certainty. This site lies at the tip of northwest Michigan in the Lower Peninsula and embraces several thousand acres. Condemnation proceedings have been started designed to acquire all the privately held lands now lying within the boundaries of the reserve. It is claimed that there are more deer in this area than any similar deer habitat in Michigan, and it is no uncommon sight to run into them on every abandoned railroad grade or logging road throughout the reserve. Hunting and trapping will be forbidden in this area.

NEWAYGO ACTS TO SAVE LAKES

The Newaygo County associated chapters of the Izaak Walton league gave impetus to the movement to establish county owned parks on several of the lakes and streams of Newaygo county at a meeting of representatives of the chapters.

A number of lakes were mentioned and the following were selected for special investigation, Crystal lake, near Wooster; Aetna Picnic Grove on White River; Coburn lake in Beaver township; Pine Grove on Sound lake Pettit lake east of Newaygo and [illegible] aygo lakes.

It seems to be only a matter of a few years when there will be no available lake frontage in the county. If the present rate of purchase continues making it impossible for residents of the county to have access to the lake. The present plan is for the county to own and maintain parks on several of the lakes so that such places may be kept open for the use of the public. It is expected that about twelve such places will be chosen.

The anarchist would abolish all law; the average citizen only those that interfere with his own liberty.

It's come to that place in the fur business where the word "squirrel' covers a multitude of skins.

WORK THEORY CURES INSANE

An old theory brought up to date is serving in an increasingly valuable manner at the Pontiac state hospital to restore metally disturbed patients to nearly normal conditions.

Creative work coupled with constructive activity is the secret of the occupational therapy work conducted by Miss Lelia Miller, graduate of the occupational therapy course at Kalamazoo State hospital.

Miss Miller's formula, which she says has proved of unusual efficacy, in helping to uncloud minds of patients, many of whom have been rather difficult problems for the institutional authorities, is as follows;

"The patient whose mind is kept busy is the more readily cured."

Sixty men and women patients comprise the human laboratory with which Miss Miller works.

Marvelous results have been shown since the course was inaugurated nineteen months ago.

It is not by observation alone that results are determined. Records of the hospital show that patients who are working in the class have a much better opportunity to recover their mental balance and that once discharged their chances of returning are greatly lessened.

Nowadays every man is entitled to life, liberty and an automobile in which to pursue happiness.

POSTHOLE UNVEILS RICHES IN GYPSUM

When Frank Schneider struck a white rock when digging postholes on his farm in Iosco County less than a year ago, little did he think that his accidental discovery would transform that portion of the county from a quiet farming community of no mean proportions

The white rock a sample of which he took to H. N. Butler of East Tawas, proved to be gypsum and of such unusual high quality that it attracted the attention and interest of the National Gypsum Company of Buffalo. Further drillings on the Schneider farm and adjacent land showed the district to be rich in gypsum deposits. Hundreds of acres in the vicinity apparently have almost unlimited quantities of this material which is helping to solve the shortage of lumber by substituting some of its manufactured products for sheating, and it is also largely used in cement, the manufacture of wallboard, plaster, kindred building material and as fertilizer.

In a community that boasted of no industrial activity except the D. and M. car shops at East Tawas, seventeen miles away and the mills and quarries of the U. S. Gypsum company at Albaster, about as far distant, a manufacturing plant, which with its gypsum holdings is valued into the millions, suddenly sprung into existence.

The name of Emery Junction, now a decadent town, but the importance in the early lumbering days was changed to National City and a boom in the sleepy village was looked for. Hoping that the finding of gypsum presaged the discovery of other minerals, leases for oil and minerals were taken by speculators on thousands of acres of land in this section of Iosco County. One group of men has oil leases on more than thirty thousand acres, but to date no oil has come to light—although one well--a dry one—has been sunk.

Seventy-two per cent of the earth's surface is covered with water.

STOCK COMPANIES ANNOUNCE NOVEMBER 10 NATION-WIDE INCREASE IN LIABILITY RATES

The companies assert that this action is necessitated on account of the increased number of accidents and the unreasonable claims and exaggerations. Collision losses have also greatly incheased the past year. Automobile owners now appreciate what a serious thing it is to drive a car. During the past ten years more than ten companies writing automobile insurance have either retired or quit. Some will make a low rate for a while and then find that they are not getting the proper rate.

OAKLAND STORE BOUGHT BY FORD

Henry Ford's passion for collecting buildings of historical legendry interest has removed from Oakland county another of its old-structures. The old Jacober store building, built long before the Civil war, a landmark at the intersection of Dixie highway and the principal residence street of the village of Waterford, was hauled to Dearborn and there will be reerected and restored.

It has gone the way of the old Novi hotel, a hostelry of fame in the pioneer days of this county. Torn down recently parts of the hotel interior, including a magnificent old carved stair railing, were taken to the motor magnate's estate at Dearborn to add to his collection of antiques.

The old Jacober store, erected by Horace Huntoon of Pontiac for many years was the center of village activities. In its spacious dance hall, on the second floor many a grand march and quadrille a "robber's" dance and the variations of the old square dances were enjoyed by the belles and beaus of the days of crinoline and "iron hats".

Of late years the hall had been used as a Maccabee lodge headquarters, but more recently it was converted into a storehouse.

FURNITURE LOOMS AS BIG RADIO SALES FACTOR

More and more cabinet work is supplying the deciding factor in radio sales. Frequently sales are made on the strength of the cabinet or console housing a set without need of any selling talk on the set itself. And in this there is evidence of the establishment of radio as a huge and permanent industry, for when the public begins to take a mechanical product without question and decide its purchase on a basis of the dress of that product, that product has no worries concerning its future.

Hence the furniture end of the radio business is rapidly becoming the most important end, inasmuch as the purely technical phase of radio has reached a point resembling that now prevalent in the automobile industry. The public has reached the conclusion that mechanically the leading radio set are as perfect as current knowledge and skill can make them, and it is safe to buy almost any good well known set. Thus the average radio purchase becomes very largely a matter of gratifying personal taste through the discovery and purchase of a console that lends to the home the note that is deemed correct by the home-owner.

No one in the industry is better prepared than Mohawk to meet this situation. Mohawk consoles for the 1927-28 season having been resigned by the most competent artists in wood that are available today, and no one conversant with good cabinetry can fail to appreciate their correctness and charm.

Because of this attention to the furniture side of radio Mohawk has equipped its dealers to win the approval of the dominant element in the purchase of home equipment—the woman.

A woman may not know a condenser from a jack, but she knows what she wants in furniture. And when the little woman tells her lesser half that she wants what she wants, he'll buy it whether the hookup suits him or not.

PARKVIEW MEMORIAL MAKING RECORD IN SALES VOLUME

Though on the market but seven weeks, Parkview Memorial property is setting new marks in sales volume for enterprises of its kind.

Investors from the entire state of Michigan have investigated the property and the solid organization behind it with the result that not only they but their friends bought—and in large quantities.

Detroit, of course, has taken to the idea by storm. Ever on the alert for civic improvements and developments that add to the beauty of a city, Detroit's civic conscious citizens have added to their support to the masses of shrewd investors who keep their eye trained f safe, and profitable investments.

Using the present as a basis, Parkview Memorial will be closed to investors, (except for resales at increased prices) in a fraction of the time required by projects of the kind in other progressive cities of the country, according to the Earl V. Frazier Corporation, fiscal agents for the property.

FOUR U. OF M. CLASS PRESIDENTS, WOLVERINES

Four of seven senior class presidents at the University of Michigan, elected at campus elections have their homes in Michigan. A Detroit student heads the senior class in the college of dental surgery. He is Williard Crain.

THEORY CLEARS BALL MYSTERY

An explanation of why a two thousand eight hundred pound ball moves about on its base in the base in the cemetery at Memphis, Michigan is offered by Salem P. Welman of Detroit.

"I was never in Memphis, Mich." he writes, "but you will find a rail road or other disturbing agent on the south side of this cemetery. Note the following principles; Inertia is that property or matter which causes a body at rest to remain at rest or if in motion to continue in the same direction, unless subjected to force from without.

"A smooth paper may be jerked from under a plate without distrubing the latter's position, because the motion of the paper has not had time to overcome the inertia of the plate. A ball or wheel will turn with less applied force than it will slide friction being less.

"Now, given the elasticity of the earth, the phenomenon at Memphis is explained as follows.

"Moving trains on the south cause the earth to vibrate northward, moving the base of the monument north by rapid impulses the elasticity of the earth brings the base back at the end of each impulse. The vibrations imparted by the train have sufficient velocity to move the base northward without moving the ball, like the paper slipping from under the plate. This leaves the ball a little to the south as regards its position on the base, although its center has not changed its direction from the center of the earth.

"At the end of each vibration, the elasticity of the earth brings the base back to its former position but with not sufficient velocity to slide under the ball, like the paper from under the plate; yet the sufficient velocity to overcome the inertia of the ball and impart motion to it. This imparted motion causes it to turn, which is 'easier' than to slide.

Necessarily it turns in a direction opposite to that of the return vibration, which is south and as it turns northward the spot on which it first rested appears on the south side. Each return vibration leaves the ball in its origional postion on the base, but the spot has traveled.

"If the ball has turned one-quarter of the 'way round' in twenty-five years, it will require seventy-five years more to complete the circuit, the business of the railroad and other conditions remaining the same, and it will keep on turning over its grave."

GIRL, 9, SETS PACE BY SWIM ACROSS LAKE

Clear lake is becoming a rival of the English channel.

Since Elinor Miller, nine year old daughter of Mr. ad Mrs. Frank Miller of Buchanan swam across the lake from the Fuller Beach to the shore of Clear Lake woods, a distance of a mile and a quarter, more than a dozen youthful natators have attempted to equal Elinor's feat, but only two have been successful.

UNIVERSITY AIDS IN ECONOMIC SURVEY

Co-operaton between the Department of Conservation of Michigan and the University of Michigan was demonstrated during the summer in the land economic survey work under the direction of P. S. Lovejoy, State game refuse director.

The Department of Conservation last spring requested the university to lend several men to work on the land problems of Michigan. Prof. K. C. McMurry of the geography department, and two other members of the University staff, were selected. The Board of Regents granted the necessary money for the undertaking.

In conjunction with department men. Prof. McMurry's party covered more than two hundred thousand acres in northern Michigan in an experimental survey.

Considerable progress was made in working out new methods of rapid mapping which is essential to many quick surveys. Information was obtained on exchanged land, land returned and land needed by the state for park and game sanctuaries. The finished survey furnished a considerable amount of data which will be available for the various departments of the state in the future.

McMurry's party spent three months in field work with the Department of Conservation.

SANTO HOARDED 15 YEARS; THEN ENGINE— DEATH

Fate has decreed that Santo Macartana, Grand Trunk railroad section hand shall never see his wife and two children in Italy for eleven years.

Sato left his family fifteen years ago, promising to return when he had made his fortune. Setting ten thousand dollars as the goal he moved into a box car at Marshall and lived as cheaply as possible.

When ninety-seven hundred dollars in the bank and plans completed to go to Italy early next year Santo was struck and fatally injured by a switch engine. The money will be forwarded to his family in Italy.

REFUGE FOR THE AGED OPENED WITH DINNER

Days of lavender and old lace, when the residents of early Flint assembled at the groaning Thanksgiving Day festive board were recalled last week, when an old fashioned dinner was served at the stately home on East Kearsley street, Flint, which once was the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Whaley.

All the charm which marked the home has been restored since the will of Mrs. Whaley, who died three years ago, designated it should be made into a residence for ladies and named the McFarlan Home, in honor of her parents Mr. and Mrs. Alexander McFarlan.

Within recent weeks the old ladies who are making it their comfortable quarters and Thanksgiving was chosen as an appropriate time by the board of directors of prominent Flint people for a stately dinner to celebrate its new use.

Mrs. Whaley was the widow of Robert J. Whaley, pioneer banker of Flint. In her will she made generous provision for the founding and maintenance of the home. Her husband, in his will, created the Donald McFarlan Whaley Memorial Foudation, a home for boys, which was opened some time ago.

ALBION MAN FORSEES RECOVERY OF EUROPE

Dr. Royal G. Hall, head of the department of history of Albion college, who was one of thirty-six in the American Seminary that spent ten weeks the past summer in Europe, studying economic conditions with a view to international relations is optimistic over the recovery of the countries overseas General conditions, he said are improved and the whole continent especially Germany seems to be recovering rapidly. England, however, has a difficult problem in its readjustment, he declared. The group visited six countries.

He who wrote "Beauty comes ye scarce know how" might have been greatly helped had he known that we spent one hundred forty million dollars for cosmetics in this country last year.

THREE COUNTIES IN STATE VISITED BY MEXICAN BEAN PEST

The Mexican Bean Beetle expected in Michigan this fall, has appeared in three southeastern counties of the state.

Macomb, Oakland and Monroe counties.

The pest of field and garden beans is khaki colored and has a number of round black dots on the wing covers.

The beetle spends the winter in the adult stage, and in the spring lays eggs on the foliage of plants that are suitable for its food. Green portions of the bean plant are its first choice of foliage.

SPARTANS WORKING TO PERFECT TEAM WITH CHAMPS GONE

Track is an all year sport at Michigan state as is evidenced by the two score or so of youths who work out regularly in the Spartan stadium.

State coaches are conducting an extensive search for sprinters to replace Alderman and Grim. Lang, Kroll and Henson all letter winners from last year's championship outfit, will carry the brunt of the burden in the dashes.

State seems fairly well fortified in track this year, although Alderman and Grim, and their usual first places, will be missed. In three years of competition Alderman was never defeated in dual meets in either the one hundred, two hundred and twenty or broad jump.

The State distance squad has, of course, turned its attentions to cross country except for Lewis Hackney, half miler, who works out with the track team in the stadium. Hackney broke his leg last winter in the one thousand yard run in the Michigan A. A. U. championships, and he still favors the leg slightly.

A. A. P. A. Circularizes State Legislators

Within the past two months the members of the state legislatures, have received a circular letter from the manager of the Political Operations of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. In it he purports to list certain catascrophes which were the direct result of prohibition. Most of the sharges are so extravagant or preposterous as to be undeserving of consideration. An example of their absurdity is the statement that the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act have caused the "substitution of the Prohibition Bible" for the "Holy Bible." The personal liberty representative does not undertake to explain what the "Prohibition Bible" is; certainly it is not listed in any of the catalogues of publishing houses that deal in Bibles; the American Bible Society, which specializes on that piece of religious literature, does not carry it; it is not on the shelves of the public libraries, nor is it used in any of the churches. We would be glad to be informed by the A. A. P. A. representative where this unique literary production may be secured.

Equally ridiculous is the charge that prohibition "has brought loss of prestige and spiritual influence of the evangelical churches." Recent and most convincing statistics are at hand to answer the charge. The growth of the churches in the last few years, according to the reports of the Federal Council of Churches, has outstripped the increase in the population of the United States. The Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches says:

"The twenty-five principal denominations in the United States had a growth in total membership of from 23,638,597 in 1916 to 27,466,490 in 1926." "There was never a time in the history of the country," says Dr. McFarland, "When so many people belonged to the church; never a time when a larger percentage of the population were church members."

If the ranks of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment were growing one-tenth as rapidly as are those of the churches, they would have more hope of winning out in their ignoble ambitions.

Another charge, the folly of which is self-evident, is that prohibition has caused "a constant depreciation of farm values since 1920 to which the prohibition policies of the Government have been a contributing factor." When this statement was submitted to Mr. L. J. Taber, master of the National Grange, he laughed it to scorn and said:

"That the nation has suffered from six years of rural depression no one will deny, but to claim that the Eighteenth Amendment has anything to do with this depression is ridiculous and unfounded. The reverse is true."

A sample of the glaring mis-statements made in these charges is the one that declares that prohibition has led to the general tabooing of the dry American line passengar ships. These ships have been crowded to capacity. On one of her recent arrivals the "Leviathan" carried 2,700 passengers, a record list since the pre-war days. General Dalton, president of the Merchant Fleet Corporation, in a recent interview told the world that the United States Lines ships carry more passengers now than in years past despite the absence of liquor bars, and adds: "Personally I would not approve of restoring bars on the United States ships even if authorized by law."

That prohibition has developed bootleggers, may be answered by a quotation from the Vancouver (B. C.) Sun, to the effect that in Vancouver, under government control, "There are ten times as many bootleggers as there are clergymen doctors, lawyers or engineers, and the city, is at present a bootleggers' heaven."

The New York Times explains the bootleggers when it says, "Now, that the gangsters can no longer make a living by serving politicians at the polls, and now that mayhem, slugging and murder are only profitable in the case of strikes, the young and lawless bloods of the East Side have turned their attention to bootlegging."

As to the multiplication of courts said to be due to prohibition, Chief Justice Taft made public, October 1, this statement from the Senior Circuit Judge at Washington: "Trials of criminal cases, especially of the prohibition and anti narcotic cases, are occupying much less of the time of the judges than they were two years ago. Criminal cases are being disposed of nearly as fast as they come in, and prohibition cases are being expedited. There remain yet a congestion of Civil cases."

Sheriff's Weekly Report, Week Ending December 4th, 1927

Louis Castenedo who pleaded guilty of selling beer to Waldron high school students, paid his fine and costs of $175 and was released.

On Monday, Hugh Duncan of Montgomery, who was arrested on Friday night, charged with illegal possession and transportation of 4 gallons of "Moon", was arraigned before Justice Fitzsimmons. He waived examination and was bound over to January term under bonds of $1000. The bond was furnished and Duncan released.

On the same day, at the same court, C. R. Kidd of Battle Creek, who drove the white truck while under influence of intoxicants, pleaded guilty and drew a sentence of $100 fine and costs of $12.55 and 10 days in jail; 60 days if fine and costs are not paid in ten days.

Alfred Mingus, who broke and entered the Montgomery Freight House and who was last week sentenced to from 1½ years to 15 years in Jackson prison was taken to that institution on Monday.

Late Monday night Geo. Nesbit whose farm home north of Montgomery was raided Friday night, was arrested on a warrant charging him jointly with Era Hutton with illegal possession and sale of liquor. Nesbit was arraigned Tuesday before Justice Aldrich, demanded examination which was set for Dec. 7 and was released on bond of $1000. Mr. Hutton, however was not so fortunate, his bond of $1000 having not yet arrived he is being held here.

C. F. Howard was arrested for the Police Department of Lansing on warrant for grand larceny. He was surrendered to that office on Wednesday.

Tuesday night the Sheriff had a meeting of the Deputies, where the Dog question was discussed. Beginning on Monday the 5th, all dogs at-large in violation of existing quarantine conditions must be shot. We are going to make a complete job of this by so doing that many ownerless "pups" will be disposed of.

On Wednesday the Coroners jury, called to investigate the death of Chas Miller of Montgomery found that Mr. Miller came to his death due to the reckless driving of Era Hutton; witnesses were called from Montgomery and vicinity.

Glen Kane who was arrested on Saturday at the request of his mother was sent to Jackson on Wednesday from which county he is on parole.

On the same day Francis Byrd who is on parole from our own County was turned over to us by the Police Department of Lansing. He is charged with the illegal possession of liquor.

Carl Harris, John McGovern, and Angelo Comito were sentenced to this jail from 30 days to 3 months all for violation of the liquor law. These men also drew fines ranging from $100 to $1000.

Prisoners in the county jail 12. Unsentenced 2. Sentenced 10. Total 12.

Muskrats Keep Fish Alive

Although muskrats are generally fair game for the trapper, amateur or professional, and great quantities of their skins are sold annually, they are sometimes protected because their habits are useful to their protectors. Vernon Bailey, of the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture, found that at Gravel Lake near the fish Hatchery in North Dakota trapping muskrats was prohibited. In this region near the Canadian border winter cold is severe. The lake had been stocked with fish, and muskrats were encouraged to build their houses along the shores in order to keep breathing holes open to prevent the ice from closing up so completely as to smother the fish. As a result both fish and muskrats were multiplying rapidly, and the muskrats had become comparatively tame.

At the fish hatchery itself the muskrats were less popular, because a dam had been constructed there to form a hatching pond and the muskrats were in the habit of digging into the dam and letting the water out through the burrows they made.

Where the muskrats prove annoying it usually is easy to dispose of them, when State law permits, through trapping. In suitable localities it has been found profitable to grow them commercially on muskrat farms.

Miss Belle Louise Barnstead, Hillsdale County Nurse, is in charge of the preliminary arrangements for the Christmas seal chest clinic which the Michigan Tuberculosis Association will conduct at the court house at Hillsdale on Tuesday December 13. This free chest clinic which is made possible by the sale of Christmas seals is held to give the people of Hillsdale County the opportunity for a free chest examination. Dr. J. W. Toan and Dr. E. R. VanderSlice, chest specialists and staff examiners of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, will conduct the examinations. Because of the contagious nature of tuberculosis, direct contact with tuberculosis persons is dangerous. For this reason persons who have come in contact with a case of tuberculosis are particularly urged to attend the clinic. The symptoms of tuberculosis are a persistent cough, a continued tired feeling, loss of weight and an afternoon fever. All of these symptons are not necessarily present in the incipient cases and the presence of any one them warrants a chest examination. Children under 16 years of age should be accompanied by either of their parents.

The new home economics short course will cover a period of eight weeks and will feature practical work in food selection and preparation; selection, design, and construction of clothing; household administration, planning, furnishings and decoration; ornamental horticulture, gardening, and home marketing; millinery, child study, home care of the sick, poultry and gymnasium.

Jekyll and Hyde of the Air

Little did William Shakespeare realize, when he produced his undying classics 400 years ago, that some day one man would take all the speaking parts in an entire scene and make himself heard in thousands of homes the country over. Anthony Wons, Shakespearean artist at WLS, the Sears Roebuck Station, Chicago, has been doing just this thing for the past two seasons with increasing success.

Mr. Wons' association with Shakespeare's works, which dates back years before the advent of radio, is a vital factor in the success of his radio broadcasting. He is thoroughly familiar with all types of Shakespeare's characters and portrays the cringing Shylock with the same fidelity of character that he does the dynamic Antony or the philosophical Hamlet.

It is interesting to know that a great portion of Mr. Wons' mail comes from school teachers who are using the Shakespearean broadcasts from WLS in supplement to the English course in the classroom with remarkable success.

MEN'S MEET SUCCESSFUL

Cardinal and Admiral Among Guests of Honor

Unanimously declared to have been the most successful meeting in the history of the organization, the seventh annual convention of the National Council of Catholic Men recently closed in Detroit. More than 1,400 persons, including Patrick Cardinal Hayes, Archbishop of New York, the Rt. Rev. Joseph Schrembs, D.D., of Cleveland, and the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D.D., of Detroit, attended the closing meeting.

A resolution of encouragement to the Catholic laymen of Mexico was adopted as were resolutions denouncing contraception and sterilization of mental defectives. Condemnatory talks against sterilization were made by Dr. James J. Walsh, of New York, and Dr. H. H. McClellan, formerly superintendent of the Dayton Hospital for the Insane and a fellow of the American Psychiatric Association.

The convention was a three-day meet, closing with a banquet at the Book-Cadillac Hotel at which Cardinal Hayes, Admiral William S. Benson, U. S. N., retired, and U. S. Senator Henry F. Ashurst, of Arizona, spoke.

FATHER DILLON PRIEST 25 YEARS

Well Known Battle Creek Cleric Celebrates Silver Jubilee

BATTLE CREEK.—The Rev. Fr. David L. Dillon, pastor of St. Philip's Church, here, recently celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood by singing a solemn high Mass. The sermon was delivered by the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D.D., Roman Catholic Bishop of Detroit.

Father Dillon, since assuming the pastorate of St. Philip's Church, several years ago, has become widely known as a leader in religious and civic affairs of the city. He is the first pastor in Battle Creek to celebrate a silver anniversary as a priest in this city.

Prior to coming to Battle Creek, Father Dillon was assigned to churches in Mt. Clemens, Clinton and Fenton. He was ordained priest in Detroit by the late Bishop John S. Foley, after completing his theological studies in Mount St. Mary's Seminary, Cincinnati, O. Father Dillon also attended Assumption College, Sandwich, Ont.

CADILLAC PRIEST TRANSFERRED

CADILLAC.—The Rev. Fr. L. E. Gilroy, assistant pastor of St. Ann's Church, Cadillac, was recently appointed assistant pastor of St. Francis' Church, Grand Rapids. Father Gilroy will also act as instructor in the Catholic central high school of that city.

PRIEST BECOMES TEACHER

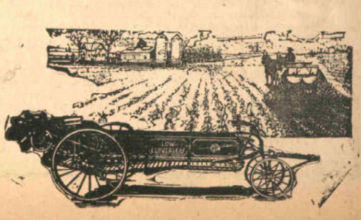
MANISTIQUE. — The Rev. Fr. L. J. Specht, assistant pastor at St. Francis de Sales Parish for six years, left the city recently to assume his new duties as a faculty member of St. Norbert's College, De Pere, Wis. Father Specht's departure is due to a decision to dispense with an assistant at the local church which, in the future, will be in the sole charge of the Rev. Fr. B. J. Schevers.

WINS SPELL-DOWN PRIZE

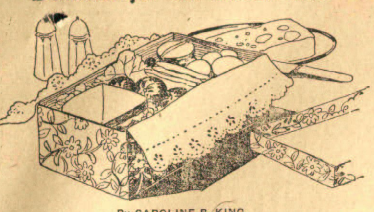
GLADSTONE. — Olga Stanich, a Seventh Grade pupil in All Saints' parochial school here was awarded the first prize in a recent spelling contest held at the Marquette County Fair. The contest was conducted by Prof. C. C. Wiggins, of the Northern State Teachers' College. Representatives from ten schools in the county participated.

Last year the Michigan Tuberculosis Association, realizing the necessity for a school nurse in communities that could not support a full-time nurse, established a part-time health service.

Christmas seals help to support this service which teaches the children how to retain health.



Dainties for the Lunch Box



By CAROLINE B. KING

Culinary Expert and Lecturer on Domestic Science

Switzerland Scones:

Make a baking powder biscuit dough as usual, roll thin and cut into rounds. On half the rounds place thinly sliced Switzerland cheese, sprinkle with paprika and cover with the rest of the rounds, press together lightly, brush the top biscuit with milk and bake in a hot oven. These are also delicious served hot, with salad.

Stuffed Eggs:

Boil the required number of eggs twenty minutes. Then drop them into cold water. When cool remove the shells. Halve the eggs lengthwise, and remove yolks. Mash these well, adding a little melted butter, salt and paprika. Then for each egg add a teaspoonful of grated Swisse cheese and enough mayonnaise to moisten; add also a few shreds of green pepper or parsley. Fill the eggs with the mixture and put the halves together, roll in wax paper, twisting the ends tightly.

Southern Gingerbread:

Mix together one-half cupful of sugar and one cupful of molasses. Add half a cupful of softened butter or lard and mix well. Then add one teaspoonful each of cinnamon and ginger, a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in half a cupful of hot water, half a cupful of sour milk or cream, and two and one-half cupfuls of sifted flour. Beat all hard, then add two well beaten eggs. Bake in a moderate oven and cut in squares. Serve warm with Switzerland cheese.

Fig and Cheese Sandwiches:

Split the figs and place thin slices of Switzerland cheese between. Then place between slices of buttered graham bread. Serve with a banana and a glass of milk.

Swiss Salad Dressing:

Place in a fruit jar with a tightly fitting cover one-half cupful of oil, one-quarter teaspoonful of pepper, one-quarter teaspoonful of mustard, one-quarter teaspoonful of paprika, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of sugar, four tablespoonfuls of vinegar and one-fourth cupful of Switzerland cheese cut in tiny pieces. Put the cover on the jar and shake vigorously. Serve with apple and nut salad, or use for moistening lettuce leaves for sandwiches. The jar containing the dressing may be carried to a picnic, and shaken well just before serving.

Orange Gems:

Cream one cupful of sugar with one-half cupful of butter. Add the yolks of two eggs. Sift one and one-half cupfuls of flour, 2 teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Mix alternately with one-half cupful of milk to the creamy mixture and flavor with grated orange rind. Fold in the beaten whites of two eggs. Bake in muffin tins and cover with orange icing. Sprinkle a little grated bitter chocolate over the icing before it hardens.

Keep Your Batteries Up

A special article in the Successful Farming warns people to look after their batteries whether in the automobile or on the Radio. It goes on to say: "Many of the noises and poor reception of most radios can be traced directly to batteries. Rundown cells or poor contacts will cause the same noise as static but the letter gets the blame. In order to get the best reception the batteries must be in the best possible condition. Test them often any wet battery below 1225 on the hydrometer, is out of order and should be re-charged at once. All B-batteries should be replaced if they show 15 percent below normal voltage."

The top of the A battery should be kept clean, especially around the contacts. It is a good plan to scrub the top thoroly with a stiff brush and water. Keep the cell covers on tightly to prevent any of the wash water from entering the cells. Unless special binding posts are provided, contact to the terminals should be made with heavy clips made for the purpose.

When the battery is cleaned and the clips are in place, a coating of vaseline will effectually prevent corrosion. This will keep the battery clean. If the A battery is kept near the set, a glass baking dish under it will save the floor or rug from damage by acid leakage.

It is often convenient in farm homes supplied with private lighting plants to use the large cells for A battery supply. There are two methods of this. The first is to run two wires directly from the set to the battery, tapping off six or eight volts, depending on the size of wire, length, and number of tubes to be supplied.

This system, however, tends to run down part of the battery faster than the rest, and involves considerable extra wiring. The second method, which is the better of the two, consists of plugging directly into the thirty-two-volt source at the most convenient outlet.

One of the wires is then attached directly to the set. The other is connected thru a lamp socket to the remaining A battery terminal For a five tube set, using all 201A type tubes, a forty-watt lamp should be used to cut the line voltage to the proper value.

The type of set used will determine the wattage of the lamp to be employed. In general, the smaller the current required by the filaments in the set, the smaller will be the wattage rating of the bulb to be used. The correct value may soon be determined by experiment or better, by the use of a voltmeter

The B batteries now on the market are a very satisfactory and economical source of high voltage. The larger batteries, while more expensive at first, are the most economical in the long run. Their longer life soon makes up for their greater initial cost.

Keep the B batteries in a cool place. Their life is greatly reduced when they are exposed to the sun or when placed near a stove or radiator. Never use one dead battery along with fresh ones, as this will lessen the life of the better batteries. The A and B batteries are the power plants of the set. Keep them in good condition at all times.—A. G. W., Iowa.

You Cannot Play in Mud and Stay Clean

It does not require an alarmist to give serious thought to the great number of divorces taking place in this country and to reflect upon the ultimate outcome of this growth Boiled down, it simply means the utter destruction of the home and when the home has been destroyed chaos and darkness follow.

What is the cause of divorce? Or, rather, what influences are largely responsible for bringing about domestic troubles that end in divorce proceedings? While there are many causes, possibly the greater number of divorces can be traced back to a lack of "home loving"; the desire to go "on parties" with mixed couples; a wild desire to "have a good time" and carouse around until the wee hours of the dawn. A too-free intimacy with persons of the opposite sex; drinks together, and would-be innocent little squeezes and hand pressures.

You can't play in mud and come out clean.

The man or woman who participates in these wild orgies; the couple who "thrill" at the prospects of a "wild party" where husband and wife momentarily indulge in improprieties and while under the influence of liquor laugh in a light-hearted manner as petting is exchanged by all—this couple is courting certain disaster and the walls of a once happy home are crumbling down upon their heads.

"As you sow, so must you reap," and as surely as there is a sun in the heavens, the married couple that indulges in these intimacies with other couples will have to pay the price, and, invariably this price ends at a divorce court.

His Scales Criticized

From an Ohio paper we quote the following advertisement which appeared recently and is unique if not downright comical: "Notice:—A man in our town has been spreading rumors to the effect that our scales are not weighing correctly. Our scales were tested a short time ago and again to-day. Both times the Sealer of Weights and Measures told us it was one of the most accurate scales he ever tested. Now if we hear any more of this, we will surely have the party prosecuted to the full extent of the law and for damages to our business. Oh yes, we know the color of your hair, for the Sealer of Weights and Measures told us. Lewis Yearling Proprietor Grover Hill Milling Company"

This is certainly good reading for most of our citizens, and we wonder sometimes if some business men really feel they are being imposed upon by people who start false reports concerning their practices. If there are scales in North Adams which do not weigh correctly somebody should get after them and have the matter looked into. We presume with the present practice of employing a man to attend to these delinquent scales, there is not much chance for a variation in weights. However, there is a chance to go wrong on these things.

Watch Your Title

Detroit Automobile Club issues a warning to motorists throughout the state to look up their titles carefully, and be prepared to show them when they apply for licenses. It is claimed there are hundreds of second hand cars purchased recently which have no lawful titles going to their owners. Buyers of second hand cars are told that the title issued by the state is not always fully sufficient as any lein on such car does not show on the title and further than this the Club has found that thieves have stole cars many times and by juggling engine numbers have furnished what looked like a perfectly good title to a car, but was in reality not its title but belonged to some other machine. The State Department has been hard at work for weeks trying to straighten up the records and clear up many of these deals which have come about by crooks buying and selling, but there is apparently no way of remedying the situation and officials are anxious to pass a law compelling the registering of all collateral notes, mortgages and liens on cars of whatever nature in the secretary of state's office.

The club points out that a man residing in Detroit might purchase a car on the time payment basis and the chattel mortgage be recorded here in accordance with law. The application for title to this car might be made out so that no lien was shown against it. A short time later the purchaser might move to Flint, sell the car there, giving a clear title to the purchaser, who would effect a transfer through the state department. At some future date the finance company who had a lien against it might locate it and recover it from the second purchaser.

This condition of affairs, according to the automobile club makes it necessary for every purchaser of a used car to either trace the ownership of the car from the dealer who originally sold it down thru every ownership or if purchased from a dealer, to get a written statement from that company to the effect that the car is free and clear of all liens.

In this connection, the club also points out that it is extremely dangerous for a private party who has no facilities for investigating matters of this kind to purchase a used car from another individual unless that person is personally known to the purchaser, or the car is bought from a reputable company.

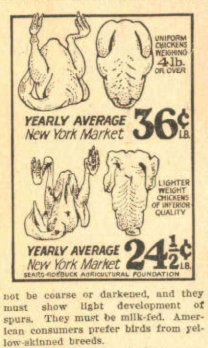
Quality Pays in Poultry Market

ADDING practically 50 per cent to the market value of a product by extra attention paid to improving its quality has the ring of a "get-rich-quick" proposition. Yet, that is the premium which the finest quality roasters commanded over the lowest grade during the past twelve months, according to the Sears Roebuck Agricultural Foundation.

The best fresh killed roasters, or young birds weighing four pounds or over, received in the New York wholesale market in the year ending September 30 brought an average of 36 cents a pound. During the same period, roasters were received which were so lacking in market quality that they could be sold for an average of only 24½ cents a pound.

To command top prices, birds must be plump and thick-fleshed with rather short, thick legs and wings. They must be young, hence their flesh must not be coarse or darkened, and they must show light development of spurs. They must be milk-fed. American consumers prefer birds from yellow-skinned breeds.



UNIFORM CHICKENS WEIGHING 4lb. OR OVER
YEARLY AVERAGE New York Market 36¢ LB.
LIGHTER WEIGHT CHICKENS OF INFERIOR QUALITY
YEARLY AVERAGE New York Market 24½¢ LB.
SEARS-ROEBUCK AGRICULTURAL FOUNDATION

Part of the premium is due to careful dressing and packing. First-grade birds are free from such imperfections as torn skin, bruises, blood spots, and pin feathers and are packed in boxes of a dozen birds of uniform size and color. Feed in the crops or dirty feet, heads or bodies, will lower the grade.

Farmers located near the cities and large towns can obtain some of the premium which consumers are willing to pay for superior birds through selling on roadside markets, booths in city markets, customer routes on which weekly deliveries are made, or contracts with grocers and butchers catering to high-class trade, or with restaurants, hotels and clubs. Farmers who must depend on distant markets usually find it best to pen-fatten their birds, using dry grain instead of the soft milk mashes employed in crate fattening. Express shipments of live birds fed in this way will command a premium from those wholesalers in the large markets who have a high-class trade and who are always looking for poultry which will fill their requirements.

Glyde S. Wertz, North Adams

We are told that large numbers of toads are reported this season in all parts of the country and scientists tell us this is the natural result of the wet season. It is claimed that at a certain place on the Dallas California Highway near Klamath Lake in Oregon the residents had the peculiar experience of seeing thousands of these toads in a body migrating and crossing the road. Passing automobiles killed them by the thousand, yet more continued to arrive. This is the first time this has occurred and the novel sight was witnessed by a number of state officials who happened to be passing at the time. The history of the toad is a peculiar one. Early in the spring as soon as a spurt of warm sunshine comes he emerges from his winter quarters where he has hibernated all winter, and crawls to the shallow edges of some pond or lake and the female toad begins laying 4,000 to 15,000 eggs. These eggs lie in the water and hatch inside of 9 to 12 days. These eggs become merely common tadpoles same as frogs. This stage lasts from 50 to 65 days, when the little tadpole drops his tail and assumes the form of a toad, crawling out on the land and this is the tender period for literal thousands of them never get much further because they are either gobbled by natural enemies or die of exposure before they can get inside some burrow of protection, hence after all few of them grow to adult size. It is not known just how long a toad lives but lots of us are positive we see the same toads around the door step or barn for at least two years. Whether they live after this we do not know. Their food is bugs and flies and they have the most complicated spearing apparatus on the tongue possible to attain. This tongue is long and slim and when a fly or bug gets anywhere within range the tongue darts out and hooks him in quicker than a flash and you can hardly see its movements, but it usually gets its prey.

MAKE YOUR CHRISTMAS DINNER COLORFUL

GREEN and red, barbaric you say? Possibly so for your wardrobe, but not for nature or Christmas. Would you plan a green and silver Christmas, or a red and white or red and black one, instead of our colorful holly feast? When the house is gay with wreaths of holly and ground pine and festive with red ribbons and streamers, and the tree flaunts its miniature lights, the table set for the Christmas dinner must be gorgeous too. The snowy linen forms a background against which favors and decorations show up in all their glory. This is an occasion when the food should echo the color scheme, so we must plan our menu most carefully. The traditional dinner is similar to the Thanksgiving spread, though many people vary it to the extent of serving duck or goose. (We had to stop right here to say that so long as Dickens' "Christmas Carol" is read and loved, goose for Christmas will remain many people's symbol of peace and good-will and the joy of Christmas cheer.)

Decorate the Table

For table decorations some people prefer the poinsetta plant, a small living Christmas tree, red roses or the basket of fruits and nuts made festive with holly branches or twined with ground pine. The average table does not permit more elaborate structures if there is to be table service, and what child would wish to be deprived of seeing the rite of carving, and choosing the drumstick, wing or gizzard which takes his particular fancy, for the sake of a pretty winter landscape or the story of the nativity even in all its charm.

Snappers, in red and green, yielding caps of every shape and color add to the general festivity. If fortune favors, father draws a baby cap with pale blue streamers and mother a black skull cap such as baldheaded men wear to keep off drafts. A pirate hat for John and a chef's cap for Mary, and the meal is off to a joyous start.

Guests do not matter much to the children, but of course there must be some in accordance with the spirit of the day and to help eat the dinner we are about to plan.

What We Shall Eat

We shall wish either an appetizer or a soup, and nothing is much better than a pineapple and grapefruit cocktail colored green with creme de menthe, modern style, and garnished with a maraschino cherry. A can of crushed Hawaiian pineapple and one of grapefruit sections will make large servings for eight or medium for twelve.

The main course follows, and we are going to have a goose such as made glad the heart of Tiny Tim. Apple and pimiento stuffing will be just about right for this bird, though if we had served a thin soup or canapè in place of the cocktail, pineapple and pimiento would have been suggested. Because of its ability to aid in protein digestion, pineapple is as sensible to serve with goose as with pork. For the apple and pimiento stuffing, chop two goose livers with one large onion, add salt and pepper and simmer in a little water until tender. Drain off the liquid, reserving it. Chop five large apples and add to the liver and onion mixture together with one cup of bread crumbs and one-half cup of chopped pimientos. Add enough of the liquid to moisten and stuff the goose as usual. One No. 2½ size can of sliced pineapple cut in pieces would be needed in place of the apples, if the pineapple and pimiento stuffing were used. Currant jelly is considered a little better with goose than cranberry, but either would do.

Mashed potato is necessary if one wants good giblet gravy, and candied sweets are usually served also. They are delicious when combined with either apple or pineapple. If you have used a regular bread stuffing for the goose, try either of these combinations. Vegetables are so much a matter of personal taste that any green one you like can be used. Chopped beets on watercress and endive is a gay salad. And did you know that beets and pineapple made a good salad combination? Put that away in your mind for another meal.

Both mince pie and plum pudding are improved by the addition of pineapple or its syrup. The pineapple syrup left from the stuffing can be thickened with egg yolks and so made into a delicious sauce to serve over the plum pudding. It is both less rich than hard sauce, and better liked by the average person.

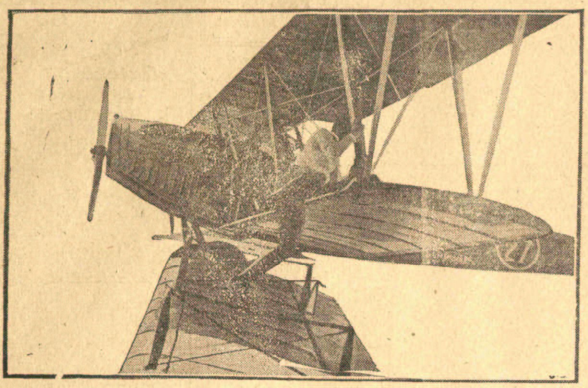
STEPPING FROM ONE PLANE TO ANOTHER— AN EASY STUNT FOR FOLKS 'WITHOUT NERVES'



NICE to watch a stunt like this.

But as for actually trying it—most folks' hearts couldn't stand the thrill, we're thinking.

And mind you—the "daredevil" doing the step-up act from one aeroplane to another while in the air—is a GIRL. She is Miss Gladys Ingle, an aerial acrobat.

Her pilot in the upper plane at the time was Art Goebel, who figured so prominently in the Pacific Coast Hawaiian Island "air hop" last summer.

A salary of $500 while he worked. An Income of $500 when he retired

We must all face the day when our earning powers decline, our zest for business activities diminish, and the problem of future income becomes acute.

EIGHTY-FIVE out of every 100 men, when they face this situation at 65, find themselves dependent upon the kindness of children, relatives or the charitable organizations.

You can be financially independent at 60 if you want to.

Take the case of a man of 35, who never earned more than $500 a month. He determined to be free from financial worries and able to enjoy life in his later years, and began accumulating a fund.

Upon his living expenses he spent a little more than two-thirds of his income. The rest he invested in safe securities that yielded him an average of 6% through the years. His interest and dividends were reinvested promptly.

At the age of sixty, he retired from business. He had a fortune of $112,000, of which $50,000 were actual savings and $62,000 EARNINGS FROM HIS SAVINGS and the reinvested interest and dividends. His annual income was about $6,700.

While he worked he earned $500 a month. When he retired his Income Fund paid him over $500 each month.

The BABY

No mother in this enlightened age would give her baby something she did not know was perfectly harmless, especially when a few drops of plain Castoria will right a baby's stomach and end almost any little ill. Fretfulness and fever, too; it seems no time until everything is serene.

That's the beauty of Castoria; its gentle influence seems just what is needed. It does all that castor oil might accomplish, without shock to the system. Without the evil taste. It's delicious. Being purely vegetable, you can give it as often as there's a sign of colic; constipation; diarrhea; or need to aid sound, natural sleep.

Just one warning; it is genuine Fletcher's Castoria that physician recommend. Other preparations may be just as free from all doubtless drugs, but no child of this writer's is going to test them. Besides, the book on care and feeding of babies that comes with Fletcher's Castoria is worth its weight in gold.

TRIBUTE TO WELL KNOWN EDITOR

With the passing of Lincoln E. Smith, editor of the South Lyons Herald, Michigan loses one of its best known editors—a man of sterling character, progressive in business and honest in every business enterprise.

It was a pleasure to know and do business with Mr. Smith and to realize the constant effort he put forth to make his community better, so that when the last summons came, those who were left to feel their loss had the deep and sincere sympathy of the entire community

Mr. Smith was a native of New York state but lived in Michigan all his life except one year. He was sixty-three years of age at the time of his death.

The widow, a daughter, Marjory of Pinckney, three sons, N. S. Hazen, Jr. associated with his father in the printing business at South Lyon, Donald of Kentucky, and his father, Daniel Smith of Detroit, survive. The funeral was held at Pinckney, Sunday last with buriial in that town.—Exchange.

Dairymen commonly feed skim milk to their calves until about six months of age. The time of weaning usually depends upon the condition of the calf and the availability and cost of milk. When milk is fed in abundance it furnishes the greater part of the protein necessary for the growth of the calf. If the feeding of milk is discontinued the necessary protein must be supplied by some other feed. Probably this can be done most economically by some legume, such as alfalfa, clover, soy bean, or cowpea hay. When hay of this sort is not available it is necessary that the grain mixture fed should be high in protein. During summer, when good pasture is available, the heifer needs no supplementary feed, providing she is growing normally. A little hay and grain are sometimes advisable late in the season when the pastures are dry or

PRESBYTERIANS TO BUILD NEW CHURCH AT BRIGHTON

Work will be begun at once on construction of a new Presbyterian church at Brighton, the contract for a thirty-five thousand dollar edifice having been awarded to Charles E. Hodge, of Lansing. The building is to be completed by May nineteen twenty-eight.

Sunday school quarters will be in the basement. A pastor's study and choir room are on opposite sides of the platform in the main auditorium. The Rev. W. H. Simmons is minister of the new church congregation. R. E. Weeks is chairman and Gus P. Hartman is secretary of the board of trustees.

NEED OF PARKS IS RECOGNIZED

Forty-three of the forty-eight states now possess areas which conserve scenery, with life, historical or scientific sites, according to the permanent conference headquarters in Washington, D. C. Pennsylvania now has a million and a quarter acres in state forests and parks.

Indiana has spent a million dollars to establish the Dunes Park on Lake Michigan.

Our own State has fifty-nine State parks.

Iowa, Ohio and Connecticut each now has more than forty such preserves.

South Dakota will report the spending of two million in Custer State park, a preserve of national park standards.

California has done much for the Red Wood and plans to do more.

New Yory State has the largest area set aside for recreational and conservation purposes

In sixteen forty one Massachusetts Bay Colony gave the public rights for "fishing and fowling" on "great ponds" over ten acres in extent, and this far sighted ordinance of the Puritan legislators later was interpreted to cover such recreational needs as bathing, boating and skating But it was the automobile that firmly established the state park idea

Southeastern Wisconsin is campaigning for state parks in a dozen counties now without provision to establish them

Kentucky has acquired several new parks under provision of recent legislation and private gifts, and the state is much concerned in avoiding the defacement, by hydro electrical development of beautiful Cumberland Falls

The Texas legislature has accepted twenty-three sites donated to the state during Gov Neff's term and will provide for their maintenance

Alabama is desirous of purchasing from the U S Government Fort Morgan on Mobile Bay for a state park.

Mississippi has a forestry commission with power to acquire parks.

Oklahoma has a similar agency and Arkansas has just created a state park commission.

Georgia, North Carolina and Missouri are establishing parks.

Realization now in general that the acquisition of such sites is a duty laid upon the state. The auto tourist business affords one of the surest cash revenues the state can develop. A foamy waterfall, a cool canyon, a glacier studded mountain will remain unseen until a road is built to it and it is advertised.

BUYERS BEAT PATH TO STANTON FARM

Stanton is off the beaten path of apple buyers, but it has prospects of becoming one of their regular stops if John Miller, local orchardist, continues to inject this community into Michigan's fruit belt.

Miller harvested approximately three thousand bushels of Northern Spies from his orchard this fall, selling most of the crop at his farm for two dollars a bushel. His orchard was one of the beauty spots near Stanton this season.

The trees were so heavily loaded with fruit that many branches had to be propped to prevent injury. Windstorms caused considerable damage late in the season, blowing off about five hundred bushels of fruit.

Mr. Miller set the orchard about twenty-five years ago and it is proving to be one of the best investments he ever made.

All but two carloads of the apples were sold locally.

ELECTRIC RADIO SETS NOW IN HUGE DEMAND

Like Little Eva in a "Tom Show" the public has been dying for years for an A. C. electrically operated set that would work reliably without the assistance of an ax and a flock of 24 karat profanity, and the inclusion of really successful A. C. equipment in the 1927-28 Mohawk One Dial Radio line will thus prove a dual boon to the public and to Mohawk dealers everywhere. Already the word is abroad that such equipment has been perfected and the demand for it has reached proportions that are genuinely huge.

It is worthy of comment that the leading radio manufacturers have been reluctant to offer such equipment in the past because of their general realization that the sale of any save wholly satisfactory equipment would do great harm to an industry that has already suffered greatly from premature and ill-considered moves. They wisely refrained from asking the public to pay for their experiments, and now that they have something really worth while to offer, they are already reaping a most satisfactory reward for their patience and foresight.

Low Upkeep Pays Cost

With the cost of really efficient battery equipment deducted from that of A. C. equipment and the bother of attending to and replacing the former, eliminated the cost of A. C. equipment is comparatively slight over that of battery equipment, and the reduction of upkeep cost to practically nothing makes true the claim that A. C. equipment eventually pays for itself. But even if this were not true, there are thousands of radio fans who are quite willing to pay whatever A. C. equipment may cost to be freed from the responsibilities imposed by battery equipment.

OLIVETS NEW GYMNASIUM IS NEARING COMPLETION

Olivet's new gymnasium will be ready for basketball practice soon after Thanksgiving, it was announced following a conference between the architects and George R Wilson of Chicago, president of the college board of trustees.

The main floor will be laid and the entire structure roofed by that time, permitting the basketball squad to begin its work even though the contractors will not finish the building before the first of the year.

"No of course not", Mary answered with conviction. She was an orphan with no living relation save her old grandmother, and no thought in like but to make a helpful and worthy wife to the man she loved. Where these two were she could not fail to find happiness. If John went to Canada, then Canada became home to her, for what had Brisport to offer when he was gone

"I'm to write to-night, then and accept," the young man asked. "I knew you would both be of the same mind as myself, but of course I couldn't close with the offer until we had talked it over. I can get started in a week or two, and then in a couple of months I'll have all ready for you on the other side."

'It will be a weary, weary time until we hear from you, dear John said Mary, clasping his hand; "but it's God's will and we must be patient. Here's pen and ink. You can sit at the table and write the letter which is to take the three of us across the Atlantic." Strange how Don Diego's thoughts were molding human lives in the little Devon village.

The acceptance was duly despatched, and John Huxford began immediately to prepare for his departure, for the Montreal firm had intimated that the vacancy was a certainty, and that the chosen man might come out without delay to take over his duties. In a very few days his scanty outfit was completed and he started off in a coasting vessel for Liverpool, where he was to catch the passenger ship for Quebec.

'Remember, John," Mary whispered as he pressed her to his heart upon the Brisport quay, 'the cottage is our own, and come what may, we have always that to fall back upon. If things should chance to turn out badly over there, we have always a roof to cover us. There you will find me until you send word to us to come."

"And that will be very soon, my lass", he answered, cheerfully, with a last embrace. "Goodby, granny, goodby". The ship was a mile [illegible] more from the land before he lost sight of the figures of the straight, slim girl and her old companion, who stood watching and waving to him from the end of the gray stone quay. It was with a sinking heart and a vague feeling of impending disaster that he saw them at last as minute specks in the distance, walking townward and disappearing amid the crowd who lined the beach.

From Liverpool the old woman and her grand daughter received a letter from John announcing that he was just starting in the bark St. Lawrence' and six weeks afterward a second longer epistle informed them of his safe arrival at Quebec and gave them his first impressions of the country. After that a long unbroken silence set in. Week after week and month after month passed by, and never a word came from across the seas. A year went over their heads, and yet another, but no news of the absentee. Sheridan and Moore were written to and replied that though John Huxford's letter had reached them, he had never presented himself, and they had been forced to fill up the vacancy as best they could. Still, Mary and her grandmother hoped against hope, and looked out for the letter carrier every morning with such eagerness that the kind hearted man would often make a detour rather than pass the two pale, anxious faces which peered at him from the cottage window. At last three years after the young foreman's disappearance, granny died, and Mary was left alone, a broken sorrowful woman. living as best she might on a small annuity which had descended to her, and eating her heart out as she brooded over the mystery which hung over the fate of her lover.

Among the shrewd west country neighbors there has long however, ceased to be any mystery in the matter. Huxford arrived safely in Canada—so much was proved by his letter. Had he met with his end in any sudden way during the journey between Quebec and Montreal, there must have been some official inquiry, and his luggage would have sufficied to have estabished his idenity. Yet the Canadian police had been communicated with, and had returned a positive answer [illegible]t no inquest had been held or any body found which could by any possibility be that of the young Englishman. The only alternative appeared to be that he had taken the first opportunity to break all the old ties and had slipped away to the backwoods or to the States to commence life anew under an altered name. Why he should do this no one professed to know, but that he had done it appeared only too probable from the facts. Hence many a deep growl of righteous anger rose from the brawny smacksmen when Mary, with pale face and sorrow sunken head, passed along the quays on her way to her daily marketing; and it is more than likely that if the missing man had turned up in Brisport he might have met with some rough words or rougher usage unless he could give some very good reason for his strange conduct. This popular view of the case never, however, occured to the simple, trusting heart of the lonely girl; and as the years rolled by, her grief and her suspense were never for an instant tinged with a doubt as to the good faith of the missing man. From youth she grew into middle ago, and from that into the autumn of her life, patient, long-suffering, and faithful, doing good as far as lay in her power, and waiting humbly until fate should restore, either in this world or the next, that. which it had so mysteriously deprived her of.

In the meantime neither the opinion held by the minority, that John Huxford was dead, nor that of the majority, which pronounced him to be faithless, represented the true state of the case. Still alive, and of stainless honor, he had yet been singled out by fortune as her victim in one of those strange freaks which are of such rare occurance and so beyond the general experience that they might be put as incredible had we not the most trustworthy evidence of their occasional possibility.

Landing at Quebec, with his heart full of hope and courage, John selected a dingy room in a back street, where the terms were less exorbitant than elsewhere and conveyed thither the two boxes which contained his wordly goods. After taking up his quarters there, he had half a mind to change again, for the landlady and the fellow lodgers were by no means of his taste; but the Montreal coach started within a day or two, and he consoled himself by the thought that the discomfort would only last for that short time. Having written home to Mary to announce his safe arrival he employed himself in seeing as much of the town as was possible, walking about all day, and only returning to his room at night.

It happened, however that the house on which the unfortunate youth had pitched was one which was notorious for the character of its inmates. He had been directed to it by a pimp, who found regular employment in hanging about the docks and decoying newcomers to this den. The fellow's specious manner and proffered civility had led the simplehearted west country man into the toils and though his instinct told him that he was in unsafe company, he refrained unfortunately ,from at once making his escape. He contented himself with staying out all day, and associating as little as possible with the other inmates. From the few words which he did let drop, however, the landlady gathered that he was a stranger without a single friend in the country to inquire after him should misfortune overtake him.

The house had an evil reputation for the hocussing of sailors, which was done not only for the purpose of plundering them, but to supply outgoing ships with crews the men being carried on board insensible and not coming to until the ship was well down the St. Lawrence. This trade caused the wretches who followed it to be experts in the use of stupefying drugs, and they determined to practise their arts upon their friendless lodger, so as to have an opportunity of ransacking his effects, and of seeing what it might be worth their while to purloin. During the day he invariably locked his door and carried off the key in his pocket, but if they could render him insensible for the night they could examine his boxes at their leisure, and deny afterward that he had ever brought with him the articles which he missed. It happened therefore, upon the eve of Huxford's departure from Quebec that he found upon returning to his lodgings that his landlady and her two illfavored sons, who assisted her in her trade were waiting up for him over a bowl of punch, which they cordially invited him to share. It was a bitterly cold night, and the fragrant steam over powered any suspicions which the young Englishman may have entertained; so he drained off a bumper, and then, retiring to his bedroom, threw himself upon the his bed without undressing and fell straight into a dreamless slumber, in which he still lay when the three conspirators crept into his chamber, and having opened his boxes began to investigate his effects.

It may have been the speedy action of the drug caused its effect to be evanescent or, perhaps that the strong constitution of the victim threw it off with unusual rapidity. Whatever the cause, it is certain that John Huvford suddenly came to himself and found the foul trio squatted round their booty, which they were dividing into the two categories of what was of value and should be taken, and what was valueless and might therefore be left. With a bound he sprung out of bed and seizing the fellow nearest him by the collar, he slung him through the open doorway. His brother rushed at him, but the young Devonshire man met him with such a facer that he dropped in a heap upon the ground. Unfortunately, the violence of the blow caused him to overbalance himself and tripping over his prostrate antagonist he came down heavily upon his face. Before he could rise the old hag sprung upon his back and clung to him, shrieking to her son to bring the poker. John managed to shake himself clear of them both, but before he could stand on his guard, he was felled from behind by a crashing blow from an iron bar, which stretched him senseless upon the floor.

"You've hit too hard, Joe" said the old woman looking down at the prostrate figure. "I heard the one go."

"If I hadn't fetched him down he'd ha' been too many for us", said the young villian sulkily.

"Still, you might ha' done it with out killing him, clumsy", said his mother. She had had a large experience of such scenes and knew the difference between a stunning blow and a fatal one.

"He's still breathing", the other said, examining him; "the back of his head's like a bag o' dice though. The skull's all splintered. He can't last. What are we to do."

"Hell never come to himself again", the other brother remarked "Serve him right. Look at my face. Let's see, mother; who's in the house".

"Only four drunk sailors.'

"They wouldn't turn out for any noise. It's all quiet in the street. Let's carry him down a bit, Joe, and leave him there. He can die there, and no one think the worse of us."

"Take all the appers out of his pocket, then," the mother suggested; 'they might help the police to trace him. His watch, too, and his money—L3 odd; better than nothing. Now carry him softly, and don't slip.

Kicking off their shoes, the two brothers carried the dying man down stairs and along the deserted street for a couple of hundred yards. There they laid him among the snow, where he was found by the night patrol, who carried him on a shutter to the hospital. He was duly examined by the resident surgeon, who bound up the wounded head, but gave it as his opinion that the man could not possibly live for more than twelve hours.

Twelve hours passed, however, and yet another twelve, but John Huxford still struggled hard for his life. When at the end of three days he was found to be still breathing, the interest of the doctors became aroused at his extraordinary vitality, and they bled him, as the fashion was in those days, and surrounded his shattered head with ice-bags. It may have been in spite of them, but at the end of a week's deep trance the nurse in charge was astonished to hear a gabbling noise, and to find the stranger sitting up on the couch and staring about him with wistful wandering eyes. The surgeons were summoned to behold the phenomenon, and warmly congratulated each other upon the success of their treatment.

"You have been on the brink of the grave, my man," said one of them, pressing the bandaged head back on to the pillow; "you must not excite yourself. What is your name."

No answer, save a wild stare.

"Where do you come from."

Again no answer.

"He is mad", one suggested. 'Or a foreigner", said another. 'There were no papers on him when he came in. His linen is marked 'J. H' Let us try him in French and German.

They tested him with as many tongues as they could muster among them, but were compelled at last to give the matter over and to leave their silent patient still staring up wild eyed at the whitewashed hospital ceiling.

Prize fairy story of the year, 'Women's skirts are to be longer".

REICHART SEES STATE RECORD

During the thirty-eight years since eighteen eighty nine there have been only twenty-two receiverships involving Michigan banks and these receiverships have concerned assets of only eleven million, eight hundred, eighteen thousand, four hundred and twelve according to a report placed before the members of group four of the Michigan Bankers association by State Banking Commissioner R. E. Reichert.

Of these total assets involved in the receivership proceedings four million four hundred and thirteen thousand, three hundred and eighty two have been turned over to creditors and one million five hundred and eighteen thousand nine hundred and seventy two dollars still is tied up in four active receiverships.

In nineteen twenty according to the state commissioner, there were three thousand bank failures in the United States but there were only five in this state. During a period in nineteen twenty six when there were eight hundred and ninety eight bank failures in the country, Michigan had but one.

How the state banking business has developed since eighteen eighty nine has also been told by Commissioner Reichert. Thirty-eight years ago there were ninety state banks in Michgan. These possessed deposits of thirty-six million, eight hundred and fifty thousand In nine hundred and ten there were three hundred and ninety six state banks with deposits of two fifty-nine million one hundred and five thousand sixty seven dollars and one hundred and two national banks with deposits amounting to one hundred and twenty million seven hundred thousand, four hundred and thirty three dollars. At the present time, according to the commissioner there are five hundred and eighty seven state banks with one thousand two hundred and sixty eight million, nine hundred and twenty-three thousand, eight hundred and twenty one dollars in deposits and one hundred and thirty five national banks with deposits of four hundred and seventy four million eight hundred and forty two thousand dollars showing an increase since nineteen ten of one thousand, three hundred and sixty-five million dollars.

SAVING MUSKEGON GIANT SAND DUNE IS SEEN AS LIKELY

Pigeon Hill the giant sand dune at Muskegon Harbor may be saved from the steam shovels after all. Citizens of Muskegon have waged a three year court battle and lost, but new hope has sprung up.

The Muskegon Traction and Lighting Co., holds the key. One small lot along the shore of Lake Michigan may block the West Michigan Shore Sand Co. from taking away the sand dune.

Douglas Mallock, poet, and many others, who forgot this small lot, protested against the removal of the dune and offered to donate a fund to purchase it.

To reach the dune a sidetrack had to be constructed along Beach street, which is crowded with summer homes on Lake Michigan. The owners said the railroad would destroy property values but the State Supreme Court held it was not a new line, only new rails were being placed, since once there had been a track along Beach street.

The little lot has been forgotten by all but the traction officials. They were waiting the outcome of the court fight. The court fight lost. the Muskegon Traction and Lighting Co., through D. A. Powell president and general manager, notified the Pere Marquette that the railroad could not be built across the property.

Old marine men say the giant sand dune acts as a breaker to Muskegon in time of storm. They contend Muskegon is safe from storms as long as Pigeon Hill stands.

Nero having fiddled while Rome burned we presume Coolidge may be granted the privilege of whittling while the maple sap runs up in Vermont.

There's little relation between the species. The female monkey spanks her young, but never because she lost at bridge.

"Rooms are Larger at the Detroit-Leland"

There is no initiation into the great fraternity of those who travel. Yet it is legion—and it is one of the most exclusive in the world.

When a new contribution appears to add comfort and vivacity, you hear of it in the smoking rooms of crack trains, in the saloons of ocean greyhounds, or in the lounges of great hotels.

So, today, you hear—"Rooms are larger at the new Detroit-Leland—airier, more luxurious, and cuisine and service transcend perfection."

It is an endorsement that can not be bought, for the fraternity is jealous of its endorsements.

You who have envisaged the ideal hotel may safely follow those connoisseurs whose endorsements have brought international renown to the new Detroit-Leland.

LOCAL NEWS

We have Christmas Cards fo your inspection.

The lowering temperatures of Wednesday evening and Thursday have just about put a quietus on news of all kinds as most people are busy at home with the big heater or furnace. All kinds of plumbing is likely to suffer. The mercury reached slightly below zero on Thursday morning. This coupled with a 75 mile wind has tied up activity in North Adams.

Parent—Teachers meeting at the Congregational church next Monday evening December 12. A program is being prepared and it is hoped the crowd will be there to enjoy it. Remember this Parent Teachers meeting is the best possible means of cultivating good fellowship between the Patron and Teacher and both need to meet and talk things over occasionally for the good of both school and students.

The annual Telephone meeting of the North Adams Switchboard Association was held Saturday afternoon at the Town Hall and the usual routine of business transacted. All the old officers were re-elected as follows: Pres., Jay D. Knowles sec., J. F. Duguid; treas., John M. Williams. Steps will be taken toward considering a new switchboard and a special meeting for this purpose will be held soon.

The sad news were received in Hillsdale recently of the death of Mrs. Ellen Smith, widow of the late Seth Smith formerly of Moscow township. Mrs. Smith expired at LaMesa California Sunday morning last. She was at least 75 years of age and resided in Hillsdale for a number of years and educated her children there. She was a member of the Methodist church and W. C. T. U. and known as a good woman and very useful citizen. Particulars have not yet been received, but her interment will be in Hillsdale likely at Oak Grove cemetery. She is survived by two brothers George Pardee of LaMesa California and Charles Pardee of Manchester Mich besides nephews and nieces and many other more distant relatives.

"Ain't She Sweet?"

The Wards, as they are known at WLS, the Sears Roebuck Station, put the "why" in Hawaiian music. At least, as a result of the playing of the Wards on their Hawaiian guitars at WLS, the staff knows why Hawaiian music is so popular. Also, after listening to Cecil and Esther Ward play, the radio fans, in response to the question: "What kind of entertainment do you want?" always reply, "Why give us more Hawaiian music." So the "why" is in Hawaiian from many angles at WLS. Cecil and Esther Ward have made hundreds of personal appearances since they began playing on radio programs at WLS about two years ago. As one radio fan put it: "They are easy to look at and easy to listen to" so there is the story of Cecil and Esther Ward. They play popular numbers as well as Hawaiian numbers on their guitars.

Why A Railroad?

Some of the objections to railroads put up in the olden times when steam lines were just about to mature, are highly amusing to read and show conclusively that there were reformers and kickers in those days, the same as to-day. We are in receipt of a list of objections chorused against the first railroads by conscientious objectors. Here are a few of them:

"When railroads were first introduced into England King Louis Phillippe of France sent his Minister of Public Works over to investigate; this same dignitary returned with the report that if there were railroads, they were of no account, and the result was a delay for ten years in railroad construction in France.

In 1833 we find a writer in the New York magazine advocating "foot railroads" on which a man could wheel a large wheelbarrow and carry one seventh as much as a horse.

Another cracked specimen of humanity suggested that railroads were entirely unnecessary because all freight could be placed in a large cylinder 12 feet long and about the same diameter and 1836 another man thought railroads should be kept under water to prevent decay as the first rails were of wood.

In 1832 a hopeful inventor believed he had attained perpetual motion in a railroad because a loaded car would travel down hill at a high speed and up the next hill by its own momentum. On this principle an "undulating" railroad was built, kut strang eto say, it wouldn't work.

In 1868 a writer said the main fault with railroads of the day was the terrific speed at which the trains traveled—an awful pace of twenty miles per hour!

Some different from the present New York Central trains with a speed of 90 miles per hour often attained in perfect safety and comfort.

Wonderful New Train Service

A better train service between St Louis and New York City has recently been inaugurated by the New York Central Lines by the way of Boston. Read the announcement as follows:

Inauguration of a new fast train service eastward and westward between New York, New England and St. Louis, with connections at the latter city for overnight trains to Oklahoma and Texas, was announced today by the New York Central Lines.

Commencing Sunday, December 11, the North Shore Limited leaving New York daily, 12:10 p. m., Boston 9:30 a. m., will have a connection arriving at St. Louis the following afternoon at 1:30 p. m.

Eastbound a similar train will leave St. Louis at 5 p. m., arriving at New York the following evening at 6:50 p. m., and Boston at 9:45 p. m.

All principal intermediate stops will be made in New York and New England, in both directions. This makes one of the most adequate train services in the United States as there is considerable travel between St. Louis and New York City.

"We Serve Michigan"

Present-Day Industrial Needs Demand the Movement of Freight at Express Service Speed of Former Years.

WITH the war-time expansion in America, the greater post-war costs of materials and supplies and the higher wage levels, etc., the industrialist, the distributor and the consuming public, now require a more expedited service for freight than at any time, anywhere.

THIS means that the speed expected of the railroads in handling of all freight now is almost the former standard of express service provided in before-the-war days. The exigencies of the conflict showed the Nation, first, the urgency of speed and, secondly, the benefits that accrue. The accelerated movement of the war days was continued in the readjustment period and business men soon realized their economic advantage. Tremendous outlays for improvements and betterments gave these an added incentive in the days that followed the close of the war. New records are being made annually and the good that flows from these is reflected in the greater prosperity that every class that makes up our society now enjoys.

THE railroad traffic unit — the ton of freight — is traveling more miles each day than ever.

THE additional mileage made by each ton of freight per diem means that the manufacturer can utilize his plant to greater advantage by clearing his shipping room regularly and carrying a smaller inventory in his stock room. The distributor at destination can likewise carry on business with a smaller inventory inasmuch as he is always certain of regular deliveries. The manufacturer puts through his bills of lading at the bank several days earlier than before and so his capital is turned over oftener.

ALL of these conditions mean benefits to every stratum of society.

THE railroad worker is paid higher wages for his services, since the railroads are doing more work, and their unit of cost makes this possible.

THE consumer of commodities finds that prices are kept down to a lower level than would otherwise obtain.

THE business man, who ventures into modern business, can carry on with a smaller capital.

ALL, therefore, share in the benefits of the accelerated freight service.

NOWHERE else under heaven's blue canopy is this so apparent.

NOWHERE in America are these conditions more applicable than in the territory served by the Michigan Railroad Association, the industrial area which is making the greatest forward strides on this continent.

The General Motors Company is now quite solicitious for the welfare of their Chevrolet cars and are talking some changes for the better, after the great Ford fiasco, which seems to be holding up real good. H. A. Brown vice president of the General Motors Company is quoted as saying that the little Chevrolet would have to undergo some changes both in form and price. We thought it queer if Ford's latest baby did not stir up the animals more or less, and possibly produce better times for the buyer. That is, the buyer will get more for his money.

F. I. Williams & Son Expanding Plant

Our grain and seed dealers, F. I. Williams & Son have installed at their mill a new Burton Feed Mixer, one of the latest manufactured, and this is located on an additional floor recently built over the engine room. Here the different feeds which enter into the balanced ration of the dairy cow and the poultry and chick feeds will be scientificly blended to produce the largest and richest flow of milk and to coax the largest number of eggs from the poultry flocks of the surrounding country.

The firm is now circularizing farmers in this vicinity, inviting them to come in and see what goes into the dairy feeds. Here will be compounded all the different dairy feeds to supply the customers directly from their own bins or those of the firm, instead of depending upon the large cities as has been done heretofore.

This addition to the business represents quite an outlay of money but the firm believes in keeping right up to the minute, and this will be very convenient for dairymen and poultry raisers.

The new machine consists briefly of a drum 5 or 7 feet in diameter mounted and revolving on a shaft similar to a creamery churn with flanges inside and riddles which thoroughly mix any ingrediants as the drum is revolved by electric power. Spouts from the different bins converge above and regulate the proportions of ingrediants. F. I. Williams & Son are now prepared to furnish feed in ton or carload lots.

Obituary

Alice E. Rowe was born near Battle Creek, Michigan, October 25th 1856, and died December 10, 1927 in the village of North Adams at the age of 71 years, one month and 15 days.

When a small girl she with her parents moved to Quincy, Michigan, where she lived until a young woman when they removed to Moscow Township. She was married to James Burley, March 8th, 1878 who died March 11th, 1911. To this union was born three children Hattie of Jackson, Howard of Hanover and Grace at home. all of whom survive, with 5 grandchildren and one great grandchild, who with one brother Frank H. Rowe of Moscow and one sister Mary E. Fay of Quincy remain to mourn their loss.

Mrs. Burley in all her relations as wife and mother and neighbor proved herself most worthy.

She was highly esteemed by all and greatly loved by the family circle and all who became acquainted with her, and as the days go by, life long friends will miss her cheery greeting and familiar figure.

For sometime she has been in poor health but showed great patience in her suffering. Her life was quiet and useful and all praise her memory as blessed. She rests from a life's work well done.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank our neighbors and friends for their kindness during the sickness and death of our beloved mother, also the Eastern Stars, The Rebekah Aid Society, The Congregational Societies, The Friendship Club and all who sent flowers, we also thank Rev. Why Sheetrock is a different wallboard

What it is: Sheetrock is gypsum plaster cast in thick, rigid sheets. It is fireproof, non-warping and permanent. It can be sawed and nailed like lumber. Takes any decoration—wall paper, paint, or Textone in the new stipple finishes.

What it does: Sheetrock makes solid, highly insulating walls and ceilings that keep rooms warm in winter and cool in summer. That means more comfort and lower fuel bills. Then, too, Sheetrock walls and ceilings make buildings dust-tight, sound-proof and vermin-proof.

Where it is usea: Sheetrock is the economical wall and ceiling material for many types of new construction and for all remodeling and repairs. It is just the thing for attic rooms, furnace rooms, fruit cellars, garages, offices and stores.

Where to get it: Get your Sheetrock from us. We carry it in standard ceiling heights and widths. Our trucks make prompt deliveries.

A salary of $500 while he worked. An Income of $500 when he retired

We must all face the day when our earning powers decline, our zest for business activities diminish, and the problem of future income becomes acute.

EIGHTY-FIVE out of every 100 men, when they face this situation at 65, find themselves dependent upon the kindness of children, relatives or the charitable organizations.

You can be financially independent at 60 if you want to.

Take the case of a man of 35, who never earned more than $500 a month. He determined to be free from financial worries and able to enjoy life in his later years, and began accumulating a fund.

Upon his living expenses he spent a little more than two-thirds of his income. The rest he invested in safe securities that yielded him an average of 6% through the years. His interest and dividends were reinvested promptly.

At the age of sixty, he retired from business. He had a fortune of $112,000, of which $50,000 were actual savings and $62,000 EARNINGS FROM HIS SAVINGS and the reinvested interest and dividends. His annual income was about $6,700.

While he worked he earned $500 a month. When he retired his Income Fund paid him over $500 each month.

LAMP EXPLOSION BULGES WALLS OF JACKSON HOME

Four prsons narrowly escaped death last week when a gasoline lamp blew up in the home of Floyd Hemery. Hearing a strange noise coming from the lamp. Murvin Hemery a brother, reached up to extinguish the light. Just as he did to the lamp burst, scalding his hands with burning oil, smashing windows in four rooms and causing the north wall to bulge several inches.

FRIEND OF KINGS NOW IN POORHOUSE

The group of eminent visitors at the home near Detroit conducted by the Little Sisters of the Poor caught the glint of his many medials as he sat a apart from the other indigent. A Scotch cap sat at a raking angle on his white head The head was lifted bravely instead of being bowed in poorhouse despair.

"Who is he."

"Capt. Walpole Roland", answered the Sister conducting the party through the institution.

Gov. Fred W. Green, one of the party, approached. His eyes saw bars on one of the medals. On the bars he read the words; 'Crimea—Alma—Balaklava—Inkerman Sebastopol."

"Come here, men', he gasped to the others lagging behind. "See that word 'BALAKLAVA". This man standing before us was at the Battle of Balaklava". Were you". he continued turning to the erect old soldier before him, "in charge of the Light Brigade."

"I was not. I was a major in the Turkish Engineers. We lost our little mud forts at dawn when practically the entire Russian army joined in a surprise attack. It was, presumably to retrieve our gume that the Light Brigade charged. But I was not in it."

"You SAW the charge of the Light Brigade."

"Certainly, sir. All the allied armies saw it. All the Russian army saw it. All the world heard of it two months later when Tennyson's poem appeared."

The governor of Michigan turned to another in the group of visitors, the Mayor of Detroit and exclaimed; "The Charge of the Light Brigade seems like legend to me. I can not realize that I am in the presence of one who, with the eyes that are looking at us now, saw the charge of the Light Brigade. It is as far back in my mind as the Battle of Waterloo."

At the mention of the Battle of Waterloo the Sister accompanying the party volunteered, "he knew the Duke of Wellington. He was one of the mounted escort at the Duke's funeral."

"How old is the man, demanded the Governor.

"Well authenticated documents show that he was born, Jan. 27 1827."

The Sister lingered over the words, eighteen-hundred and twenty seven and was not disappointed in the electrical effect produced.

This 100-year-old man in a poorhouse is a graduate of the British cavalry school at Canterbury, England, and was graduated from the engineering college at Freifurt Saxony, Germany.

That as he was taking his degree from the latter institution he volunteered for the Turkish service in the Crimea where, under Omar Pasha, commander-in-chief he participated in the battles of Alma Balaklava, Inkerman and the siege of Sebastopol.

That he rose to the rank of Bombashi, meaning Major in the Turkish service and after participating, as an engineering officer, in the domolition of the fortifications at Sebastopol he was presented with a meda, by the Sultan Medid VI.

That during this war he was a patient of Florence Nightingale and later was one of the party of officers escorting her through the trenches.

Then he next volunteered for the British campaign in Persia, went from there to the Indian Mutiny, and was present at the Relief of Lucknow.

Then he went home on sick leave and within 24 hours after landing at Southhampton was on an outbound vessel as a volunteer with Garibaldi's forces in Italy.

That as gun runner for the great Italian Liberator he was invited by the admiral of the Austrian fleet--later to become the ill-fated Emperor Maximilian—to a luncheon at which a kindly warning was issued to him to "be careful"

That his next adventure was in China where he was a general under Li Hung Chang and fought side by side with a Crimean comrade, Chinese Gordon, commander of the "Ever Victorious" army and doomed in a few years to die at Khartum. In China, he recalls, fighting ceased at regular intervals, while tea was served in the opposing camps.

That George B. McCelland, American military observer in the Crimea, wrote to the young engineer in China advising him that there was a sizeable and moderately interesting war in progress in the United States of America and that technical talent could be used by the Union forces.

That in the federal army he was first a cavalry scout for Custer and then served under Gen. Butler in the Bermuda Hundreds. He went twenty miles within the Confederate lines to obtain the topographical maps on which the Battle of Gettysburg was based.

That he next served as colonel of cavalry under Emperor Maximilan and was cavalry escort for the Empress Carlotta—was later to suffer the horrors of lifelong madness after learning that her handsome husband had died before a Mexican firing squad.

That was in eighteen hundred and eighty four to eighty six he fought under Sir Garnet Wolsey soon to be made Lord Wolsley in the Egyptian campaign.

That in his later peace time carcer he discovered and developed some of the best paving mines in the Rainy River and Lake of the Wood district.

FARM AS WELL AS FACTORY MUST CUT PRODUCTION COST

The farmer as well as the manufacturer must cut his costs of production if he wants to make money, it was stated in a recent bulletin of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Modern competition, it continues, necessitates modern methods of business, and the farm problems are just as much a matter for production cost studies as are the problems of modern factory management.

The feeding of live stock for market, agricultural experts agree, has many of the aspects which face the manufacturer of any community. The farmer's live stock represents his outlay for productive machinery. His raw materials are his grains and his feed. His finished product is his milk, his beef or his pork, And his profit is represented by the margin between the cost of feeding and upkeep of the animal as against the selling price of his product.

Linseed meal and other concentrats, Mr. Voorman, whose name is signed to the bulletin, points out, when fed with roughage such as straw or stover, gives twice the food value as the same amount of corn and while linseed meal roughage cannot actually be substituted for corn; as a supplement, it can to an appreciable extent be used to cut down his feed bills.

In a series of experiments carried on by the agricultural experiment station at Wooster, Ohio, C. G. Williams, director, states that he increased the gain in hogs from seventy-five pounds per day to one and two tenths pounds daily and at the same time cut costs per one hundred pounds of grain from six dollars and forty-five cents to six dollars and twenty two cents by supplementing his ration of corn, tankage, sale and limestone with linseed meal.

The pigs that were fed linseed meal ate only four hundred and six and four tenths pounds of feed per one hundred pounds of grain, whereas hogs on the ration from which linseed meal was eliminated at four hundred and twenty-one and one tenth pounds of feed per one hundreds pounds of gain, a saving of nearly fifteen pounds of feed for each one hundred pounds of gain, Mr. Williams points out.

Savings in production costs just such as these, agricultural experts explain, are the factors which enable modern manufactures to earn dividends. The farmer, they say, must learn them if he wants to make money in this modern day of lowered marginal profits.

VETERAN RAILROADER TELLS OF PRESIDENTS PLACED IN HIS CARE

In 52 years of railroading Edward F. Ryan of Detroit, met many presidents of the United States, but only three, Theodore Roosevelt left any great impression on his mind. And T. R. chiefly because he drew such enormous crowds at the stations through which the special presidential trains passed.

"Then, too, Mr. Roosevelt would talk to us," said Mr. Ryan. "He had a 'Good morning' and a 'Good afternoon' for everybody, including the brakeman and the porter. He talked to everybody. That was the secret of Roosevelt's greatness He learned from anybody and everybody. He knew the popular mind because he was always making contacts with the popular mind through, Tom, Dick and Harry.'

Since 1891 Mr. Ryan has been conductor of track trains running on the Mich. Central Railroad between Detroit and Chicago. Cleveland, McKinley, Roosevelt, Taft and Woodrow Wilson have been entrusted to his vigilance. He remembers McKinley and Taft as quiet, reserved men. Woodrow Wilson as wrapped in the affairs of state, and T. R. because of the crowds out to meet him. Cleveland has a niche in his memory because once he traveled over the line with his bride and Chicago turned out in its hundreds of thousands to greet the happy couple.

TABLET AT PLACE OF BIRTH HONORS MICHIGAN PIONEER

Just one hundred and six years ago, Rix Robinson, then a young man, more than six feet tall, forged his way through the wilderness of the Indian Territory and established trading posts along Grand River. "Uncle Rix" as he was known to his friends is given credit for the founding of western Michigan and, for more than fifty years, he played an important part in the development of this section.

A few days ago, gathered on the site of the old Robinson homestead at Ada relatives and friends unveiled a monument to Mr. Robinson. Honors were paid to the memory of the sturdy pioneer, a friend of the Indian, a two-fisted fighter in a rought and tumble bout, who remained an outstanding leader until he died at the old home in Ada, January, thirteen, eighteen hundred and seventy-five

POTATO HARVEST IS BELOW NORMAL BUT BETTERS FORECAST

The potato harvest was progressing rapidly in some communities.

Despite the long summer drought the later plantings are reported to be yielding better than had been expected. The number of tubers for each hill is below normal and the average yield promises to fall short of last season.

The early potato crop was almost a complete failure. Shippers point to the Federal market reports, as evidence of the extent of the drought injury to the early plantings.

Less than five hundred cars of potatoes have been shipped from Michigan this season compared with approximately fifteen hundred cars a year ago and two thousand cars two years ago. Michian growers had few early tubers to ship this season.

More out of state potatoes were imported into Michigan in September than in an previous September in the last decade. Many cars of Wisconsin and Minnesota potatoes have been routed right through Michigan to the Detroit market.

With the Michigan crop now moving in larger volume, Detroit is expected to draw a larger portion of its supply from this state.

Truth of the matter is, too much of this stunt flying is really dunce flying.

For many weeks John lay in the hospital, and for many weeks efforts were made to gain some clew as to his antecedents, but in vain. He showed, but also by the intelligence with which he began to pick up fragments of sentences, like a clever child learning to talk, that his mind was strong enough in the present, though it was a complete blank as to the past. The man's memory of his whole life before the fatal blow was entirely and absolutely erased. He neither knew his name, his language, his home, his business nor anything else. The doctors held learned consulations upon him and discoursed upon the center of memory and depressed tables, deranged nerve-cells and cerebral congestions, but all their polysyllables began and ended at the fact that the man's memory was gone, and that it was beyond the power of science to restore it. During the weary months of his convalescence he picked up reading and writing, but with the return of his strength came no return of his former life. England, Devonshire, Brisport, Mary, Granny—the words brought no recollection to his mind. All was absolute darkness. At last he was discharged, a friendless, tradeless, penniless man, without a past, and with very little to look to in the future. His very name was altered for it had been necessary to invent one. John Huxford had passed away, and John Hardy took his place among mankind. Here was a strange outcome of Spanish gentleman's tobacco inspired meditations.

John's case had aroused some discussion and curosity in Quebec so that he was not suffered to drift into utter helplessness upon emerging from the hospital. A Scotch manufacturer named M'Kinlay found him a post as porter in his establishment, and for a long time he worked at seven dollars a week at the loading and unloading of vans. In the course of years it was noticed, however that his memory, however defective as to the past was extremely reliable and accurate when concerned with anything which had occured since his accident. From the factory he was prompted into the counting-house, and the year eighteen thirty five found him a junior clerk at a salary of L120 a year. Steadily and surely John Hardy fought his way upward from post to post, with his whole heart and mind devoted to the business. In eighteen forty, he was third clerk, in eighteen forty-five he was second and in eighteen fifty-two he became manager of the whole vast establishment, and second only to Mr. M'Kinlay himself.

There were few who grudged John this rapid advancement for it was obviously due to neither chance nor favoritism, but entirely to his marvelous powers of application and industry. From early morning until late in the night he labored hard in the service of his employer, checking, overlooking, superintending, setting an example to all of cheerful devotion to duty. As he rose from one post to another his salary increased, but it caused no alteration in his mode of living, save that it enabled him to be more open handed to the poor. He signalized his promotion to the managership by a donation of L1000 to the hospital in which he had been treated a quarter of a centry before. The remainder of his earnings he allowed to accumulate in the business, drawing a small sum quarterly for his sustenance, and still residing in the humble dwelling which he had occupied when he was a warehouse porter.. In spite of his success he was a sad, silent morose man, solitary in his habits, and possessed always of a vague undefined yearning, a dull feeling of dissatisfaction and of craving which never abandoned him. Often he would strive with his poor crippled brain to pierce the curtain which divided him from the past, and to solve the enigma of his youthful existence, but though he sat many a time by the fire until his head throbbed with his efforts John Hardy could never recall the least glimpse of John Huxford's history.

On one occasion he had, in the interests of the firm to journey to Quebec and to visit the very cork factory which had tempted him to leave England. Strolling through the work-room with the foreman, John automatically, and without knowing what he was doing, picked up a square piece of the bark, and fashioned it with two or three deft cuts of his penknife into a smooth tapering cork. His companion picked it out of his hand and examined it with the eye of an expert. "This is not the first cork which you have cut by many hundred, Mr. Hardy," he remarked. 'Indeed you are wrong" John answered, smiling; "I never cut one before in my life. Impossible." cried the foreman. "Here's another bit of cork. Try again." John did his best to repeat the performance, but the brains interefered with the muscles of the cork cutter. The latter had not forgotten their cunning, but they needed to be left to themselves and not directed by a mind which knew nothing of the matter. Instead of the smooth, graceful shape, he could produce nothing but roughhewn, clumsy cylinders. "It must have been chance", said the foreman, "but I could have sworn that it was the work of an old hand."

As the years passed, John's smooth English skin had warped and crinkled until he was as brown and as seamed as a walnut. His, hair, too, after many years of iron-gray, had finally become as white as the winters of his adopted country. Yet he was a hale and upright old man and when he at last retired from the managership of the firm with which he had been so long connected, he bore the weight of his seventy years lightly and bravely. He was in the peculiar position himself of not knowing his own age, as it was possible for him to do more more than guess at how old he was at the time of his accident.

The Franco-German War came round, and while the two great rivals were destroying each other, their more peaceful neighbors were quietly ousting them out of their markets and their commerce Many English ports benefited by this condition of things, but none more than Brisport. It had long ceased to be a fishing village, but was now a large and prosperous town, with a great breakwater in place of the quay on which Mary had stood, and a frontage of terraces and grand hotels where all the grandees of the west country came when they were in need of a change. All these extensions had made Brisport the center of a busy trade, and her ships found their way into every harbor in the world. Hence it was no wonder, especially in that very busy year of eighteen hundred and seventy, that several Brisport vessels were lying in the river and alongside the wharves of Quebec.

One day John Hardy, who found time to hang a little on his hands since his retirement from business, strolled along by the water's edge, listening to the clanking of the steam winches, and watching the great barrels and cases as they were swung ashore and piled upon the wharf. He had observed the coming in of a great ocean steamer, and having waited until she was safely moored, he was turning away, when a few words fell upon his ear uttered by some one on board a little weather-beaten bark close to him. It was only some common place order that was bawled out, but the sound fell upon the old man's ears with a strange mixture of disuse and familiarity. He stood by the vessel and heard the seamen at their work, all speaking with the same broad, pleasant jingling accent. Why did it send such a thrill thorugh his nerves to listen to it. He sat down upon a coil of rope and pressed his hands to his temples. drinking in the long-forgotten dialect, and trying to piece together in his mind the thousand half-formed nebulous recollections which were surging up in it. Then he rose, and walking along to the stern, he read the name of the ship the "Sunlight," Brisport. Brisport. Again that flush and tingle through every nerve. Why was that word and the men's speech so familiar to him. He walked moodily home and all night he lay tossing and sleepless, pursuing a shadowy something which was ever within his reach, and yet which ever evaded him.

Early next morning he was up and down on the wharf, listening to the talk of the west-country sailors. Every word they spoke seemed to him to revive his memory and bring him nearer to the light. From time to time they paused in their work, and seeing the white-haired stranger sitting so silently and attentively, they laughed at him, and broke little jests upon him. And even these jests had a familiar sound to the exile, as they very well might, seeing that they were the same which he had heard in his youth, for no one ever makes a new joke in England. So he sat through the long day, bathing himself in the west-country speech, and waiting for the light to break.

And it happened that when the sailors broke off for their midday meal, one of them, either out of curiosity or good nature came over to the old watcher and greeted him So John asked him to be seated on a log by his side, and began to put many questions to him about the country from which he came and the town. All which the man answered glibly enough, for there is nothing in the world that a sailor loves to talk of so much as of his native place, for it pleases him to show that he is no mere wanderer, but that he has a home to receive him whenever he shall choose to settle down to a quiet life. So the seaman prattled away about the town hall and the Martellow Tower, and the Esplande and Pitt Street and High Street, until his companion suddenly shot out a long, eager arm and caught him by the wrist. 'Look here, man", he said in a low, quick whisper. "Answer me truly as you hope for mercy. Are not the streets that run out of the High Street Fox Street, Caroline Street, and Geo. Street in the order named. "They are" the sailor answered, shrinking away from the wild flashing eyes. And at that moment John's memory came back to him, and he saw, clear and distinct his life as it had been and as it should hve been, with every minutest detail traced as in letters of fire. Too stricken to cry out, too stricken to weep, he could only hurry away homeward wildly and aimlessly—hurry as fast as his aged limbs would carry him, as if, poor soul, there were some chance yet of catching up the fifty years which had gone by. Staggering and tremulous, he hastened on until a film seemed to gather over his eyes, and throwing his arms into the air wth a great cry. "Oh, Mary, Mary. Oh my lost, lost life", he fell senseless upon the pavement.

The storm of emotion which had passed through his and the mental shock which he had undergone, would have sent many a man into a raging fever; but John was too strong-willed and to practical to allow his strength to be wasted at the very time when he needed it most. Within a few days he realized a portion of his proprty, started for New York and caught the first mail steamer to England. Day and night, night and day, he trod the quarter deck, until the hardy sailors watched the old man with astonishment, and maveled how any human being could do so much upon so little sleep. It was only his unceasing exercise, by wearing down his vitality, until fatigue brought lethargy, that he could prevent hmself from falling into a very frenzy of despair. He hardly dared ask himself what was the object of this wild journey. What did he expect Would Mary be still alive. She must be a very old woman. If he could but see her and mingle his tears with hers, he would be content. Let her only know that it had been no fault of his, and that they had both been victims to the same cruel fate. The cottage was her own and she had said that she would wait for him there until she heard him. Poor lass,, she had never reckoned on such a wait as this.

At last the Irish lights were sighted and passed, Land's End lay like a blue fog upon the water and the great steamer plowed its way along the bold ornish coast until it dropped its anchor in Plymouth Bay. John hurried to the railway station, and within a few hours found himself back once more in his native town, which he had quitted, a poor cork-cutter, half a century before.

But was it the same town. Were it not for the name engraved all over the station and on the hotels, John might have found a difficulty in believeing it. The board, well paved streets, with the tram lines laid down the center, were very diffrent from the narrow, winding lanes which he could remember.

The spot upon which the station had been built was now the very center of the town, but in the old days it would have been far out in the fields. In every direction lines of luxurious villas branched away in streets and crescents bearing names which were new to the exile. Great warehouses, and long rows of shops with glittering fronts, showed him how enormously Brisport had increased in wealth as well as in dimensions. It was only when he came upon the old High Street that John began to feel at home. It was much altered, but still it was recognizable, and some few of the buildings were just as he had left them. There was the place where Fairbairn's cork works had been. It was now occupied by a great, brand-new hotel. And there was the old gray town hall. The wanderer turned down beside it, and made his way with eager steps but a sinking heart in the direction of the line of cottages which he used to know so well.

CROOKS' LANGUAGE IS ALL THEIR OWN

Three men were sitting at a table in a Detroit restaurant. Suddenly one of them picked up a menu and said, "We have here beef, lamb and duck".

But none of them waited to order. As unostentatiously as possible they picked up their hats and started for the door. But they went out of the restaurant, linked together with handcuffs.

Inspector Henry G. Garvin, of the Crime Inspection squad, tells the story. The three had only recently been released for lack of evidence in connection with a theft The remark about "beef, lamb and duck" really was a code signal; the man who made it had seen Inspector Garvin coming into the restaurant and was giving the alarm. Garvin overhearing the alarm, recognized the phrase as part of the language of the underworld, decided it indicated the men had done something as the result of which they were not anxious to meet a policeman. His suspicion was justified; all three were identenified by the victim of a nine thousand dollar jewel robbery.

"Crooks have a language all their own, designated to permit them to talk so that outsiders overhearing will not know what it's all about", says Inspector Garvin.

"In the language of the underworld men who steal jewelry are 'snipers'. A double crosser is a 'pinchy', lowest of the low among crooks. A doctor is a "croaker' Lawyers are known as mouthpieces' and the crooked lawyer is a legal bandit.

"There are castes in crookdom. Bank bandits consider themselves far above ordinary crooks.

"Among pickpockets the unskilled worker is a 'stall'. He does not have the expert touch that lifts the 'poke', but comes in handy to his troupe' in drawing the attention of the victim after the loss is discovered. The pickpocket who is old and an expert in the game is known as a 'whiz'.

Every gang has a chief who is called a 'wire take' or 'mechanic'.

"The bootleggers have their own dialect. They are known as 'alky peddlers' and their liquor is 'alky or sliss'. The habitual drunken yegg is a "spiller'. Any narcotic drug is 'Junk' to the underworld The one who uses it is a 'unker'. If the addict takes the cure he is a 'nicker'.

LAYS FLIGHTS TO MONEY WORRIES

Here goes another perfectly good illusion come down to us through the ages from Helen of Troy of nineteen hundred and twenty seven A. D.

It is an extra special pet illusion guaranteed to be one hundred per cent perfect, warranted to give complete satisfaction either in detective stories, Scotland Yard, melodramas, or when the telephone doesn't ring in the evening.

It is the infallibility of "Cherchez la Femme". When a man disappears the solution isn't necessarily; "Find the woman in the case', as everybody advises.'

That is, everybody except Inspector Thomas J. Wilson, head of the Missing Persons Bureau of the Detroit Police Department. He doesn't say that at all. He says talk of the "other woman" is all "the applesauce" in most instances. He says this is no uncertain terms, and he should know, because during the last twenty five years he has been busy in the police department straightening out domestic difficulties.

"When a mans reported missing you seldom have to look for a woman. You have her, crying and sobbing—his wife. She's the reason he left, and it is up to the investigator to find out why, declares Wilson, "Men don't run to another woman. They run away from the one they have. Don't think I am saying all wives are terrible. I am not. It is a matter of temperament. Last year there were twelve hundred men reported missing in Detroit. We found all but twelve, that is ninety nine per cent either came back of their own accord or we found them. Just twelve dropped out of sight. Just twelve couldn't be accounted for.

Why do men leave home." Inspector Wilson smiled. "There are hundreds of reasons but money usually is at the bottom of it. That is, husbands and wives quarrel because one or the other is extravagant. They quarrel because one or the other is stingy, saving to a degree. They quarrel because the cooking is bad, because the house is slovenly, because the wife is such a meticulous housekeeper the husband can't smoke in his own parlor. The nagging wife often drives her husband to revolt. There are tactless wives, humdrum wives, wives who bore, wives who are jealous. But most often trouble is based on money , improperly spent."

OLD SCHOOL IS SHRINE OF PHYTHIAN ORDER

A little country school house of one room at Eagle Harbor long has been the shrine of the Knights of Pythias. It was in it that the fraternity was born in 1859. The grand lodge purchased the building in 1905 to preserve it as a shrine.

One afternoon in 1859, Justis H. Rathbane, known as the village school master, was pondering over the story of Damon and Pythias and he conceived the idea of a fraternity based in this story. That afternoon he drafted the ritual. The order has a great growth and order has had a great growth and thousands of members in the many lodges throughout the United States.

GUARD DURING WINTER FOR SUMMER COTTAGES

Keego Harbor with other summer resort communities is making plans to balk its usual contingent of hoboes which annually follows the retreating army of summer cottages who have returned to the city for the winter.

The wanderers find the deserted cottages are ideal places in which to spend a few days. The furniture is left in most of them over the winters and occasionally some person takes a chance by leaving bed clothing.

The hoboes are in the habit of stopping at one of the cottages for several days and then on their departure carrying away whatever strikes their fancy.

Cottage owners this year have made arrangements for a patrol to guard their property through the winter.

Its easy enough to bear other people's burdens. They are always so much lighter than ours.

Plant parsley in your window box. You will then have a garnish for meats and fish all through the winter.

Detroit Bound
You'll Always Hear
"Rooms are Larger at the Detroit-Leland"

There is no initiation into the great fraternity of those who travel. Yet it is legion—and it is one of the most exclusive in the world.

When a new contribution appears to add comfort and vivacity, you hear of it in the smoking rooms of crack trains, in the saloons of ocean greyhounds, or in the lounges of great hotels.

So, today, you hear—"Rooms are larger at the new Detroit-Leland—airier, more luxurious, and cuisine and service transcend perfection."

It is an endorsement that can not be bought, for the fraternity is jealous of its endorsements.

You who have envisaged the ideal hotel may safely follow those connoisseurs whose endorsements have brought international renown to the new Detroit-Leland.

A. A. P. A. Circularizes State Legislators

The final charge by the A. A. P. A. representative of "intolerable interference in governmental affairs" by those who are trying to force their "fanatical and dictatorial will upon the people" can be answered from the pages of history The Eighteenth Amendment was made a part of the Constitution by a larger and more enthusiastic majority in Congress and in state legislators than any other amendment As to "intolerable interference in government affairs" the opponents of prohibition should recall that unsavory bit of recorded history in 1918, during the World War, when the brewers' organizations insidiously and disloyally interfered in the affairs of the the Government and because of their action were investigated by a sub-committee of the U. S. Senate, which discovered that they were circulating pernicious propaganda mixed with marked disloyalty through newspapers, magazines, and books placed in the public libraries, paid for by the Wholesale Liquor Dealers Association, while at the same time they were doing all in their power to block legislation for food conservation in the interests of providing our American Expeditionary forces with food supplies, and were insisting on the necessity of keeping the barley for the use of the beer-factories. The liquor interests have always tried to exercise "intolerable interference" in the politics of this country, by electing to office men who would protect their business.

These false, foolish frenzied attacks on prohibition in a circular letter to the members of state legislatures are evidence not of the strength but of the weakness of their cause. They are wildly agitated not because of the failure of prohibition but because of its success, and the fact that it is so popular with the people that in spite of the desperate efforts of the A. A. P. A., one dry Congress after another is elected.—The Union Signal.

Report of the Sheriff for Week Ending December 19th, 1927

Francis Byrd, who was surrendered to this County by the Police of Lansing as a parole violator, was taken before Judge Chester in the Circuit court on Monday. His probation order was revamped by the Court and Byrd, who has been supporting his wife and children since his first trouble here was released. He will have to answer to a liquor charge in the Ingham Co. courts.

A Ford Sedan, stolen in Toledo was recovered Wednesday by the Sheriff's Dept. The man accused of the theft, Hatman, was later arrested in Toledo.

The Prosecuting Attorney and the Sheriff were in Lansing Wednesday in conference with the Public Safety Department.

On Thursday, Gaylord Stevens was arrested in Jackson by Inspector Behan on request of the Sheriff. Gaylord pleaded guilty Saturday before Judge Fitzsimmons to stealing (by conversion) a watch from a senior in Addison High School on Oct. 8. He was assessed $55.90, fine and costs or 30 days in jail. The money was not in evidence so Stevens is our guest today. The watch was recovered.

On Thursday, Fred Rose, who hails from Jefferson Twp, and who on November 2, very narrowly averted a serious accident on Ry and Union Sts in Hillsdale, was convicted before a Jury in Justice Fitzsimmons court of reckless driving and was fined $25 and costs of $35.30 or 45 days in jail. Rose is 12 on our register today. Mrs. Doris Ruth, whose baby almost miraculously escaped serious injury in the accident was the complainant in the case and she did not hesitate in telling the Jury just what happened. It probably was not very pleasant for Mrs. Ruth to take the initiative in this case, but she considered it her duty to Society and she did it and did it remarkably well. If we had plenty more Mrs. Ruths scattered over the state, "Reckless driving would speedily become very unpopular.

Another matter which was threatening the peace and happiness of the SW section of our county was straightened out this week. It was reported to this office a couple of weeks ago by the State Depart. of Health that Mr. Kuster, who operates a meat market in Camden was accused of having purchased a sick cow and after dressing it out at night, placed it on sale in his market and was thus responsible for the epidemic of typhoid fever that is prevalent in that vicinity. Careful investigation by this office assisted by Dr. Clark of Lansing, has proven this report against Mr. Kuster to be a malicious rumor and entirely without foundation. The cow in question was sold by its owner to the rendering plant in Angola.

A. C. Wilson, alleged bootlegger of Wheatland Twp. who was arrested for selling a quart of moon to officers of the Sheriff's Dept., was examined before Justice Fitzsimmons Friday. Only three witnesses were called to the stand by Prosecutor Lewis and the case was adjourned for a few days.

Era Hutton arrested in Montgomery for selling liquor, waived his examination before Justice Aldrich and was bound over to present term of court. Bond of $1000 not furnished.

At exactly 11:50 p. m. Thursday the Sheriff in person, received word from Sheriff Bly of Bryan, that the Huntertown Ind. bank had been held up and that they had captured one of the men and had the other in a swamp near Silvermail farm in Amboy Twp. The Sheriff called Deputy Wood and hurried to the scene and found by awakening some of the neighborhood that the robber was still at large and the chase abandoned. We verified this report in Pioneer and there in company with the night watch and two other young men from that place, returned to the locality and began to warn the farmers all over that locality. We feared that this robber, who had discarded his overcoat and all the heavy silver would spend the balance of the night in someone's barn and when that someone came out to do his chores in the morning he would be met at the point of a gun and forced to take the chap to some city and thus prevent his capture. We stayed at this job until nearly day break over terrible roads and finally came back to Hillsdale, realizing that some one would surely see the man and call us. That is what happened. Mr. Sawyer called us after the bandit had been seen by several different people in the neighborhood 13½ miles south. The bandit hid himself in an abandoned barn and the Sheriff himself did not see him in the basement of the barn and started to hunt in the adjoining woods. What we want to say here is that it was due to the splendid cooperation and assistance of the farmers in the neighborhood and not to any particular officer or officers, that the bandit was arrested. We did not authorize or furnish the article published in Daily News in Friday. It was given to the Reporter by Officers from Indiana and Ohio and the Daily News accepted it in good faith. We are proud of you fellows over South and hope we can work together again sometime.

The Peaceful Old Farm Home

"How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood". This comes to us with a thrill as we remember the hallowed days long since gone by when the old farm home was in its prime and the children were all there and Father and Mother were in their early life and happiness reigned supreme. From Successful Farming we copy the following and commend it to our readers for study and retrospection:

"The Farm Home—what a hallowed name! How full of enchantment and how dear to the heart.

The farm home has an influence that is stronger than death. Ah! the home of our childhood. Those words fall upon the ear with so much noise and recall the scenes of innocence and happy childhood now numbered with the past.

The farm home, the place of refuge. Here the mind is so at rest the day's turmoil becomes quiet. We feel it so when we seek and enter it after the busy cares and trials of the day are over. We can get joy elsewhere but it is not the joy and satisfaction of the farm home.

We all speak in some way to the spirit "Home." May it rise up with new and hidden emotions which, even when mingled with pain, we will be glad to say "Home, Sweet Home."

A prominent magazine informs us there is a scarcity of doctors in the country districts to-day. Possibly this is true, but we believe the field of the average physician has been broadened ten-fold. In the days of poor sandy, muddy highways a doctor in every village found it hard at certain seasons to get to his patients promptly in fact many times his patients suffered untold agonies and sometimes died before the first aid doctor could get to them. In those days one doctor could only cover a small territory. Today with splendid all-season road in all directions a doctor located 10 miles from the scene of his activities is fully as accessable as the city man. He can receive his call by phone go to his heated garage, start his fleet car and be on his way at forty miles per hour almost before the old time doctor could get his horse out of the stable. Thus has everyday efficiency increased. Under these circumstances the country doctor does not have to be close to his field and neither does it require so many of them. One physician in three small village communities is sometimes amply sufficient, although it seems at times as if North Adams and surrounding territory would support one more doctor quite well. Our physician is harassed night and day and travels sometimes into other communities ten miles away. The fact remains, that large numbers of young doctors are every year being turned loose from our universities, but they are not seeking country locations. Most of them prefer to hang out their shingle in some large city and run the gauntlet of competition which is nowadays extremely keen in all lines of practice. But even at that the average physician is kept busy in cities for there are always more emergency cases and he likes it better because more of his work comes to him. Money is free and ready in the cities and higher fees are asked and paid cheerfully. Hence the city is attractive to the young medic.

Farm Tenancy Makes Slow Gains

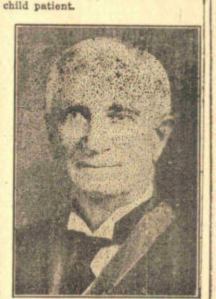
SEARS-ROEBUCK AGRICULTURAL FOUNDATION

THE increase in farm tenancy in the United States in the last twenty-five years has been comparatively slow, says the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. In 1925, 38.6 per cent of all farms were operated by tenants compared with 35.3 per cent in 1900, according to the census bureau. From 1880 to 1900, however, tenancy increased 25.6 per cent to 35.3 per cent of all farms.

In many cases, tenancy is merely the stepping stone between working for wages on the farm and farm ownership, according to investigations by the United States Department of Agriculture. Nearly half of the tenants, it was found, had previously worked for wages. Three-fourths of the farmers under twenty-five years of age were tenants, while three-fourths of those over sixty-five years were owners. Cases in which men slip backward are not wanting, as about one out of every nine tenants once owned his own farm.

Absentee landlordism is rare. More than 90 per cent of rented farms are owned by landlords living nearby and only 5 per cent by persons living out of the state in which the farm is located. Most landlords are ex-farmers, and four-fifths of them own only one farm. According to the 1925 farm census, 80 per cent of the tenants in the north central states were related to the landlord.

IN a miniature workshop, at the far end of a corridor of the University of Michigan Hospital, Pat Scully, six feet, broad-shouldered and seventy-two, may be found bending over a broken toy from the cot of a child patient.



"PAT" SCULLY

He wears the white gown of the operating room and, coming upon him unexpectedly, a visitor might easily imagine that he had stepped into a surgeon's private laboratory. But Scully is no ordinary man of science. He is rather the practitioner of an art—the art of bringing joy to the hearts of little children and smiles to pinched, wan faces blanched with pain.

Every medical convention, no matter where, sends him a wire or a greeting by a returning doctor. It is stated on competent authority that he knows personally a larger number of distinguished medical men than any other living person. Certain it is that he can relate more personal anecdotes concerning the great doctors of this country than any other man in America.

Whence came this healer who is not a doctor, this confrere of surgeons who is not an anatomist, this fellow-worker of scientists who never took a degree himself?

Forty-nine years ago, Pat Scully came to the U. of M. hospital from a farm near Adrian, Mich., to undergo an operation. When it was all over and the doctor said, "Pat, you may go home tomorrow," he startled the hospital management by announcing in a musical Celtic voice, "I'm not going home; I'm going to stay here".

And stay there Pat Scully did. While lying on his hospital cot he had seen a vision. He saw the faces of little children furrowed by pain and they called to him piteously to help them in their suffering. In his wheel chair he had visited the children's wards and talked to the little sufferers. And when his case was ready for discharge his mind was made up. He would stay at the hospital and amuse the children. He would scrub the floors, mow the lawns, do other useful tasks but, chiefly, he would do all in his power to ease the suffering of the children by diverting their minds from their afflictions.

He was only a layman, but he had a great, horny hand that was as tender as that of a mother. His smile, his eyes and his voice were charged with hope and assurance and his great love for children was his ruling passion. His odd jobs cannot, in all probability, be matched in

ENGLISH SURGEON LAUDS GRAND RAPIDS HOSPITAL

GRAND RAPIDS.—The latest in hospital equipment at St. Mary's hospital evoked the admiration of a number of visiting English surgeons who, during their sojourn in this city recently, inspected the local hospitals.

Surgical clinics, with operations being performed in all the operating rooms and pathological demonstrations in the laboratories, were witnessed by the visitors.

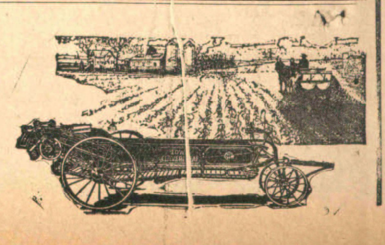
According to Dr. Carl Snapp, the surgeons were especially interested in the Bacon plan of construction at St. Mary's which is unique because of its completeness.

SPECIAL SERVICES OPEN MARYGROVE COLLEGE

The new Marygrove College opened in Detroit recently with special services in which a large number of the Catholic clergy of this city participated. A solemn high Mass was sung by the Rev. Fr. John P. McNichols, S. J., president of the University of Detroit, who also delivered the sermon.

This is the first Catholic college for women in Detroit. The assembled students and faculty members assembled in Madame Cadillac Hall and marched in academic procession around the spacious campus previous to the chapel services. George Herman Derry, Ph.D., is president of the college, which is conducted by the Sisters Servants of the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

A new parish, at Farmington, Mich., is being organized under the direction of the Rev. Fr. Edward J. O'Mahoney, formerly chaplain at St. Joseph's Retreat, Dearborn. It will be known as Our Lady of Sorrows and a new church and school are expected to be ready for occupancy next year.



PARTY SALADS AND COCKTAILS

PARTY refreshments are always a problem, whether the party be a luncheon, afternoon or evening bridge, or a children's affair. The urge to provide something unusual is always present, yet something which will be enjoyed by all the guests. Usual foods, treated in a novel manner seem the best solution, and what group of foodstuffs is more generally liked than the fruits! They lend themselves to an infinite variety of dishes and can go into almost any course of a formal dinner or form the main part of simple refreshments.

Cocktails and salads are good examples of this versatility of fruit dishes, and what could be more charming than a butterfly or a candle salad! Either may be prepared in a short time before guests arrive and kept cold in the ice-box until the time comes to serve it.

A "Butterfly" Salad

To arrange the butterfly salad, take half a banana, split lengthwise, and lay it across the middle of a plate. On either side place half slices of canned Hawaiian pineapple for fore wings and quarter slices for hind wings. Slices of stuffed olives spot the wings, strips of pimiento form wing and tail bars and antennae, and the pointed ends of black ripe olives, the eyes. A leaf of lettuce, small and cup shaped, with a mound of pineapple cream dressing may be placed at one side.

[illegible] salad is even simpler than the butterfly, and uses almost the same ingredients, though these may be varied. A double slice of pineapple topped by an apple ring supports vertically, a peeled banana. An old fashioned handle is suggested by a section of sliced green pepper and the flame by a preserved kumquat perched at the top. Bits of toothpick may be used to hold handle and flame in place. Any desired dressing may be served, though whipped cream mayonnaise is very satisfactory.

A decorative salad is readily made of alternating sections of orange and pineapple radiating from a center of half an apricot or preserved kumquat.

A decorative salad is readily the same way as the star using petals of banana strips and a golden heart of well drained crushed Hawaiian pineapple.

A Delicious Fruit Cocktail

Fruit cocktails may be of infinite variety according to the season and taste of the mixer. A good working rule provides an acid fruit, a juicy fruit, a variety of color and something crisp, either raw fruit or chopped nuts. Canned pineapple, grapefruit or orange sections give the refreshing acid tone and juiciness.

For a de luxe fruit cocktail try diced sliced canned pineapple, halved grapes, diced bananas, a dash of lemon juice to add piquancy, and a red maraschino cherry to add color.

CANDIES FOR CHRISTMAS

CANDIED pineapple by itself or as part of candy recipes is well known, but often the housewife who wants to supply Christmas delicacies at a reasonable cost turns aside from the candied fruit, thinking that it is too expensive.

Probably there is something in her belief if she buys it at the stores. But there is no reason why she cannot candy her pineapple herself, using canned sliced pineapple.

Using one of the cans containing eight slices of Hawaiian pineapple, she will find that after cooking she has almost two pounds of candied pineapple which cost her about fifty cents.

Candied Pineapple Delicious

Candied pineapple can be used in many different ways. It is delicious in fruit cakes, ice cream, fruit fillings such as dates, candies, etc. Divinity, fudge, Turkish paste, and many other candies use this delicious form of pineapple to good advantage. And there are many delicious candies which use pineapple just as it comes from the can, such as fudge, penuchi, etc.

A candy which contains pineapple is an especially valuable one from a dietetic standpoint. The fruit contains elements which aid digestion. Such candy may be given to the children in larger quantities than may ordinary candy. This is an especially important point now that the holiday season is here and boxes of candy from the stores and from friends begin to arrive in such profusion. It is impossible to refuse children permission to eat candy, so how much better it is to provide candies which not only contain fruit, but a fruit with a dietetic value.

To Make Candied Pineapple

To make candied pineapple, open can sliced Hawaiian pineapple, and simmer the slices in their own syrup to which one cup of sugar has been added. Simmer until transparent, and then drain. A large, flat bottomed pan is best for this purpose. Then make a syrup of two cups sugar, one cup boiling water. Boil to a thread, then dip the pineapple slices into the syrup, holding them by a fork, and let drain on oiled paper.

When using the pineapple in candies, it should be cut into small pieces much as one would cut citron or maraschino cherries.

Orange Divinity: Boil two cups sugar, two-thirds cup light corn syrup, and one-third cup orange juice without stirring until it reaches 270° F. and is brittle when tested in cold water. Remove the pan from the heat and set it in a pan of cold water to stop the boiling instantly. Beat the whites of two eggs and slowly pour the syrup over them, beating until thick. Then add six chopped candied cherries, one-fourth cup candied pineapple, two tablespoons chopped crystallized ginger, and one teaspoon lemon juice. Pour into a buttered pan, cool and mark in squares.

Pineapple Cream Caramels: Mix one cup granulated sugar, one cup brown sugar, one-half cup corn syrup, and one cup evaporated milk. Boil until the candy reaches the soft ball stage (240° F.) Just before removing from the fire add two tablespoons butter. Stir in one cup chopped candied pineapple and one teaspoon of vanilla. Pour out on a buttered dish and cut in squares.

Hawaiian Delight: Soak five tablespoons of gelatin in one-half cup of cold water for ten minutes. Mix one-third cup orange juice, two tablespoons lemon juice and one teaspoon grated orange rind and let stand while preparing the other ingredients. Bring two cups of sugar and one-half cup hot water to boiling, add the gelatin and boil for twenty minutes. Remove from the heat, add the fruit juices and rind. Strain the gelatin into a pan which has first been wet in cold water; place the pan in another pan of cold water. When it is set, add one-half cup diced candied pineapple to the remainder of the gelatin which will now be beginning to set. Pour this part over the first half. When firm, turn it out on a board dredged with sifted powdered sugar. Cut in cubes and roll in sifted powdered sugar. This will make a two layer paste which will be novel as well as delicious.

Pineapple Fudge: Boil the following ingredients to the soft ball stage, (240° F.): two cups sugar, one cup milk, two tablespoons cocoa, and two tablespoons cooking fat. Remove from the fire and add one teaspoon of vanilla, one teaspoon lemon extract, two tablespoons cream, one-half cup chopped English walnuts, and one-half cup chopped candied pineapple, or use the pineapple as it comes from the can. Beat the mixture until it is soft and creamy, put it back on the stove and heat, stirring constantly until melted; then pour it into a buttered tin, and when partly cool cut in squares.

Dissolving The Elect

Michigan has at last seen fit to take that fatal step in regard to the whiskered bunch at Benton Harbor—and the Cult will be dissolved by orders of Michigan's Supreme Court. Well, this is slow justice. For years the Apostle of Whiskerdom has been running a house of ill-fame on the shores of our beautiful Lake Michigan. Some how our state authorities have winked at his nefarious business and let it pass. But once upon a time the decent law abiding people of Benton Harbor and the church people all over Michigan rose as one and said "this must cease" and Lansing paid attention.

They organized a State Police squad and in the utmost secrecy departed for the wicked House of David. It must have been conducted extremely sly since every other attempt to enter House of David has been given away before the officers were within miles of their destination. The posse reached the stronghold of vice in the unexpected hour,—they found King Ben in his bed; in front of the bed were the silken habiliments of a member of the fair sex. One alert trooper opened a closet door not far away and crouched in the corner was the shame faced figure that fitted the silk garments, and she was as in the beginning—poor foolish girl—absolutely nude. Altogether there were three or more other young ladies ensconed in the same building in bedrooms furnished in the finest richest style with silken draperies and perfumed until you could smell them clear out on the street. There were no others except a couple of underlings whom King Ben placed up in the garret in rags to attend to his personal drudgery.

The State Police took Benjamin out of his warm bed, they hastily slammed on his pants and his other necessary garments and hiked him to jail and since that people all over the state have been wondering how he was coming out with it. The King was so horrified at his predicament and the brutality of his captors that he could only talk in whispers and pray for their souls. He could or would not use his legs and was carried on a cot into the court room where ail the parody of a trial was given him There are those now who claim he is a much abused man and a christian, but the state troopers certainly have his measure in full and while he probably never will be punished, he is a Pariah as far as the law is concerned and the House of David—well better oust them from our state. The days of legalized vice are past.

He Don't Choose

President Coolidge made a solemn announcement last fall and that announcement has practically broken politicians in this country. They are undone by their own petard. The fact that America must have a good President does not seem to concern these vote sharks. They are too hard-boiled. Any arrangement which they can make with the candidates and the electorate in their opinion stands, but they have reckoned slightly wrong in Coolidge's case. President Calvin Coolidge belongs to a good old Puritan stock whose antecedants are and always have been, built on the solid rock of common sense and honesty. Realizing that his past service as chief executive has been irksome and more or less disagreeable, has been well-nigh nerve killing and dangerous to health and peace of mind, Calvin Coolidge and his good wife are unanimous that they want no more of it, and with their usual Puritan directness they have so signed to the Czars of politics. For a while these czars tried to coax and coddle Calvin into double crossing his excellent word. They have tried to cause him to believe his services must be given to his native land; that he was turning down the opportunity of a life time for greatness and glory—but they have shot at random—so to speak.

The empty rantings of these political harpies effected the president about as much as a mosquito on his probosis on a hot summer's night. Mr. Coolidge (the Saints preserve him) is a man of his word. He's a man who is square and above board When he says "no" it means just that, and he has never learned to crook his spine and his talk to conform to Washington political etiquette, meaning "yes" when he says "no" and saying "no" when he means "yes". The bewildered party whips are now up a tree for political timber—that is—timber which might bring home the bacon.

There's Hoover—he's a mighty man in Washington and has been a Colosus since his war time appointment to "food control" but he's a piker. How many votes could he corner? There's "Black Jack" Pershing, a wonder in military tactics, and the God of the American Legion but his administration might prove too much like U. S. Grant's—a frost. There's Lowden, the farmer friend of Illinois. Good in the middle west but in oblivion everywhere else. There's Charles Evans Hughes Ex-Secretary of State, but he's too old and he couldn't stand the strain, and a few others we might mention—all too far fetched for the race. Verily Mr. Coolidge has cast a bomb into the political camp this time!

The Wet Howl Is Not Important

They tell us the Prohibition amendments have injured and seriously crippled the hotel business in all parts of the country. They try to illustrate to us how the hotel depends upon the sales of its bar for profits, and without this necessary evil the hostelry must quit. Well, for a while it looked as if these wet boys were actually making folks believe their story. Small town hotels in every community were being locked up for want of good patronage or some other good, bad or indifferent reason. Proprietors claimed the business had gone on beyond them and was stopping atthe city hotels all because the patrons could not buy a drink as they used to do. Some of our sad faced brethren probably took this stuff right in but a lot of others did no such thing. Investigation showed the wets were slightly mistaken or a little misleading in their remarks. The State of Michigan wasrap idly being honey-combed with high grade gravel roads and in places concrete ways stretched for miles. The small town hotel naturally had no charms for the drummer or the transient who could drive his car 100 miles per day and go and come as he pleased spending his evenings in the big town with its movies and other forms of amusement. It was easy to see why he passed by the little town hotel with its cold up-stairs rooms, wash basin conveniences and no bath rooms That alone explained the Waterloo of small town hotels. Liquor had next to nothing to do with these conditions as we ascertained later. If you think the hotel business has been hurt just page the hotels of gigantic proportions being built in cities. More and more of them to take care of trade. Most of these big places are just as free of liquor as any country town can be, and perhaps our wet friends do not realize that the personnel of the traveling salesman has been radically metamorphosed during the past 25 years. The old type red nose verbose cursing rough customer salesman is no more. His place is now filled by a real gentle manly sort of solicitor who goes about trying to make the morals of the country a little better. He no longer takes his prospects into the bar room expecting to create an air of business by means of several good whiskies. Far from it. But the fact remains hotels are getting more numerous all the time—in the centres of business—and why shouldn't they? Down in Chicago last June they opened the Stevens Hotel at a cost of 27 millions of dollars, and there is not a saloon in it or within sight of it where a stranger could get liquor. Instead of a bar room they have installed a library of 25,000 volumes and the patrons use it—you bet but they are always sober when they leave it. Eight hundred and forty hotels were erected in the United States last year at a cost of four hundred millions of dollars—and "booze" has very little to do with running these hotels. Of course the days of country taverns are past, the automobile fixed that—but please don't accuse poor old John Barleycorn of such power—for he has not got it. His whiskers are trimmed and soon his teeth will be mostly drawn.

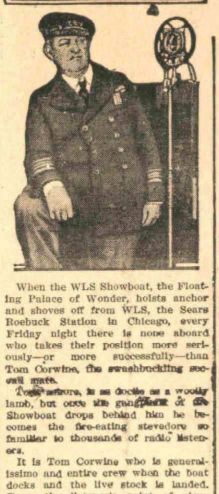
Second Mate of WLS Showboat



When the WLS Showboat, the Floating Palace of Wonder, hoists anchor and shoves off from WLS, the Sears Roebuck Station in Chicago, every Friday night there is none aboard who takes their position more seriously—or more successfully—than Tom Corwine, the swashbuckling second mate.

Tom ashore, is as docile as a woolly lamb, but once the gangplank of the Showboat drops behind him he becomes the fire-eating stevedore so familiar to thousands of radio listeners.

It is Tom Corwine who is generalissimo and entire crew when the boat docks and the live stock is landed. From the listener's point of view, Tom makes the Showboat's hold sound like Noah's Ark must have sounded at meal time. Cows, calves, sheep, hogs, an occasional horse—he can imitate them all and at the same time make it sound as though the whole crew is talking and yelling. When Tom is not unloading live stock, he takes his seat at the microphone and creates the swish-swish which sounds for all the world like an old side-wheeler pushing her blunt nose into a sluggish river current.

Two priests of the Detroit diocese were buried recently, the Rev. Fr. Stark McCusker, assistant pastor of St. Catherine's church, Detroit, and the Rev. Fr. George O'Sullivan, pastor of St. Agatha's church, Gagetown. Previous to taking charge of the Gagetown church, Father O'Sullivan was in charge of churches at Gaines and Argyle, Mich.

Members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Ladies Auxiliary from all over Michigan attended the biennial convention of the society held in Detroit. The Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. An inspection of the Ford airport, a banquet and a lake ride were features of the convention.

A Day With tho Co. Nurse

County Nurse Belle Louise Barnstead does not lead the easy going life which some people suspect, according to her statement which appeared in the Hillsdale Daily News last week. In one day she visited three schools, gave three talks to mothers, and one home call, besides some talks in different schools. In these schools she found and examined 58 students. At the last school she inspected 27; and found 22 defectives; some from poor teeth, some from poor vision; some from underweight and others for tonsils.

From what we learn about the duties of the Public Health Nurse as laid out by the Board of health she would have to possess several more personalities and 17 pairs of limbs to be in so many different places at the same moment and to follow instructions to the letter. Human nature could not endure it, yet the nurse goes on doing all she can to raise the standards of health in this county. week in and week out.

In Hillsdale County she reports there are 5,000 school children in all departments: 146 one-room schools; 14 graded schools; 18 townships with an area around 700 square miles which must be covered during the season. From her report of the last school inspected, it would seem the average of defectives was rather high notwithstanding the county supposes we are largely free from such sordid conditions that interfere with progress and highest efficiency in our schools. Further it might be said we are paying a corps of highly trained teachers to stress hygiene.

If this has been done as we hoped for, during the past fifteen years in our school curriculum, it is high time there should be a decided falling off in defectives.

Be this as it may, a goodly part of the expense we are furnishing to discover these defectives could well be transferred to preventing them.

This does not mean abolishing the public nurse, but it does signify we want more strenuous care of the juvenile health, 1st—at home by the parents, 2nd—better supervision by the teachers, and a determination to undo some of the hygienic bugbears instilled in o young minds at home.

VELVET IS SMART WINTER TEXTURE

This is a season of velvet. Transparent or chiffon velvet, printed or cut velvets, sheer fabrics striped and dotted with velvet, velvet trimming and appliques. For every hour of the day or evening, there is nothing smarter than velvet. It seems that every woman is wearing this gorgeous material and if the French sayings that, "every woman is lovely in velvet". is true, nothing but loveliness will be seen this winter.

The sheer, supple transparent velvet easily leads the mode and it is especially adapted to the draped styles so fashionable at the present time. The wonderful sheen of the material furnishes sufficient brilliance and consequently little or no trimming is required for a frock of this kind of velvet. For an afternoon gown, a bit of real lace or a shoulder flower is adequate and for evening a rhinestone ornament placed on the shoulder or belt of the frock is just the right touch. Supplemented by beads and bracelets, which are a necessary part of every well-dressed woman's wardrobe now the picture is complete and flawless.

Velvet is a very versatile material with the dark colors now in vogue, brown, black, blue, green and wine.

For the long coat of the winter ensemble the richest and most distinguished material is velvet. Lined with a lighter shade of crepe de chine and trimmed with fluffy fur the velvet coat heads the list for richness and elegance. This may be worn with a dress of the same material or with one in the same color of crepe satin crepe romaine or georgette. And right in the heel of the velvet comes the soft English broadcloth which is also extremely elegant. The dress worn with this may be of the broadcloth which is light enough in weight to be used for this purpose or it may be of any of the other materials.

A fine rep is used for the morning or street gown which is more on tailored lines and occasionally see a gown of this sore made of the familiar plain kasha. There are several nw figured materials also, one especially of dark wool with a small geometric pattern in gold threads, something on the order of the metal kasha. A certain dressmaker is using a black crepe romaine which has fine gold stripes. Figured velvets are lovely, and these are all in small designs.

MAN CHARGES WIFE OF 60 WAS ATTENTIVE TO YOUTH

Testimony was to be submitted to Circuit Judge M. L. Dunham by Mrs. Emma Rogers, sixty years old, to meet the charges made yesterday by her husband, Milo Rogers, sixty-five, to whom she was married forty four years ago at Ravenna.

Rogers claims his wife when he was ill, about two years ago, diverted her attentions to a young farmhand, Cfillord Reed and neglected him while he was ill. It was testified during the hearing yesterday that Mrs. Rogers purchased an automobile for Reed and was a frequent companion on short motor trips.

Mrs. Rogers who seeks a divorce decree on a cross bill, charges the burden of their financial affairs farm management fell upon her when her husband became disinclined to work and that it was necessary to employ help.

She denies charges of undue attention to Reed and insists the nuclecs of their property was a home and twenty-eight acres inherited from a relative.

PERRY WOMAN FIRST TO GIVE "FIRST AID' IN SCHOOLS, BELIEF

Mrs. Mary Colburn of Perry, a teacher in the country schools of more than sixty years ago, believes she is the founder of first aid in the public schools. She declares that she always kept bandages and salve in her desk to fix up any youngster who was hurt at play.

In those days, according to Mrs. Colburn, school teachers wore heavy calfskin shoes, liberally soaked in oil heavy homespun woolen stockings, dyed with hickory nut bark, and dresses of delaine, that came, not to the knees, but to the feet.

"There were numerous theories on education in those days", declared Mrs. Colburn "that do not agree with present theories."

FACTORY GIVEN STATE BY COURT

The state now owns a woodenware factory in Manistee. An order has been signed by Circuit Judge Hal L. Cutler setting forth what part of the property of the American Woodware Co. is personal and what shall be considered real estate. The personal property is tied up in bankruptcy proceedings in Federal Court at Grand Rapids and the real estate is owned by the state, according to a previous ruling of Judge Cutler.

The latest order sets forth that all machinery and equipment of the factory used in manufacture shall be considered real estate. So Michigan's factory is all ready to operate as soon as state officials are ready to go to work.

The company failed to pay taxes on its real estate for more than six years. Finally it was advertised for tax sale and there were no buyers. The delinquent taxes and interest amounted to more than thirteen thousand dollars. The auditor general therefore deeded it to the conservation department and early in nineteen twentysix Mr Baird, then director, ordered a deputy game warden to appraise it.

Through error the deputy appraised an adjoining vacant lot and set the value at fifty dollars. The conservation department advertised the property and a sale in Manistee, August six. nineteen twenty six. An official of the American Woodware Co., purchased the factory from the State for fifty dollars and within a few days the deed was recorded here.

Then the company found itself in difficulties. The attorney general made an investigation and the State sued to set aside the deed, charging fraud and error. The court set aside the deed.

Bankruptcy proceedings were started later. Creditors wanted the machinery declared personal property to increase the firm's assets. The State asked the court to decide how much of the property it real. There is virtually no personal property left. the city of Manistee having levied in June to satisfy debt.

One of the company's chief products has been washboards.

HART IS VICTORIOUS IN UTILITY PLANT FIGHT

The seven year fight at Hart for a municipal hydro-electric plant is near realization and it is expected the new plant will be furnishing power for the village within two weeks.

The sluice gates have been closed on the south branch of the Pentwater River and the plant will start operation as soon as the water level behind the dam climbs enough to move the turbine in the power house. The closing of the sluice gates slowly is flooding four hundred acres of land above the dam.

U. S. thirty one will be a narrow isthmus, water extending a mile both ways from the highway. Near Gurney Park a bathing beach is being made as an added attraction.

It is probable that the debate will be held in December.

The visiting team will be made up of students from the Universities of Edinburgh London and Reading. Last year Western State met the team from the University of Sy, dney, Australia and the previous year, they met the team from Cambridge university.

BEGGAR HAS HARD LUCK, PICKS JUDGE AND OFFICER

Patrick Murphy, 46 years old, a cook in Wayne, Mich., had hard luck when he accosted a man leaving the Detroit College of Law for money for a "cup of coffee". The man was Patrolman Claude Brown who studies law at night at the college. Brown arrested Murphy and took him before Judge John V. Brennan, of the Recorder's Court

Judge Brennan peered over his bench at the prisoner and then said "Why you're the same man who stopped me last night on my way to school".

Judge Brennan teaches at the law college.

MEXICAN BEAN BEETLE IS REPORTED IN MICHIGAN

The Mexican Bean Beetle a pest that has caused widespread damage in the South and West, has invaded Michigan, according to Prof R. H. Pettit, head of the entomology department at Michigan State College.

This pest which attacks both field and garden beans has been found in three southeastern Michigan counties. Prof. Pettit gives a ray of temporary hope, however, when he says he expects no great commercial damage to beans in this state for the next two years even though conditions may be favorable for development of the beetle.

LONG BATTLE ON BORER EXPECTED

Despite the efforts put forth by Michigan and the other four states infested by the European corn borer, the pest has not been eradicated and partial control is all that can be expected.

A statement to this effect was issued by Professor R. H. Pettit, head of the Michigan State college entomology department.

"Control of the European corn borer and not eradication has been the primary aim of clean up measures, and regulations" he said.

Eradiation of the borer is impossible. There is no more reason to expect the borer to be exterminated, than there is to believe that it is possible to do away with numerous other insects. The pest will be present on the North American continent for a long time."

Spread of the pest cannot be prevented according to Professor Pettit for moths are able to fly at least twenty miles. To retard this natural progress is the best that can be hoped for, he said.

"Real purpose of the clean-up measures is to keep the numbers of the pest in check so that farmers may continue to grow corn at a profit. The campaign waged against the borer last spring has demonstrated that this can be accomplished.

"Continued clean-up of the infested areas will reduce the borer population sufficiently to check its spread materially and decrease the amount of damage done in the heavily infested areas."

WATCHES BEAVERS FOR DOORSTEPS

Mrs. Jeanette Wilcox can sit on the doorstep of her cabin [illegible] miles from Newberry and sometimes can count as many as 14 beavers working in the quiet waters. Once in a while she catches sight of a bear. So great is her love for the wild duck skimming the surface of the lake that in hunting time she beats a dishpan on shore to warn them that hunters are around.

Mrs. Wilcox and her husband Daniel Wilcox came to Michigan from St. Louis several years ago in search of health. She has found it in the north woods on the shores of a lake a dozen miles from the nearest town. The couple arrived with three dogs, two cats and 21 canaries.

Recently Mrs. Wilcox called for the services of Charles Blanchard state trapper. She wanted him to waylay a fox that this season has done away with 40 of her young turkeys and capped the criminal climax by assassinating, Peter, her white gobbler.

About the first start a couple can make on the sea of matrimony is to "charge" the wedding ring.

FARM MEETINGS SET AT COLLEGE

Continuation of a series of conferences with farmers on the value of types of fertilizers was announced by M. W. Trull of Michigan State college who is in charge of preliminary organization for meetings in eleven counties of the lower penisula this winter.

Extension specialists from the college soils department will visit the various counties bringing to farmers the information which the college has gained concerning use of fertilizers. The meetings will be patterned after those started last spring.

According to Trull, the campaign has three main objects. First, to show the farmer that the best financial gain is obtained by buying fertilizer on an analysis test; second, that he should buy a high test; and third, that he follow the standard list.

Dealers of commercial fertilizer firms will cooperate in the campaign. The extension specialists will remain for a week in each county. Two or three meetings will be held each day and every effort will be made to work out from farm centers to reach wide areas. Exhibits and specimens will be carried on the tour in order to demonstrate the various kinds of fertilizers and benefits to be derived from the analysis test.

Following is the schedule; Alcona county, November twenty one to twenty three; Oceana, November twenty eight to December two; Branch, December twelve to sixteen; Bay, December nineteen to twenty three; Ingham county, January two to six; Kalamazoo, January sixteen to twenty one; Macomb, January twenty three to twenty eight; Midland, February, twenty seven to March three and Newaygo, March twenty six to thirty one.

MASTODON SKELTON WILL BE SOUGHT IN GRAND RAPIDS LIMITS

Possibility of a hunt for the skeleton of a mostodon believed to be buried in the west end of Grand Rapids was voiced by Miss Marie McCabe instructor in biology at the Junior college.

Part of the skeleton was unearthed some time ago by J. Lagerway who was digging a ditch and uncovered a hip bone of the pre-historic animal.

Later an expedition composed of Gerrit Watermulder and coach B. Noblett of the Cadillac high school found other parts.

There were identified at the Kent Scientific museum as belonging to a mastodon and Miss McCabe is attempting to have an expedition organized to unearth the remainder of the skeleton.

She believes that it lived in Michigan at a period when the state was covered with sub tropical climate.

FUR PROTECTION HITS TRAPPERS

Michigan trappers and fur dealers face the most prohibitive trapping season that has been their's at any time in the past. Outside of the few unprotected fur-bearers, that include wolves, foxes, coyotes, weasels and wildcats, there remains only one animal that can be legally taken during the nineteen twenty seven to nineteen twenty-eight season. This is the skunk. And this season embraces only two and one half months from November fifteen to January thirty-one.

When at the Legislature and the Conservation Commission didn't do to the ambitions of the fur boys this year isn't worth mentioning. They left them only the most odoriferous of our furry friends to play with and if any trapper makes a living from this creature he is more than welcome to it.

Among the true fur-bearers otter, fisher, marten and beaver are protected until nineteen thirty. Outside of beaver this won't work a hardship with any trapper for the first three named are exceedingly rare. Beaver have staged a great comeback within the past few years but are not considered numerous enought as yet to permit an open season. Wardens however may have some difficulty with beaver bootleggers this coming season as they have in the past.

The pursuit of muskrat and mink is stopped until March first, nineteen twenty-eight. From present indications will be further extended after that date. This is the greatest blow that could be handed trappers and fur dealers. Unless further action is taken by the Conservation Commission mink and muskrat can be trapped in Lower Michigan from March first to fifteen of next year and in the Upper Peninsula March five to April first. Undoubtedly an order will be issued preventing this. Muskrat is the money crop and when the season is closed on rats the trappers might just as well fold up their tents and move. However, tight seasons now mean more rats when the ban is lifted.

APIARISTS WARNED AGAINST WINTER

Beekeepers should prepare their hives for the winter by protecting them against the cold and providing an adequate food supply, is the advice of the entomology department of the State College.

If the colonies are to be left out-of doors they should be protected from the winter storms by packing the hives. Six inches of insulating material should be packed on the sides and one foot on top. Tar paper may be used on top for protection against moisture.

Unless fifty to sixty pounds of good white honey or its equivalent in sugar syrup, are provided for winter food in the average hive, the bees will starve. Contrary to the belief of many individuals bees do not spend all of their time sleeping during the dormant period.

The use of sugar in furnishing food for bees that do not have sufficient honey for the winter probably is the cause of the misconception that money sometimes is adulterated with sugar. Sugar is too, expensive, however, to be used as an adulterant for market honey, according to the entomology department.

The banner honey producing section of the State is the Thumb. It is estimated that twenty-five carloads of honey are stored in the north half of Huron county alone. The honey crop was excellent all through the eastern section of the State this year.

DESPITE SLAYING CHARGE HE WILL SHARE IN ESTATE

An order for a partial distribution of the estate of Stephen J. Weiden, former hide dealer, to his adopted son, John G. S. Weiden, twenty five years old, who goes on trial in Superior Court next month on a charge of killing his foster father several years ago, and to the widow was signed yesterday by Probate Judge John Dalton.

The estate is said to be worth more than one hundred thousand dollars and the adopted son will receive one half the personal property and an undivided two thirds interest in the real estate. The remainder will go to the widow as the only otheir heir at law.

"Companionate"

Aubrey Roselle, the groom, is back at college and his bride, Josephine Haldeman-Julius Roselle, is at her father's Girard, Kansas. home, as agreed before their much discussed "companionate marriage" which allows each the option of reconsidering the vows at a later date.

BIG CROPS COST MOST TO SELL

It costs more to market each bushel of a large crop of corn or potatoes or apples than it does to market a small crop declares Dr G. F Warren agricultural economist at Cornell University, in a bulletin received here.

To put it another way, in years when a crop is large, the spread between prices in producing centers and consuming centers is more than when the crop is small.

"One would assume that a large crop could be passed through the channels of trade at less cost for each bushel than a small crop" he says. This may be true, but the distributing channel take more cents for each bushel for a large crop than a small one.

"When there is a very large crop the price in the producing area, which of course has a surplus, goes down and this increases the spread between farm and retail prices. This difference also is apparent in a comparison of farm prices in regions which do not produce enough for their own needs with regions that have surpluses.

"An average of several years when the country's apple crop was below normal shows that farm prices of apples in Rhode Island were 23 cents above New York farm prices: while an average of several surplus years shows that this difference increased to 28 cents. In large crop years, however, although both Rhode Island and New York prices dropped the greatest drops were in the surplus producing section.

"The principle that the channels of trade take a larger part of the price of a large crop than of a small crop is not restricted to apples. For 11 years, when the United States potato crop was small, the spread between the farm price at Batavia, N. Y., and in Rhode Island averaged 27 cents. In 10 large-crop years, the spread was 31 cents.

'In 20 years, when the United States corn crop was small the average Chicago price of corn was 12 cents above the Iowa farm price. and in 20 years when the crop was large, the average spread was 14 cents. The same principle also applies to hay."

STATE COLLEGE FRESHIE CLASS BEST IN HEALTH

The healthiest bunch of freshmen that ever entered Michigan State college was the verdict of Dr R. M. Olin, former state commission of health who heads the health service of Michigan State college.

Dr. Olin made the statement as he concluded examinations of the freshmen class, who under rules of the college must undergo physical tests.

Many a man's idea of charity is to give unto others the advice he can't use himself.

FAMED ORGAN AT U. OF M. REPLACED

A voice that has mixed its song with that of students for more than thirty years was hushed when the famous Freize Memorial Organ in Hill Auditorium at the University of Michigan was down and discarded—to make way for a new one that will surpass it in all points of organ excellence, but that will not take its place in the memories of departed classes for many a long year.

Back in the stern and studious nineties the University of Michigan brought to the campus, with proud pomp, the most famous organ of the day. It has just gone through a dazzing season at the Chicago World's Fair where it had been pronounced by hushed thousands as the last word. For here was an organ, the first to be built of its kind, that bellowed forth great sweeping chords, engendered solely by electricity. No brawny men or perspiring boys were needed off stage to transform by grim endeavor, human muscle into music. The changing swarming audiences that came to hear the worlds great organists play music that was at once as soft as a whisper and as grand as thunder on this instrument varied between their admiration of the tones and their amazement at the small electrical button that called forth such unlimited power.

The organ was installed in the largest assembly hall on the campus, in old University Hall. In that historic room, now much too small for even the freshman class to gather in, the entire student body met frequently for signs, rallies, prayers, concerts and admonitions by the faculty. With Albert A. Stanley, then professor of music, presiding at the console it soon became an integral part of all the meetings, playing "The Yellow and the Blue" marches, recessionals, hymns, and much of the world's famous literature of organ music.

When Hill Auditorium was built in nineteen hundred and thirteen, to meet the needs of a rapidly increasing student body, the organ was moved to the new building. The remarkable accoustical properties of the auditorium emphasized new power and beauty of the instrument little realized in its former residence.

PIGEON RIVER ELK HERD INCREASES

About twenty-four head of Jackson Hole elk were imported into Michigan in nineteen sixteen and placed in an enclosure in Roscommon county.

The elk increased very slowly and in March nineteen eighteen, the herd was split into three bands and turned loose on the plains. One band went to Turtle Lake Club grounds in Alpena county, another went into the Black Lake district of Cheboygan county, and the third was put out east of Vanderbilt, on the Pigeon river in Ostego county.

The Turtle lake band increased more or less at first but there are now few elk in that district. One large bull elk was shot north of Comins, in Oscoda county last fall and was confiscated by the department of conservation and sent to the University museum. The Black band disappeared soon after being planted. Some of the wardens are of the belief that this band consolidated with the one in the Pigeon river district north of Gaylord.

Ths Pigeon river band has increased to some extent. A. J. Brockman, keeper of the Otsego Game Refuge was instructed to make account last winter and his report indicated a herd of at least two hundred and fifty head.

Michigan elk eat grass as do deer and there is plenty of this kind of feed north of Gaylord.

The animals seem to range most of the hardwood hills, partly burned and open, such as make up that section.

Signs around an old logging camp prove that elk are there in considerable numbers during the summer months. Ground about the buildings is trampled to dust.

The Pigeon river herd does not yard in the winter, but during storms they go into small, dense tamarack and cedar swamps.

Some sportsmen report that during most of the year, elk appear to gather in small bands, on "gens" consisting of from five to ten animals while Brockma reported seeing as many as thirty in a single herd.

LAST OJIBWAY AWAITS DEATH

In a rude ramshackle house situated between two little hillocks that overlook distant Lake Superior, lives Jimmy Kish ketog, Alger county's last Ojibway Indian. Scattered about the neighboring fields now turning brown in the frosts of early autumn stand the desolated houses of his former tribal friends—now all gone to join their ancestors in the happy hunting grounds.

Jimmy is alone in the world—family, friends, old neighbors, all gone—he is the last of his race hereabouts. His rude home resembles its owner in many ways. It is weather beaten and aged and lonely, apparently awaiting with stoic patience the day when it, too, shall be vacant and lifeless.

Any pleasant autumn day, Jimmy may be found seated on one of the little hillock's gazing at the far horizons, perhaps musing on bygone days when he was a husky Indian brave. In the distance gleams the waters of Lake Superior, the Gitche Gumee of his ancestors, along whose shores they hunted and in whose waters they struck the trout and white fish.

But Jimmy's hunting days are over. He is old and afflicted with rheumatism. The storms of seventy nine winters have sapped his vitality, so he spends his declining years in meditation.

Don't cheer yet. Evening gowns now re cut to the heels on one side and to the hip on the other. There's no occasion to "hip, hip" over a one hip affair.

It is said the river residents by the thousand who depend entirely upon the Ford industries at River Rouge are now breathing easier and business is picking up in the old fashioned way

Paling The Cows Differently

"Pailing the Cows" the pet diversion of the farmer boy for ages has about passed into the realm of the mechanical. No more doth the bucksome dairy maid pass gayly to her task in the succulent meadow lands singing a favorite little ditty or whistling as the case may be. Her job has been stolen by a machine with fingers of aluminum and sinews of electricity. There is hardly a dairy farmer in this entire county whose herd climbs above the half dozen mark who does not do this irksome and traditional stunt by means of machinery, and the mechanical milker is as common about the dairy barn as the old-time corn sheller.

However, there is one fact which every successful dairy man has to admit and that is the finishing of the process have to be done by hand. There is no help so far for this condition, and we are of the opinion that mechanical milked cows eventually go to the junk much quicker than by the old way. However, there is not a dairyman in this country who would expect to do anything at the business by following the old styles. It requires too much time and time on the farm to-day is worth five times as much as it was twenty-five years ago. There is a short time only for doing every task, and these tasks come at the same time every day week in and week out. Help is scarce and high priced on the farm and the proprietor must manage to accomplish five times as much in the same duration as he once did. The result is—machinery for every task. Some of us can remember when fodder like corn stalks and straw was cut by a small feed cutter propelled by horse power. Each morning the team had to be hitched up and unhitched. One man had to feed the machine and another to take care of the tailings, and two men could not cut as much in a day as the modern high power ensilage machine will cut in a couple of hours. The mechanical milker will handle a herd of cows inside of one hour that would necessitate a half dozen men and so it goes.

RADIO'S MILESTONES OF 1927 PROGRESS

Many Years Will Be Required to Crystallize Momentous Developments of the Past Twelve Months.

By DAVID SARNOFF
Vice-President and General Manager, Radio Corporation of America.

David Sarnoff

If progress means growth in the right direction, Radio passed new milestones in 1927. Many years will be required to crystallize some of the developments of the past twelve months.

Of immediate interest to the millions of radio listeners in the United States is the marked advance made in the technique of radio reception during the year. The mystery of music and speech carried through waves in the air, rather than the technical progress of the art, was responsible for the overwhelming public interest in radio during the early days.

Remarkable strides have been made in 1927 in developing and producing receivers using lighting current as the source of power.

Ideal Moderate-Priced Receiver

The first fruits of this extensive research and engineering activity came two years ago with the development of the Radiola Speaker 104 in combination with certain types of Radiola receiving sets as a completely a. c. operated radio receiver. But simplification was necessary to achieve the ideal of a moderate-priced receiver which would operate directly off the lighting circuit.

Radio Broadcasting

Nowhere are industry and service so closely welded together as in radio; broadcasting is an essential factor in the progress of radio. No truly permanent service of radio broadcasting could be built upon the individual efforts of hundreds of stations scattered in various parts of the country.

The two greatest contributions to the progress of mass communication in 1927 were the record of the National Broadcasting Company in the field of nationwide service, and the passage of the Federal Radio Act which made order out of chaos in broadcast transmission.

Trans-Oceanic Wireless Communication

Nor has the progress of Radio been limited to broadcast transmission and broadcast reception. The invisible network of world-wide wireless communication, of which the United States is the center, has been further enlarged. In addition to the telegraphic service by wireless now maintained by the Radio Corporation with England, France, Germany, Italy, Holland, Poland, Sweden, Argentina, Brazil, Hawaii, Japan, Dutch East Indies and French Indo-China, our area of wireless communication was enlarged, in 1927, by the establishment of direct radio circuits from the United States to the Philippines, and to Porto Rico

Facsimile Transmission

Facsimile transmission by wireless in 1927 brought clearly into view the great possibilities of an entirely new system of telegraphic communications. News pictures, portrait photographs, and documents have been transmitted by radio across the ocean in facsimile form. Under special conditions photographs have been transmitted by our engineers in two minutes with satisfactory detail, and much greater speeds are forecast by laboratory developments now in progress.

Marine Radio

In ship-to-shore communication likewise, Radio made definite progress in 1927. Shipboard stations were completely modernized during the year by the installation of continuous wave tube transmitters. Direction finders again proved their aid to navigation, and some marine coastal stations further increased their range and efficiency.

It is claimed the Tuberculosis campaign which has been carried on by the Department of Public Health in Michigan has cut down the deaths from the dread malady from 102.4 percent in 1906 to 71.2 percent in 26 years. This means that 1333 lives have been saved in one year by means of tuberculosis prevention methods.

Students of the Intermediate and Primary departments of the High school will give a Christmas pageant, song by school and several recitations on Friday afternoon at 1;45 at the Congregational church. There will be a Christmas tree followed by distribution of candy and pop corn. Miss Thelma Brooks is teacher of the Primary and Miss Mason of the Intermediate.

The annual Co-op meeting of the North Adams Association was held at Masonic Hall Monday December 19th with a very good attendance. Reports of officials indicated the association to be in very good condition financially and much alive. Officers were chosen as follows: President James Post; sec., H. G. Wells; treas., Wid Pool. It was unanimously voted in favor of hiring an Agricultural agent for the county to succeed J. V. Sheap.

Services will begin promptly at 10;00 a. m. at the Congregational church next Sunday and the Xmas program will be mainly a musical one. There will be Christmas carols sung by the congregation and special numbers by the choir. Miss Ruth Quarton will read the Christmas story. Jean Young will sing a Christmas solo; piano solo by Kathleen McFarland, and a 15 minute sermon by Rev. Jandy. The children's number will be followed by distribution of candy. Everyone invited

Probably the most disappointed crowd will be those who are crazy in their opposition to prohibition. A number of bills are all ready to be introduced to modify the Volstead law, and to have a national referendum about the 18th amendment, and other things looking toward the easing up of the prohibition restrictions. But as I look the Congress crowd over, I am under the impression that the drys have just about as much of a strangle hold on the situation as they ever had, and that the wets might as well pack up their doll clothes and go home.

Last Friday night a man came to the firm of Crater and Edinger and asked what the price was on Light Birds on being informed they were 16c he brought in a pasteboard carton. The carton was weighed and the bird taken out of it weighed 2 oz exactly. A check was drawn for 2c. The bird being too small to keep in a coop was placed in a box which was opened next morning by the Book-keeper. A rush for freedom nearly distracted her. She will recover. If any body sees a sparrow with one eye slightly damaged, return to our office. Will pay for trouble.

A salary of $500 while he worked. An Income of $500 when he retired

We must all face the day when our earning powers decline, our zest for business activities diminish, and the problem of future income becomes acute.

EIGHTY-FIVE out of every 100 men, when they face this situation at 65, find themselves dependent upon the kindness of children, relatives or the charitable organizations.

You can be financially independent at 60 if you want to.

Take the case of a man of 35, who never earned more than $500 a month. He determined to be free from financial worries and able to enjoy life in his later years, and began accumulating a fund.

Upon his living expenses he spent a little more than two-thirds of his income. The rest he invested in safe securities that yielded him an average of 6% through the years. His interest and dividends were reinvested promptly.

At the age of sixty, he retired from business. He had a fortune of $112,000, of which $50,000 were actual savings and $62,000 EARNINGS FROM HIS SAVINGS and the reinvested interest and dividends. His annual income was about $6,700.

While he worked he earned $500 a month. When he retired his Income Fund paid him over $500 each month.

Wm. L. Davis and Company's Income Fund Plan

makes seemingly impossible results safely and surely possible for any man who is willing to persist and plan. The explanation of the Income Fund Plan is given in detail in our book.

BENEFIT SEEN IN NEW SPEED LAW

Michigan the only state in the Union without an automobile speed limit, measured in miles, is being watched closely for results of her new law. Almost four months have elapsed since the 35 mile an hour limit was ditched and in its stead the no speed limit introduced. What have been the recults of this daring legislative stroke. Have accidents increased Have there been more fatalities. Have drivers grown reckless. Are the State Police making more arrests.. Is the new law working out successfully.

All of these questions were put to Capt. Oscar G. Olander, commissioner of Public Safety, whose organization perhaps is more concerned with the enforcement of the traffic law than any other local or state department.

"The new law is working out splendidly," says Capt. Olander. "Arrests for reckless driving have not increased and the attitude of the driving public toward the new law is one strict observances. Accidents have not increased, neither are they likely to judging the manner in which the law has operated.

Drivers who speed around curves and over the tops of hills and those who "cut in" or try to pass others cars to the right as well as those who believe there are no speed regulations, whatever, are warned by Capt. Olander.

Many persons have the impression that there will be no limit to the lawful speed of an automobile on the highway except the speed of the car itself", he said. "They are far from the truth, for this law has set a very rigid regulation on speed. The law says that an automible shall be driven "at a careful and prudent speed, not greater than nor less than is reasonable and proper, having due regard to the traffic and of any other condition then existing and no person shall drive a vehicle up on a highway at a greater speed than will permit him to bring it to a stop within the assured clear dis sance ahead."

"Thus on a clear road with no traffic no curves or hills, and no traffic ahead of him he must drive at a speed that will enable him to stop in rear of other cars going in the same direction. If there are children playing or walking along the road his clear distance is assured only up to those children. On hills or around curves he must be able to stop within the limit of his vision for he cannot be assured that the road is clear beyond the point where he can see. If a car approaches from a side road, he can not be assured that its driver will not drive onto the road in front of him so must drive his car within control. When rain, ice and snow make the roads slippery, he must drive his car slower, for it takes a much greater distance to stop.

"There is a clause in the law that says that a car shall be driven properly. This clause affects the driver who goes down a congested road at 10 to 15 miles an hour holding many cars behind him who might otherwise travel safely at 25 or 30 miles an hour. If a motorist wishes to travel very slowly he should stay away from the main trunk lines."

Mr. O'Leary's Second Love

By CHARLES LEVER

"You may easily suppose," began Mr. O'Leary, "that the unhappy termination of my first passion served as a shield to me for a long time against my unfortunate tendencies toward the fair and such was really the case. I never spoke to a young lady for three years after, without a reeling in my head, so associated in my mind was love and sea sickness. However, at last, what will not time do' It was about four years from the date of this adventure when I became so oblivious of my former failure, as again to tempt my fortune. My present choice, in every way unlike the last, was a gay, lively girl of great animal spirits, and a considerable turn for raillery, that spared no one; the members of her own family were not even sacred in her eyes; and her father, a reverend dean, as frequently figured among the ludicrous as his neighbors.

"The Evershams had been very old friends of a rich aunt of mine who never, by the by, had condescended to notice me till I made their acquaintance; but no sooner had I done so, than she sent for me and gave me t o understand that the event of my success to win Fanny Eversham. I should be her heir and the possession of about sixty thousand pounds. She did not stop here, but by canvassing the dean in my favor, speedily put the matter on a most favorable footing, and in less than two months I was received as the accepted suitor of the fair Fanny, then one of the reigning belles of Dublin.

"They lived at this time about three miles from town, in a very pretty country, where I used to pass all my mornings, and many of my evenings, too, in a state of happiness that I should have considered perfect, if it were not for two unhappy blots—one, the taste of my bethrothed for laughing at her friends. another, the diabolical propensity of my intended father-in-law to talk politics; to the former I could submit; but with the latter submisison only made bad worse; for he invariably drew up as I receded, dryly observing that with men who had no avowed opinions it was ill-breeding; or that with persons who kept their politics as a school boy does his pocket-money never to spend, and always ready to change it was unpleasant to dispute. Such taunts as these I submitted to, as well I might, secretly resolving that as I now knew the meaning of Whig and Tory, I'd contrive to spend my life, after marriage out of the worthy dean's diocese.

"Time wore on and at length, to my most pressing solicitations it was conceded that a day for our marriage should be appointed. Not even the unlucky termination of this my second love affair can deprive me of the happy souvenior of the few weeks which were to intervene before out destined union.

"The mornings were passed in ransacking all the shops where wedding finery could be procured —laces, blondes velvets and satins, littered every corner of the deanery—and there was scarcely a carriage in a coach maker's yard in the city that I had not sat and jumped in, to try the springs, by the special direction of Mrs. Eversham, who never ceased to impress me with the awful responsibility I was about to take upon me in marrying so great a prize as her daughter—a feeling I found very general among many friends of my friends at the Kildare Street club.

Among the many indispensable purchases which I was to make and about which Fanny expressed herself more than commonly anxious, was a saddle horse for me. She was a great horse woman and hated riding with only a servant; and had given me to understand as much about half a dozen times each day for the last five weeks. How shall I acknowledge it—eqquestrianism was never my forte. I had all my life considerable respect for the horse as an animal pretty much as I dreaded a lion or a tiger; but as to any intention up on the back of one, and taking a ride, I should as soon have dreamed of taking an airing up a giraffe and as to the thought of buying, feeding, and maintaining such a beast at my own proper cost. I should just as soon have determined to purchase a pillory or a ducking stool, by way of amusing my leisure hours.

It was not difficult for him to to find where they had been. The sea at least was as of old, and from it he could tell where the cottages had stood. But alas, where were they now. In the place an imposing crescent of high stone houses reared their tall fronts to the beach. John walked wearily down past their palatial entrances, feeling heart-sore and despairing, when suddenly a thrill shot through him, followed by a warm glow of excitement and of hope, for standing a little back from the line and looking as much out of place as a bumpkin in a ball room was an old whitewashed cottage with wooden porch and walls bright with creeping plants. He rubbed his eyes and stared again, but there it stood with its diamond paned windows and white muslin curtains, the very same, down to the smallest details, as it had been on the day when he last saw it. Brown hair had become white and fishing hamlets had changed into cities, but busy hands and a faithful heart had kept granny's cottage unchanged and ready for the wanderer.

And now, when he had reached his very haven of rest, John Huxford's mind became more filled with apprehension than ever, and he became so deadly sick that he had to sit down upon one of the beach benches which faced the cottage. An old fisherman was perched at one end of it, smoking his black clay pipe and he remarked upon the wan face and sad eye of the stranger.

"You have overtired yourself" he said "It doesn't do for old chaps like you and me to forget our years"

"I'm better now, thank you", John answered. "Can you tell me friend, how that one cottage came among all those fine houses."

"Why, stid the old fellow, thumping his crutch energetically upon the ground, "that cottage belongs to the most obstinate woman in all England. That woman, if you'll believe me, has been offered the price of the cottage, ten times over, and yet she won't part with it. They have promised to remove it stone by stone, and put it up on some more convenient place, and pay her a good round sum into the bargain, but God bless you, she wouldn't so much as hear of it."

"And why was that", asked John.

'Well, that's just the funny part of it. It's all on account of a mistake. You see, her spark went away when I was a youngster and she got it into her head that he may come back some day, and that he won't know where to go unless the cottage is there. Why if the fellow were alive, he would be as old as you, but I've no doubt he's dead long ago. She's well quit of him, for he must have been a scamp to abandon her as he did.

"Oh he abandoned her, did he".

Yes—went off to the States, and never so much as sent a word to bid her good-by. It was a cruel shame, it was for the girl has been awaiting and a-pining for him ever since. It's my belief that it's fifty years' weeping that blinded her."

"She is blind," cried John, hal rising to his feet.

"Worse than that," said the fisherman. She's mortally ill, and not expected to live. Why, look ye, there's the doctor's carriage awaiting at her door."

At these evil tidings, old John sprung up and hurried over to the cottage, where he met the psysician returning to his brougham.

"How is you patient, doctor", he asked in a trembling voice.

"Very bad, very bad," said the man of medicine pompously. "If she continues to sing she will be in great danger; but if, on the other hand, she takes a turn, it is possible that she may recover;" with which oracular answer he drove away in a cloud of dust.

John Huxford was still hesitating at the doorway, not knowing how to announce himself, or how far a shock might be dangerous to the sufferer, when a gentleman in black same bustling up.

"Can you tell me, my man, if this is where the sick woman is", he asked.

John nodded, and the clergyman passed in, leaving the door half open. The wanderer waited until he had gone into the inner room and then slipped into the front parlor, where he had spent so many happy hours. All was the same as ever, down to the smallest ornaments, for Mary had been in the habit, whenever anything was broken, of replacing it with a duplicate, so that there might be no change in the room. He stood, irresolute, looking about him, until he heard a a woman's voice from the inner chamber and stealing to the door he peeped in.

The invalid was reclining upon a couch propped up with pillows and her face was turned full toward John as he looked round. He could have cried out as his eyes rested upon it, for there were Mary's pale, plain, sweet homely features as smooth and as unchanged as though she were still the half child, half woman whom he had pressed to his heart on the Brisport quay. Her calm, eventless, unselfish life had none of those rude traces upon her countenance which are the outward emblems of internal conflict and an unquiet soul. A chaste melancholy had refined and softened her expression and her loss of sight had been compensated for by that placidity which comes upon the faces of the blind. With her silvery hair peeping out beneath her snow white cap, and a bright smile upon her sympathetic face, she was the old Mary improved and developed with something ethereal and angelic superadded.

"You will keep a tenant in the cottage," she was saying to the clergyman, who sat with his back turned to the observer. "Choose some poor, deserving folk in the parish who will be glad of a home free. And when he comes you will tell him that I have waited for him until I have been forceed to go on, but that he will find me on the other side still faithful and true. There's a little money, too—only a few pounds, but I should like him to have it when he comes, for he may need it, and then you will tell the folk you put in to be kind to him, for he will be grieved, poor lad, and to tell him that I was cheerful and happy to the end. Don't let him know that I ever fretted, or he may fret too."

Now John listened quietly to all this from behind the door, and more than once he had to put his hand to his throat, but when she had finished, and when he thot of her long, blameless, innocent life and saw the dear face looking straight at him, and yet unable to see him, it became too much for his manhood, and he burst out into an irrepressible, chocking sob which shook his very frame. And then occured a strange thing, for though he had spoken no word, the old woman stretched out her arms to him, and cried "Oh, Johnny, Johnny. Oh, dear, dear Johnny, you have come back to me again;" and before the parson could at all understand what had happened, those two faithful lovers were in each other's arms, weeping over each other, and patting each other's silvery head, with their hearts so full of joy that it almost compensated for all that weary fifty years of waiting.

It is hard to say how long they rejoiced together. It seemed a very short time to them and a very long one to the reverand gentleman, who was thinking at last of stealing away, when Mary recollected his presence and the courtsey which was due to him. "My heart is full of joy, sir", she said; "it is God's will that I should not see my Johnny, but I can call his image up as clear as if I had my eyes. Now stand up, John, and I will let the gentleman see how well I remember you. He is as tall, sir, as the second shelf, as straight as an arrow, his face brown and his eyes bright and clear. His hair is well nigh black and his mustache the same—I shouldn't wonder if he had whiskers by this time. Now, sir, don't you think I can do without my sight." The clergyman listened to her description and looking at the battered, white haired man before him, he hardly knew whether to laugh or to cry.

But it all proved to be a laughing matter in the end, for, whether it was that her illness had taken some natural turn, or that John's return had startled it away, it is certain that from that day Mary steadily improved until she was as well as ever. "No special licen-

OLD TIME INN OPEN AS IN '55

Three stories high and fashioned after the stage road inns in the East, the pioneer tavern in Orangeville of "the town built before the Civil War", which at one time vied with Kalamazoo and Battle Creek as a rising industrial center of Southern Michigan. The tavern still is open to patrons.

Today there are only 150 inhabitants in Orangeville, which at one time numbered more than 400 Until construction of the Gun Marsh road from Plainville and Gun Lake road from Martin, Orangeville lay most forgotten among picturesque hills of Barry county's most scenic district. The waters in the ancient race still turn the wheels of an old mill, the towns only center of activity today.

Erected in 1855 by Winschester T. Dodge, one of the founders of Orangeville, the tavern serves as a constant reminder to the older residents of one of the most dramatic episodes in Barry County history. The incident handed down from one generation to the next still recalled by Orangeville residents.

It all happened, on the day and night preceding the Fourth of July 1855. The opening of the tavern had been set for the national holiday, and the entire village planned a fitting celebration for the community achievement. Determined to make the event memorable some one suggested that a cannon be brought from Hasting to aid in the celebration.

A committee was appointed to go to Hastings for the cannon. When the committee reached the county seat, it found that the cannon had been loaded to Landlord Emory of Middleville for the next day's celebration.

Undaunted by the untoward circumstance the committee wrung from the officials an order on Emory to turn the cannnn over. Emory treated the order with contempt. Finding him adamant, the committee hurried to Orangeville for reinforcements.

It was midnight before the detachment of Orangeville men and boys reached Middleville. They demanded the surrender of the gun Emory was ready to resist, and so was his wife. With prolonged yells, the Orangeville men stormed the Middleville Hotel and captured the cannon,, notwithstanding the many 'casualities' inflicted by Mrs. Emory, who was armed with a broomstick, which she wielded with dexterity.

Emory swore out warrants for the arrest of the Orangeville invaders but they retialed by swearing out a warrent for his arrest n the ground he refused to turn over public property entrusted to his care. The matter was settled when Emory withdrew his charges.

At daybreak the cannon was rolled into Orangeville, 10 miles away And all day long it boomed a triumphant note as the villagers were celebrating simulteanously the birth of the nation and the opening of the tavern.

RECORD YIELDS OF HONEY REPORTED IN SOUTH OF STATE

Record yields of honey have been obtained by Lower Michigan beekeepers this year, according to A. G. Woodman, bee specialist in Grand Rapids.

Many colonies have produced 10 times their own weight. The average production in a number of apiaries has been in excess of 200 pounds, mostly white honey from the nectar of clover.

The dry summer brought a heavy clover blossom and the bees have carried maximum loads of nectar on each trip. Without any interference from storms, the industrious insects were able to make a maximum number of trips per day for about ten weeks.

Beekeepers were somewhat discouraged over the outlook last spring, when it rained during most of the fruit blooming. The production from the fruit blossoms was reported light in most sections.

State officials are co-operating with apiarists in Kent County to eradicate all foul brood. State Commissioner of Agriculture Herbert E. Powell has issued a proclamation prohibiting transportation of bees on comb or used apiary equipment into the county for 10 years. By quarantining the county it will be easier to keep the colonies free of foul brood through eliminating outside surces of infection.

There is no initiation into the great fraternity of those who travel. Yet it is legion—and it is one of the most exclusive in the world.

When a new contribution appears to add comfort and vivacity, you hear of it in the smoking rooms of crack trains, in the saloons of ocean greyhounds, or in the lounges of great hotels.

So, today, you hear—"Rooms are larger at the new Detroit-Leland—airier, more luxurious, and cuisine and service transcend perfection."

It is an endorsement that can not be bought, for the fraternity is jealous of its endorsements.

WHAT SHALL THE PLATFORMS SAY ABOUT PROHIBITION?

The question at the head of this article is being widely discussed. The attitude of the Anti-Saloon League has long been a matter of record. It was set forth at length and clearly in an article by Bishop Cannon, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, on page 9 of the Advocate of October 13. In effect it is that the Anti Saloon League does not ask the major political parties to put into their platforms a downright endorsement of the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act; only a declaration in favor of their enforcement.

More recently Bishop Nicholson, whose view as President of the national Anti-Saloon League is of particular value, was reported in the press dispatches as saying he disagreed with those who asked that the polical parties "should insert a prohibition plank in their platforms." Since the Anti-Saloon League is the generally accepted spokesman for the dry forces, it is well to know accurately what its position in this matter is.

Another view than that indicated above has found currency, with Senator Borah of Idaho as its spokesman. Before the Womans' Law Enforcement Committee at New York, and later before the National Grange in session at Cleveland, he insisted very emphatically, as reported, that "the tremendous power of the party (he referred to the Republican party), should be thrown behind the law and the constitution."

This has been interpreted to mean that the party should endorse the principle of prohibition. But later and fuller statements in the press seem to make it clear that Senator Borah is not at variance with the Anti-Saloon League. He is quoted as saying: "A political party which is unwilling to declare its purpose to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment will not enforce it. There is no reason why, if a party intends to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment, it should not say so."

That is precisely the position taken by Bishops Nicholson and others who speak for the Anti-Saloon League. They, as does the Senator, insist on strong enforcement planks in the platforms, as well as the nomination of candidates whose principles and records are consistent with that declaration. And, as Bishop Cannon, speaking for the Southern dry Democrats, pithily says: "A law enforcement plank will logically eliminate both Smith and Ritchie, for both have favored practically non-enforcement policies."

The position of Bishop Nicholson and the other leaders of the Anti-Saloon League is the historic one of that organization, and is straightforward and understandable. It is that the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act are accomplished facts. They have written prohibition into the fundamental and statute laws of the land. That is past history. Platforms are supposed to represent policies which pledge themselves to carry out. Prohibition is no longer something to be put into the constitution and law—it is there already. It is now in the enforcement stage. Therefore what is required of the parties is to take prohibition for granted, because it is in the constitution and law, and pledge themselves to its enforcement.

The logic is something like this: Since in both parties are both wets and drys, to go back of the record and declare now for or against the principle of prohibition would be to excite the hostility of one side, with the result of splitting the party on the issue. But by confining the platform declaration to enforcement of constitution and laws already enacted, the appeal is to every loyal citizen, and is inescapable except by the alternative of of wilful nullification, which spells anarchy. Thus every one who favors non-enforcement makes himself a nullificationalist pure and simple.

There is no getting away from the logic of it; and the psychology of putting the parties on record in favor of law enforcement is to strengthen our position beyond calculation. It holds all loyal Americans to the issue regardless of their personal preference.

Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft, eminent ex-Presidents, forcefully illustrate the point. Neither was originally in favor of prohibition. But once it was placed in the constitution and on the statute books, both declared themselves unequivocally in favor of its observance and enforcement. Every one hundred per cent American will take the same position. And it is of immeasureable value, in the interests of prohibition enforcement, that the drys insist on party fealty to this fundamental attitude. All good citizens, of whatever party, can and should agree to this.

This week, as the Advocate goes to its readers, the biennial convention of the Anti-Saloon League of America is in session at Washington. Doubtless it will restate the League's attitude on this question. But its position is not likely to be different from that which it has all along maintained.

While on this subject, it is interesting and significant to notice that President Coolidge himself is reported as in favor of a strong enforcement plank in the next Republican platform. According to the Boston Herald, as quoted in Zion's Herald, the President recently said to a prominent Republican senator that a problem weighing heavily on his mind before leaving the presidency, is that of the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. "He is described as feeling that the perpetual dodging of the prohibition issue by the major political parties in damaging to the moral fiber of the nation." On the Democratic side, Senator Walsh of Montana, himself an out-and-out dry, is quoted as saying that the nomination by the Democrats of an "outstanding wet" for the presidency will force the prohibition issue into the next campaign regardless of platform declarations

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union announces a campaign with the slogan, "A dry plank in the platform of both major political parties," seeking to put into the platforms a plank not only endorseing the Eighteenth Amendment, but promising enforcement without reservation. Conferences to further this end will be held in eleven of the strategic cities of the country.—The Michigan Christian Advocate.

Shariff's Weekly Report, Dec. 18 1927

On Sunday, the 11th, Mr. L. McNitt, who gave his address as Bryan O., was arrested at Bird Lake on a drunk and disorderly charge. He was brought to Hillsdale and locked up, and when we say Brought that is what we mean. On Monday he was arraigned before Justice Fitzsimmons, where he pleaded guilty, and his conduct cost him exactly $118.90. His "playmates" were not arrested. That new Disorderly Act sure has teeth.

The Sheriff and Coroner Miller were called to Jonesville on Monday due to the sudden death of L. Brown of that city. Mr. Brown was helping buzz wood and was stricken while so engaged and died almost immediately evidently from heart failure. No inquest was ordered.

Mr. Scott Cameron, late of Wright Twp. was brought here on Tuesday where he is being held until the Probate Court can dispose of his case.

On the same day C. R. Kidd, who was arrested for driving while drunk, paid his fine of $112.85 and as his ten day sentence had expired, he was released.

On Wednesday evening, Alex. Stone who was attempting to cross Manning Street at North St. in Hillsdale was struck and instantly killed by an Auto driven by Chas. Mills. Prosecuting Attorney Lewis Coroner Aldrich and members of the Sheriff's force were called to the spot immediately. A jury was impanneled, which will inquire into the cause of the accident.

Earl Foley, wanted by the Sheriff of VanWert Co., Ohio for desertion of a minor child, was arrested in Reading on Thursday. Foley who has lived in this vicinity for the past eight years and who has remarried and has 3 young children, will fight extradition.

Dessie Manning, age 18, a rather large girl, dark complected, who ran away from the County farm on Thursday, has not yet been found. Any of our people who see a girl answering this description, please call us.

Era Hutton, who was arrested in Montgomery and charged with sale, possession and manufacture of liquor, pleaded guilty before Judge Chester in the Circuit Court on Thursday, and was sentenced to pay costs of $75 and to serve 6 to 12 months in Ionia. 6 months were recommended by the Court.

On Saturday, Gaylord Stevens of Jackson, who was reported last week for Larceny (by conversion) paid his fine and costs of $35.90. He was released.

And don't forget about the Dog's Prisoners sentenced 10. Not sentenced 4. Total 14.

Clean Cows

An important source of bacteria in milk is the body of the cow, especialty the part immediately above the milk pail. Manure, loose hairs bedding material, and other foreign matter laden with bacteria sometimes drop into the pail at the time of milking. Cows kept in stables require a thorough grooming at least once every day, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Even those on pasture are more or less dusty, and need to be brushed before milking. It is advisable to clip the long hairs from the udder, flanks, and tail to prevent dirt from clinging to them. In order to remove any dust or loose hairs, before milking carefully wipe the udders, flanks and bellies of all cows, using a clean damp cloth.

NEW RECEIVERS OMIT ALL BATTERIES

Ordinary Lighting Circuits Bring Complete Socket Power to Receivers at a Cost Within Reach of All; Many Improvements in Dry Batteries.

New broadcast receivers which operate in connection with either alternating or direct current supplied by the house lighting mains, thereby dispensing with all batteries, and newly designed sets for dry battery and storage battery operation, were announced by E. E. Bucher Assistant Vice-President of the Radio Corporation of America, in a statement to the public.

"The Radio Corporation of America long ago discerned a well-defined public demand and preference for radio receivers utilizing lighting current as the source of power to do away with all batteries and the need for their periodical replacement," said Mr Bucher. "The new receivers therefore now bring complete socket power operated receivers within the reach of every purse and home, and for the millions of homes in communities not yet electrified there is provided the last word in dry battery and storage battery operated sets. They include numerous refinements as well as ingenious combinations in keeping with the growing importance of radio in the home; but the sound value of basic research and true engineering is borne out once more in the survival of certain definite fundamentals of radio reception which the Radio Corporation introduced several years ago and which remain unsurpassed," continued Mr. Bucher. "Perhaps the outstanding feature of the new models is in the perfected method of light socket operation which they embody, although tonal quality has been further improved. Beautiful cabinets with the radio components entirely self-contained yet made readily available by convenient doors, now place Radiolas on a par with the finest of home furnishings."

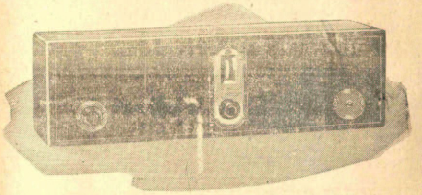

Illustration of One of the New Receivers Which Omits All Batteries

Superheterodyne Still Standard

The leaders continue to be represented by an 8-tube, loop-operated superheterodyne receiver—and a socket-power loudspeaker of surpassing tone and volume, together with complete rectifier supply for the A, B, and C requirements of the Radiola with which it is used in combination. Mr Bucher's announcement continues: "Either in the form of separate units or incorporated in one cabinet, the best features of this combination have been retained in some of the models introduced. Certain refinements in design have permitted the inclusion of the powerful 104 Loudspeaker in one cabinet with the supersensitive superheterodyne, with a complete absence of microphonic effects, but which in fact emphasizes its extraordinary tone quality.

"In another model, but likewise characterized by a distinctive cabinet and entirely self-contained equipment, is incorporated the well-known 8-tube superheterodyne receiver with the new 100-A loudspeaker, and operated by socket power.

"The superheterodyne circuit therefore continues as the standard of broadcast perfection after four years in the hands of the critical radio public. This circuit, quite as much as any other factor, has made for the increasing stability of radio marketing and the growing confidence of the public.

"Of revolutionary character is the introduction of a new model which is the culmination of years of research in set and tube design aimed to produce, for a moderate price, a receiver completely AC operated with a minimum of operating controls. Simplicity of operation and of maintenance are its main features. It has three stages of radio-frequency amplification, a detector and two stages of audio-frequency amplification. The new AC Radiotrons UX-226 are used in the radio-frequency stages and in the first audio-frequency stage. The new AC Radiotron UY-227 is used as a detector, and the last audi-frequency stage employs a UX-171 power amplifier Radiotron. The 'B' and 'C' voltages are obtained from a power supply unit built into the set, which employs the new high-power rectifier, Radiotron UX-280—full wave rectifier. There are only three controls on this set, one knob for tuning, one for volume control to regulate the output of the receiver and a power control switch to turn the power on and off.

"For those who prefer battery operation or whose homes are located in districts not as yet electrified, there is introduced a receiver that will be found to fill the most rigid requirements for sensitivity, selectivity and fine tone quality in its class. This is a new uni-control six-tube receiver employing the well-known and perfected tuned radio-frequency circuit with three stages of radio-frequency amplification, a detector and two stages of audio-frequency, taking five UX-201-A Radiotrons and one UX-112 power amplifier Radiotron. The internal construction of the set is extremely rugged, and with simplicity of operation are the two keynotes of this receiver.

To Continue Rural Sets

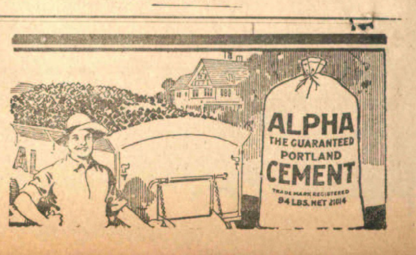
"In response to public demand, especially in rural districts, the Radio Corporation of America will continue their five-tube tuned radio-frequency receiver employing regeneration, and which provides unusual sensitivity and selectivity. It uses four UX-199 Radiotrons and a power amplifier Radiotron UX-120, in the last audio stage, giving excellent and undistorted musical reproduction.

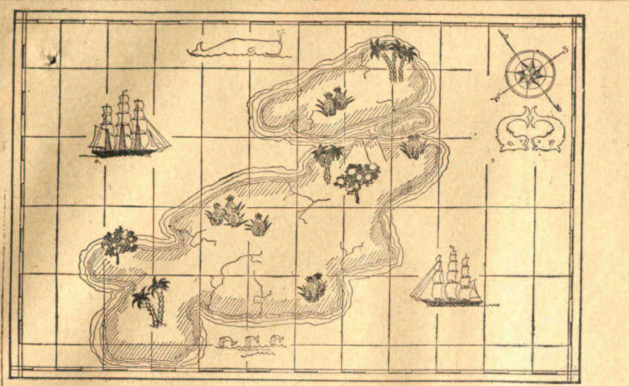
"The loudspeaker 104, in addition to the present well-known AC model, is now to be presented in a DC model as well, thus making this superior radio device available in cities and hotels and institutions which are supplied with 110 volt direct current. An ingenious design provides this DC 104 with all the power and tone quality of the tried, tested and perfected AC model.

"As a loudspeaker particularly intended for operation with Radiolas and all other receivers operating on batteries and moderate socket-power, Loudspeaker 100-A is included among the new models. Its enclosed cone is of a design suggestive of a mantlepiece clock, with a screen bezel; the whole finished in dull bronze."

spring freezes, insect damage, drought and the generally weakened condition of apple trees as a result of overbearing last year demanded a heavy toll of the 1927 crop both in quantity and quality. The total yield, now estimated at 123,115,000 bushels and the commercial crop of 24,330,000 barrels compare with the 1926 harvest of 246,460,000 bushels and 39,411,000 barrels.

With production so light and a larger percentage than usual of low-grade or defective fruit, good quality apples should have a high market value. Prices paid to producers for the 1926 apple crop averaged $1.05 per bushel, the lowest in ten years. In 1921, another short-crop year of 99,002,000 bushels, prices averaged $1.95 per bushel.





A FRUITLESS DIET FRUITLESS

IN the days of the old sailing ships and voyages months long, salt or "bully" beef and ship's biscuit were the staples of diet. After months of this diet scurvy would break out and the ships would make for tropic ports in search of fresh fruits. Grapefruit and pineapple were known to be particularly effective in curing this serious disease now recognized as a deficiency disease, due to the lack of vitamin C.

Today scurvy occurs but rarely among adults, and this is largely due to the growth of the canning industry which makes foods rich in vitamins available all the year around. A frequent lack of energy and maximum efficiency occurs when the amount of fruit in the diet is small. This languor and its cause may go unrecognized over a long period or until the amount of fruit in the diet is increased with a consequent increase in available energy.

Fruit supplies generously minerals and vitamins, water and simple sugars for readily available energy, and it is an implacable enemy of constipation. No one fruit is more generous in all these factors than is pineapple, and contains the digestive ferment or enzyme, bromelin, which aids in the digestion of protein.

An Adaptable Fruit

Pineapple is good for breakfast, served, either as the fruit course or sautéed as an accompaniment to sausage, ham, scrapple, bacon or other breakfast meats. At lunch it may accompany the luxurious lamb chop, or appear in compote or salad. At dinner its possibilities are nearly limitless, cocktails, fruit soups, garnish for roasts, as a conserve, with sweet potatoes, in salads, desserts and confections.

Pineapple Curry

As apple is an agreeable addition to curries, so pineapple adds to them and to other dishes of the entrée class, such as baked sausage with hominy, minced ham with pimiento, rice, or corned beef hash a distinct, different flavor.

Sauteéd Pineapple: Drain thoroughly a can of sliced Hawaiian pineapple and dry on a clean cloth. Dip each slice in a mixture of equal parts sifted confectioner's sugar and flour seasoned with salt and paprika. Brown in butter or the fat from bacon, ham or sausage and serve as desired. Bacon, French toast, sauteéd pineapple with the syrup made from the pineapple syrup, plus additional sugar and a little lemon juice is an excellent plate luncheon for adults on days when they can be active and out of doors.

Pineapple Lamb Curry with Rice: Cut one and one-half pounds of shoulder of lamb into inch and one-half cubes and sear on a hot skillet, until brown. Add water to cover and two sliced onions and simmer until tender. Cook until browned in four tablespoons of lamb fat or butter, one sliced onion, one tablespoon, more or less, of curry powder, and four tablespoons of flour. Add one and one-half cups of the broth in which the lamb was cooked and simmer until thick. Add the meat, salt to taste, and cook slowly fifteen minutes. Just before serving, add the fruit from one-half can of crushed Hawaiian pineapple. When hot, fill the hole in the center of a platter of boiled rice with the meat mixture.

Cabbage, Pineapple and Pimiento Salad: To three cups of shredded cabbage, add one-half can of drained crushed Hawaiian pineapple or one and one-half cups of sliced pineapple cut in pieces, and one-half cup of chopped pimientos. Serve with mayonnaise or sour cream pineapple dressing, made as follows: mix one tablespoon of cornstarch with one teaspoon of salt, one-half teaspoon each of mustard and paprika, a few grains of cayenne, and two tablespoons of vinegar. Heat to boiling three-quarters of a cup of pineapple juice and add the cornstarch mixture, stirring constantly until thick, and simmer for fifteen minutes. Cool, and add one-half cup of thick sour cream. Mix with the salad and serve on lettuce leaves or a cabbage leaf.

Pineapple Tapioca Cream: Scald two cups of milk in a double boiler and add three tablespoons of quick cooking tapioca. Cook until transparent, add two yolks of eggs, one-fourth teaspoon of salt and continue cooking until mixture coats the spoon. Cool. Boil one cup of sugar with one-third cup of pineapple syrup from can until it spins a thread from the tip of a spoon and pour over the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs, beating constantly. Add one tablespoon of lemon juice and a little grated rind. Fold one-half the meringue mixture and half a can of drained crushed pineapple into the tapioca mixture and cover with the remainder of the meringue. Serve cold.

State Fire Marshal Chas. Lane has sent to the fire departments of all towns and cities the following digest of the law relative to rirght-of-way for fire truck straveling to calls:

Act 218 Public Acts 1927

(b) The driver of a vehicle upon a a highway shall yield the right of way to police and fire department vehicles when the latter are operated upon official business and the drivers thereof sound audible signal by bell, siren or exhaust whistle This provision shall not operate to relieve the driver of a police or fire department vehicle from the duty to drive with due regard for the safety of all persons using the highway nor shall it protect the driver of any such vehicle from the consequence of an arbitrary exercise of such right of way.

65. Sec 22 (a) Upon the approach of any police or fire department vehicle giving audible signal by bell, siren or exhaust whistle, the driver of every other vehicle shall immediately drive the same to a position as near as possible and parallel to the right hand edge or curb of the highway, clear of any intersection of highways, and shall stop and remain in such position unless otherwise directed, by a police or traffic officer until the police or fire department vehicle shall have passed.

(b) It shall be unlawful for the driver of any vehicle other than one on official business to follow any fire apparatus traveling in response to a fire alarm closer than five hundred feet or to drive into or park such vehicle within one block where fire apparatus has stopped in answer to a fire alarm.

How The Banana Was Named

"Early inhabitants of the East believed that the banana plant was the source of good and evil and that the serpent which tempted Eve hid in a bunch of the fruit," writes W. T. Pope of the Hawaii Experiment Station of the United States Department of Agriculture. "Undoubtedly this legend influenced the early classifiers who designated two species of the plant as Musa paradisiaca (Fruit of Paradise) and Musa sapientum (Fruit of Knowledge)". The common name "banana", was adopted from the language of an African Congo tribe and first came into use during the sixteenth century. Prior to that time the fruit was called "apple of paradise" and "Adam's fig." The name "banana" seems to have been borne for a long period by the fruit, which was eaten raw. The term "plantain" was given to a variety which, though closely related to the banana, is edible only after being cooked. The generic name "Musa" for the banana group was bestowed by the botanist Linnaeus in honor of Antonius Musa, a learned physician of the early Roman Empire.

The Passing of the Apostle

King "Ben" is dead, His souls welfare is the anxiety of the House of David Cult waiting and watching at Shiloh House for His resurrection. The Apostle taught his followers to believe He could rise from the tomb as Jesus Christ did 1900 years ago in Jerusalem, but Ben hasn't arisen. He's still lying in the iron bedstead where he breathed his last and if we mistake not decomposition has already set in, and his fiesh will go the way of all flesh.

With the passing of Benjamin Purnell ends one of the most gigantic flim flams of modern times in Michigan. This death stops all legal proceedings to try the culprit on any of the many charges heaped up against him in the courts. Although but 66 years of age Benjamin Purnell aged very perceptibly during his last days, either from the worries which his misdoings had brought upon him or from disease. The physician's report would indicate that Ben died from plain tuberculosis, and if so it is quite likely he is really gone and will never arise to plague his tormenters.

While a man of but meagre education he seemed to have the wonderful ability of camouflaging his real character and persuading others to follow his cross. He was born in 1861 the first year of the Civil war in Kentucky where tradition says he followed usual proceedure of the Hill Billy and married him a wife at the tender age of 16 years. We know little of his early life except that he was shiftless in common with his ilk in the mountains of Kentucky. It is probable that the scenes of "Arkansaw Traveler" would fit into his history easily. He led the indolent easy life of a "Billy" and in a short time separated from his first companion. He got the religion bug into his system and became an itinerate Minister like hundreds of others in that ignorant section of the land.

He traveled about and preached. Later he joined "Prince Mike's bunch of believers and through some hook or crook became much respected by "Mike" as one of some executive ability. Shortly after this he branched out for himself and founded the colony known as House of David. By a dint o good management on his part and others the colony grew and flourished both financially and spiritually. It found plenty of converts to the long whiskered cult. About this time prosperity began to smile on Ben; and from reports he could not stand prosperity, but melted under its soothing rays like a gob of Oleomargarin. He began to dress in high-toned white flannels; he traveled in expensive equippages; He sported rich jewelry and diamonds, but the whiskers he never trimmed, at least no one outside the House of David ever saw him barbered like other men. His show and styles attracted a large following of the ultra-soft headed who are impressionists and standing ready to take up most any belief which might bring the prestige. There were rumors and rumors, and rumors developed into ugly scandals, and finally some of his female compatriots became rancid and rebelled. They left the colony and made various complaints against Ben. To this day nobody knows whether they lied or whether they mixed facts with fiction. We have the State Police record for the evidence as given last week in the Advocate. With all candor it may be said that King Benjamin Purnell probaby had bitter enemies right among his own cult. No doubt he was envied by men and women of the colony who sought to down him. But it is hardly likely the State Troopers misrepresented facts. They had absolutely no reason for so doing. That Ben is dead is a fact; that he has not arisen is also true, and by this time Lo he stinketh if we are not mistaken. This finishes the last chapter of Michigan's most remarkable criminal case.

Henry Ford Will Go Out of Publishing

After a successful career as owner and proprietor of the famous Dearborn Independent, Henry Ford announces that owing to other interest, the magazine will be discontinued as soon as present subscriptions expire. For some time back no new subecriptions have been taken on.

This comes as a surprise to the thousands of readers all over the United States and Caaada, and to many it is a direct loss, for the ideals of this paper were certainly above criticism and for the good of humanity in every sense of the word. Right from the start Mr. Ford announced he would purvey the unvarnished truths, and conduct a magazine absolutely devoid of political or any religious influence, and this he has done to perfection. The slogan of his paper has been "The Untold Truth" and this has been carried out to the letter. Matters pertaining to politics and finance have been tabooed and some deals exposed to the public.

Taken altogether the Dearborn Independent is the only sheet we know of in the world, so absolutely fearless and above board, recognizing neither Prince orPauper in its war on crookedness.

The late unpleasantness with Aaron Sapiro, bloated agent of Jewry in this country, may have had considerable bearing on the action of Mr. Ford. At any rate the magazine will be discontinued.

We have no idea what the reason is for this, but there is a chance for some enterprising publisher to start something—we mean some fellow who don't care a rap if the truth is never told.

LIKE the richest Indian fabrics draped circularly and Arabian tent like from the center to the sides, and richly jewelled throughout is the mammoth canopied dome of the auditorium, with its tassels, fringes and filigree work of super-size and super beauty hanging from the fabriced ceiling. The canopy appears to be open to the sky, and atmospheric and cloud-effects change colors with the moods of the program.

Aladdin's lamp genii, shrines, perforated niches of great size, drops and brackets make up the canopy decorations over the proscenium arch ninety feet wide and sixty feet high resting against two huge Burmese shrine-like pylons, which are decorated with horizontal bands of ornaments forming the base and broken by decorative niches surmounted by huge balconies each with another large niche and richly decorated candelabra. Back of each niche is a perforated grille, from which proceeds rich and voluminous melody from the organ chambers, and over which multi-colored lights play. Totem pole columns, with ornamental Arabesquès, dress off the niches Walls above the niches are ornamented with peacocks and crowned with jewelled sunbursts.

Ultra Modern Comforts

Huge refrigerating and ventilating and heating and lighting systems will make Michigan's huge new Fox Theatre ultra-modern. Elevators will run to all balcony levels. Three of the largest organs in the country will furnish music, in addition to a 100-piece orchestra on the elevating platform.

All seats are two inches wider than ordinary, and are set farther apart to allow greater ease in passing guests already seated.

By actual count there are to be 5042 seats in the new Fox Theatre which is to be completed early in 1928. But at least 7,500 people will be happily comfortable under the theatre roof when the building is crowded to average capacity, counting those coming and going, ushers and attendants, musicians, and ballet entertainers.

Besides motion pictures of the latest and finest type, there will be elaborate stage presentations, circuited from The Roxy in New York, largest theatre in the world.

Michigan is to be congratulated on the distinction the new Fox Theatre will give. Besides, C. Howard Crane the architect, is a Michigander, born and bred, and the new Fox adds tremendously to his reputation internationally as a distinguished theatre architect.

BLUE VALLEY CREAMERY INSTITUTE

HERE'S HOW TO BEAT HIGHER FEED COST

"Back Up" Corn With Other Feeds to Grow Pigs for Market Quickly.

"Backing up" corn with other feeds containing elements lacking in corn in order to grow pigs to marketable size quickly, is the one way to beat the narrower margin of profit on hogs indicated for the coming year because of higher feed costs, says the Blue Valley Creamery Institute.

For many years, says the Institute, the agricultural colleges have been working on the problem of getting the most pork out of a bushel of corn. Practically every one of the thousands of hog-feeding tests that have been made show that no more efficient feeds than corn, alfalfa, skimmilk, tankage and minerals can be found. Corn alone is a poor feed for hogs because fed alone it takes a lot of corn to make a "little pork." Supplemented with plenty of skimmilk it reduces the feed cost per 100 pounds gain to a place where hogs can be profitably fed high-priced corn. A little tankage and minerals added to the ration helps make the ration even more efficient by aiding to form "protein combinations" that are hard to beat, while alfalfa, green or dried as hay, practically stands alone as an aid in supplying the food elements a hog needs under modern full-feeding methods. With corn as the basis of a ration, supplemented with skimmilk as a liquid protein supplement—with a little tankage and minerals to add variety to the protein supplement, and with alfalfa as pasture in summer and as clean, well-cured hay in winter, it will very likely be possible to produce and make a profit on hogs even if prices should drop far below present prices during the coming season.

IMLAY CITY HAS SPUD RECORD

When it comes to making a record in the 'tater' market just leave it to the 'Ag' students of Imlay City whose enviable records of two thousand, seven hundred and fifty one bushels stand out as a mark of achievement.

Berwyn Pamberton was the winner of the first prize. He had a yield of three hundred and ten bushels per acre and will receive a thirty-five dollar check.

The editor of the Imlay City Times should be given credit for the indefatigable efforts he put forth in boosting every movement tending to create interest and wide spread recognition of this favored spot in Michigan.

Imlay City has a live newspaper and live men at the head of it, and his slogan 'Where They Do Things' found at the top of his paper does much to put this live town on the man.—Exchange.

SHORT CROP IS TO APPLE PRIES

Apple growers in western Michigan are wearing smiles this fall. High prices being paid for fall and winter varieties have chased discouragement from the faces of producers during the last two seasons of low prices.

The crop is only half as large as last year. but it has prospects of yielding the growers more profit than in 1926. Some orchards, particularly the blocks of Baldwins, are yielding their owners twice as much money as last season. Most commercial orchards in the State are partly set to Baldwins.

Baldwin apples were in very light demand last season at $1.25 a hundredweight. Some early sales were made at higher figures but prices in the main were so low last season that many growers stored their Baldwins in hopes values might improve in midwinter

With the crop much shorter in Michigan and elsewhere this year. the demand for Baldwins has shown noticeable improvement. Dealers and shippers now are bidding around -2.50 a hundredweight

Northern spies were a short crop last season and prices this season are not much higher than a year ago. Shippers now are paying around $3.50 a hundred pounds.

Prices on most other varieties of apples this season have ranged from 50 cents to $1 a bushel higher than a year ago. This was particularly true of the market for all summer varieties. Instead of the Duchess apples rotting by the thousands of bushels in the orchords growers converted them into cash this season. They didn't have quite as many to convert this year as in the past, but the short crop was more profitable than bumper ones in the past.

Apple sales by some of the largest commercial growers will range $5,000 to $25,000 this year

KNITTING NO HALTER ON MODERN DIANA

A woman's place is in the home, and not in the hunting camp, was the opion of Oscar Johnson of Ford River, near Escanaba as he set out with a party of friends on a few days hunting trip in the Watson district, thirty miles from here.

His wife begged her husband to take her along on the hunting trip but he advised her to stick to her knitting at home. The snowdrifts around Watson balked the hunters and Mr. Johnson returned to his Ford River home empty handed, to find a deer hung up in the back shed.

Mrs. Johnson had shot the deer near her home while her husband was tramping the woods in vain.

The man who boasts of his family tree is seldom the one to saw wood and say nothing.

MOVES OLD STORE TO FORD MUSEUM

When Henry Ford builds his great new museum at Dearborn, it will house, along with a great many other things, a plain frame store building that stood at Waterford, Mich., a few miles north of Pontiac, for seventy-three years.

"Ony a store". people will exclaim.

And they may add, in wonderment.

"Why on earth should this be placed here. It's all right to have an old-fashioned plow or a surrey or a wayside tavern, but what's romantic about a plain store."

Yet, if they stop to think, they will realize that this store represents the whole pioneer epoch in the history of the American Middle West.

What could be more intimately bound up with the lives of people than a store where they procure the necessities of every day, where they meet in frindly intercourse, where they gather to discuss the burning questions of the time.

For seventy-three years the store served the people of Waterford and the surrounding country, from the time it was built in eighteen hundred and fifty four until it was torn down and removed to Dearborn. It has been replaced by a modern store building of brick, with big plate glass windows.

The type to which this particular landmark belonged has not yet dis appeared. There are still many villages and hamlets in Michigan and neighboring states with stores very similar to it.

Yet every year brings the replacement of some of the old fashioned frame buildings with modern brick structures. Soon they will be extinct, and one will have to visit a museum to see what has been a commonplace.

The Waterford store in the first few years of its existence, was the scene of many a warm discussion of the slavery qusetion. Waterford was full of Democrats who sympathized with the South. A good deal of the time the men around the stove were in perfect accord. They proclaimed that the Negroes ought to be slaves, that the North, had no business dictating to the South anyway.

Sometimes, however, there was dissension in the group. One of the small minority opposed to slavery would object to the remarks of the theirs and then there was hot debate.

Feeling in the community ran so high that when the Civil War broke, the five and six young men who enlisted in the Union army were treated as social outcasts. One of these young men, John Coper, now eighty-three years old, still lives on a farm just out side Waterford.

U. S. LANDS TOOLS TO MICHIGAN FARMS FOR BORER FIGHT

Government owned stubble pubverizers will be loaned to groups of the farmers who wish to co-operate with the United States Department of Agriculture in an experiment to determine the exact degree of effectiveness of these pulverizers on corn ground which is to be sown to small grains.

When, in the opinion of department officials a sufficient number of farmers in a given county has made written request through the chairman of their corn borer committee, then the department will enter into a cooperative agreement with this chairman or any duly authorized agent of the group.

The department will deliver, as long as the equipment is available a complete unit which will consist of a tractor, power takeoff and stubble pulverizer to any designated point within the one per cent corn borer area.

The department reserves the right to determine when conditions are favorable for the use of the stubble pulverizer and will co-operate in the supervision and direction of the work. It will service the equipment covering necessary repairs, free of charge but will not assume responsibility for other operating charges.

se for me," John had said sturdily "It looks as if we were ashamed of what we are doing, as though we hadn't the best right to be married of any two folk in the parish." So the bans were put up accordingly, and three times it was announced that John Huxford, bachelor, was going to be united to Mary Howden spinister, after which no one objecting they were duly married accordingly. "We may not have very long in this world, said old John, "but at least we shall start fair and square in the next."

John's share in the Quebec business was sold out, and gave rise to a very interesting legal question as to knowing as to whether his name was Huxford, he could still sign that of Hardy, as was necessary for the completion of the business. It was decided however, that on his producing two trustworthy witnesses to his identity all would be right, so the property was duly realized and produced a very handsome fortune. Part of it John devoted to the building of a pretty villa just outside Brisport and the heart of the proprietor of Beach Terrance leaped within him when he learned that the cottage was at last to be abandoned and that it would no longer break the symmetry and impair the effect of his now of aristocratic mansions.

And there in their snug new home, sitting out on the lawn in the summer time, and on either side of the fire in the winter, that worthy old couple continued for many years to live as innocently and as happily as two children. Those who knew them well say that there was never a shadow between them , and that the love which burned in their aged hearts was as high and as holy as that of any young couple who ever went to the alter. And through all the country round, if ever man or woman were in distress and fighting against hard times, they had only to go up to the villa to receive help and that sympathy which is more precious than help. So when at last John and Mary fell asleep in their ripe old age, with in a few hours of each other, they had all the poor and the needy and the friendless of the parish among their mourners, and in talking over the troubles which these two had faced so bravely, they learned that their own miseries also were but passing things, and that faith and truth can never miscarry, either in this existence or the next.

The End.

DETROIT ENTHUSIASTIC OVER PARKVIEW MEMORIAL

Few public enterprises have ever aroused such hearty response as Parkview Memorial according to the Earl V. Frazier Corporation Fiscal Agents for the property.

October the first month of sales effort brought volume never before heard of for propositions of its kind.

November, too, brought sales far above those of the preceding month with a flood of unsolicited requests for information about the projects.

Agents and salesmen who have had experience with sales organizations ranging from real estate to stocks and bonds assert that they're never found a proposition with as large a proportion of sales to the number of prospects solicited as Parkview Memorial.

According to the Frazier Corporation, there are still a number of agency vancancies in a number of cities within a hundred miles of Detroit that offer great possibility for profit to the right man.

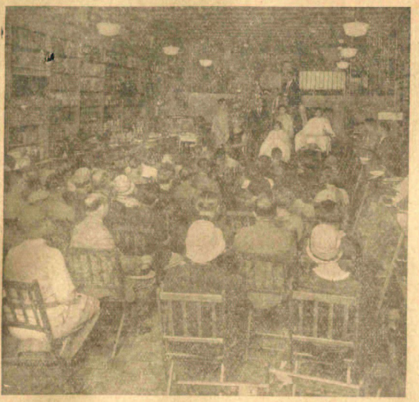
Most Marvelous Barber Display In U. S. A.



The picture gives a brief idea of the number of ladies and gentlemen who flocked into the marvelous display room of the Leo E. Morris Co., 1011 Farmer St., Detroit, Mich.

The rapid growth and merited popularity of this is indeed gratifying to the personal supervision of Leo Morris who heads this marvelous organization.

His never ceasing efforts to give his undivided personal attention to this branch of the trade is no doubt the main reason of the organization and its phenominal success.

His affability, good nature, open-hearted welcome and good hand of fellowship and never ceasing desire to impart his super knowledge of the business to all visitors from any part of Michigan is greatly to be commended on.

Mr. Morris' personal advice is always heartily given to barbers or the Barber trade.

Barbers take advantage of this opportunity to visit Michigan's vast exclusive Barber's Emporium. Leo E. Morris, 1011 Farmer St. Detroit, Michigan.

BIRMINGHAM'S NEW LIBRARY OPEN

Formal opening of the new Baldwin Public Library in the civic center of Birmingham opened, Saturday, December ten.

The building was opened for public use on Monday December twelve from ten a. m. to nine p. m. which are to be the daily hours.

Work on the building has virtually been completed and much of the furniture has been placed. The building was under construction for eight months and is said to be the finest small library in the state.

An exchange of property between the library board and the village of Birmingham resulted in the library acquiring the block bounded by Martin Bates, Merrill and Chester streets in return for property at the Corner of Woodward and Maple avenues, which has been deeded to the village by Miss Martha Baldwin for library purposes.

'THE BORER BURGLAR' HELD IN PITTSBURG

Lansing's borer burglar who entered and robbed a number of homes at Lansing as well as homes in Pontiac, Muskegon, Higland Park, Ypsilanti and Jackson has been arrested in Pittsburgh, according to word received at Lansing. The message contained fingerprints of the suspect, who is known as Morris Bassili.

The fingerprints were checked with records and identified by Detective Frank Hufnagel as those of the burglar who terrorized the West Side residential district of Lansing last summer.

Bassili won the title of "the borer burglar" from the peculiar methods he used. He was equipped with an auger and bored holes in window frames near the lock. A wire was inserted, and the lock pushed back. When he had completed this work, he filled the holes with putty.

The burglar was captured in Pittsburgh after a battle in which he was wounded by a patrolman according to word received by the Lansing police.

He was surprised by a patrolman as he was prowling about the Oakland residential district of the city. He was wounded during an exchange of shots and was taken to a hospital.

The Glendale division is also being over hauled and a new office building is in course of erection.

COLLEGE TRAINED COP NOW REALITY

The day of the college-trained policeman is upon us. In the present class of 106 men now being trained for the force in the police school conducted by Lieut. Charles F. Rhodes, some 10 per cent have had collegiate training. The same percentage has been present in nearly every one of the six classes trained for the service during the last year..

In Berlin the policeman who can speak English or French wear white bands on their arms. The time may come in Detroit when the policeman with a Bachelor of Arts degree will be designated by a band of a given color, the one who has a Master of Arts by another, and the officer with a PhD. at the end of his name by still another.

"I do not at present anticipate any great rush of Doctors of Philosophy to the force", said Lieut. Rhodes with a smile in discussing the 10 per cent leaven in the new police loaf. But the mere fact that 10 per cent of those accepted for our school have had more or less college training indicates a trend worth noticing from a sociological point of view.

"The time has passed when mere bulk and beef can get a man a job on a modern police force. The days of the dumb pavement pounder are over. Vaudeville ultimately will forget its caricature of the police officer familiar to most of us—heavy, slow, thinking, undoubtedly courageous but densely stupid.

The modern criminal is responsible for the new type of policeman. A clever crook calls for a clever crook catcher. The "burly burglar' is no more. The modern burglar is usually young and slender. The modern policeman also is young and slender.

"The modern criminal's reckless use of the pistol is responsible—in part—for the higher grade of men the department is attracting. Danger, instead of repelling, stimulates the higher type of man. The fact that eight policemen were killed and 10 wounded in 1926 actually helps raise the standard of the force. The peril involved in police work calls to the finer kinds of men. The gunmen in other words, has made police work romantic and adventurous."

Holy Roller who let a snake bite him to test his faith, did a little holy rolling afterward.

SEES FARMERS NEAR SERFDOM

Unless there is an immediate change in the policy of the Government toward the farmer, the men whose life earnings are invested in farm lands and who have no other income than the farm will be obliged to 'get down and live like the poorest peasants in Europe", Peter B. Lennon, senator from the Thirteenth Michigan district, declared in a statement today. Senator Lennon operates a four hundred and eighty acre farm.

Senator Lennon declared agriculture has been 'slipping down grade for the last twenty years and it only remained for the World War to push it over into the abyss",. He strongly favored an amended McNary-Haugen Bill.

The antagonism which seems to exist between city people and the farmer and the increased cost of operation of the farm were deplored by Senator Lennon as contributing in a large measure to the plight of the agricultural worker.

I would not have anyone think I am not familiar with the great problems in the way of high cost of living, high taxes and high rents with which the city people have to contend," he said, "but rather I would try to convince city resident that unless the agricultural problem is solved soon their burdens will be increased until they find themselves in a far worse situation than the farmer.

"There have been aspasmodic periods of prosperity for agriculture in the past twenty years but the decline nevertheless has been sure and certain. It would fill a large book to recapitulate the causes for the decline of agriculture. Some point to the fact that we are going the way of all the other nations. As they advanced along industrial lines agricultural gradually became subservient and finally sloughed into the peasant stage. No matter what the causes may have been this has happened."

The cost of operating a farm, according to the senator, has advanced five hundred per cent in the last twenty years.

"The result' he declared, "is that the values of farms in Michigan have dropped to a ridiculously low figure. The figures obtained by Prof. Newton of the Michigan State College along this line are simply startling. If any one will look over Prof. Newton's figures and then say that there is no farm problem in Michigan then I will give up the argument. Farm lands are assessed as a general rule in the state for far more than the land would sell. In fact, when you get away from the industrial centers where some farms have been sold for platting purposes and for speculation you can scarcely give away a farm in Michigan" .

Mr. Lennon excluded the class of farmers who derive their income from other enterprises from his classifications.

"There are many people calling themselves farmers ," he said, who derive their principal income from other sources than the farm. For example the millionaire who buys a farm and maintains it as a plaything, produces large quantities of farm produce at a loss but at the same time adds to the surplus of farm crops which has figuratively speaking, broken the farmers' back."

FARMING ON SAND LAND DRAWS GREATER INTEREST

There is a growing interest in Michigan in sand land farming according to officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad Co., which operates a demonstration farm at Howard The farm entertained about 1000 visitors between May 1 and Oct. 1 this year more than twice the number to inspect the place in any previous season.

The visitors included sand land farmers from all parts of the state The records show they came mostly from along the liens of Pennsylvania railroad as far south as points in Indiana, but a number come from light soil areas in central and northeastern Michigan.

Their interest centered chiefly in the farm's system of light soil management and the soil building powers of the Keystone crop rotation as devised and practiced upon the place.

DETROIT TO GET UPSTATE EGGS . . .

Michigan eggs graded and packed to meet the demands of Detroit consumers soon will be placed upon the market, if preliminary plans of the Ottawa Poultry and Egg Association are carried out as outlined by Maurice Luidens of Holland, chairman.

The eggs will be graded and packed under the association's brands and labels. The fancy packs will consist of "hennery whites and browns". Under the old system of marketing, Michigan farmers have been sending the fancy eggs to market in the same package with the culls, seconds and firsts.

While Michigan poultrymen have been careless in marketing, it was pointed out that the Pacific Coast producers had been stealing their market in Detroit, shipping their products 2,000 miles into Detroit and commanding a substantial premium on Michigan fresh eggs.

The new exchange will market eggs for poultrymen in 15 townships in Ottawa and Allegan Counties. It is estimated there are more than 1,000,000 hens in this territory but only the production from 120,000 is under contract to be sold through the association at the start. The contracts are to run for three years.

Eventually it is expected the major portion of the production from the 1,000,000 hens will be sold through the association. Zeeland will be its headquarters but receiving stations will be established in each of the 15 townships in which it will do business .

HENS LAY 302 EGGS IN YEAR

An egg laying record for Rhode Island hens is believed to have been set by a hen owned by Koening and Banne, owners of a poultry farm at Holland. The hen started laying a year ago and since that time has laid 302 eggs.

100 IN FORD'S MINE MAROONED BY SNOW

More than 100 miners employed in the Blueberry Mine, eight miles from Ishemping, Mich., are marooned in the mine because roads leading there are blocked by snow The miners are in no danger and adequate food supplies are on hand at the mine, which is owned by Henry Ford.

Snow plows manned by road crews are attempting to break through the drifts and make it possible for the miners to return to their homes.

The Ishemping district was hard hit by the storm . Forty men battled for four hours to rescue 12 children from a stranded school bus at Diorite. The men cut their way through high snow banks to reach the children.

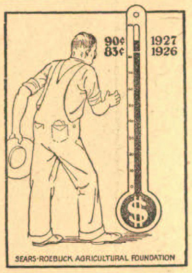
Farm Prices Take Upward Trend



SEARS-ROEBUCK AGRICULTURAL FOUNDATION

The advance in prices of farm products from April to September, 1927, was one of the most remarkable in recent years, according to the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. The values of the commodities sold by farmers, as compiled by the United States Department of Agriculture, rose from 25 per cent above the pre-war average at the beginning of this period to 40 per cent above pre-war at the end.

Farm prices had been declining for two years when this advance started. In five months, more than half of the two-year slump had been recovered. September, 1927, prices averaged nearly 5 per cent higher than a year previous, showing a complete reversal of the trend.

The purchasing power of the "farmer's dollar," or the ratio of prices of farm products to wholesale prices of industrial products is back to 90 cents compared with only 83 cents in September, 1926.

The advance of 82 per cent in the farm price of cotton from April to September was the most important change in the market value of the individual commodities. An advance of 46 per cent occurred in both corn and egg markets. Cottonseed meal prices rose 33 per cent; apples, 26 per cent; veal calf prices, 9 per cent; barley, 8 per cent, and beef cattle, 5 per cent. Smaller advances were recorded also in the values of wheat, oats, flax, and wool. In contrast with these advances were the declines of 20 per cent in hay, 15 per cent in potatoes, 11 per cent in chickens, 7 per cent in sheep, 6 per cent in hogs, and 5 per cent in lambs, as well as smaller declines in prices of butter, rye, sheep and horses.

It must be remembered that skimmilk is the cheapest and best protein supplement for growing pigs. Not only is it the most easily obtained protein on the farm, but 100 pounds of it is equal in feeding value to 25 pounds of corn and 11 pounds of tankage.

"…. and lots of Christmas seals, too, Santa, 'cause my teacher says that we should get them for they make little children strong."

And they do—many of the pennies realized from the sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals go toward teaching health habits to school children. Tuberculosis is preventable, and the best way to prevent it is to teach the children health habits.

Crops Show To Be Farm Week Feature

The seventeenth annual Michigan crops show will be held at East Lansing during Farmers Week, January 30 to February 4 according to the announcement, made by the farm crops department at the College.

Visitors at the Michigan show will see samples of seeds and field crops that brought honors from the recent International Hay and Grain show to Michigan farmers. These samples will not be eligible for prizes in the State show.

A special trophy will be awarded at East Lansing to the county whose exhibitors lead in prizes won. Last year Saginaw and Kalamazoo countise stood at the head of the list.

Announcement of the winners of theMichigan 5-acre corn growing contest will be made at the Show.

One of the strong classes that will be shown this year will be made up of exhibits of alfalfa seed grown in the state. One Cheboygan county grower produced 60 bushels or prime alfalfa seed on 11 acres this year.

Growers of potatoes will have their day when the prize winning exhibits from the district shows throughout the state go on display at the Potato Show, which will be held at the same time.

The Potato Train

We are hearing much of the potato train which visited Hillsdale last Friday and we are glad to announce that much of the honors went to Hillsdale county. In this county there were 52 exhibits of potatoes, and during the whole tour the Railroad Co. stated there were 288 entries and 1700 farmers their wives and children flocked to the exhibit from all directions. Robert Northdurft of Dowagiac won the sweepstakes of the New York Central Lines for the best peck of potatoes and James Meeks of this township won second of the whole ten counties on Russet Rurals which Meeks & Son specialize in. James also won the silver loving cup of the county clubs. The New York Central Lines go on to say: "The State Department of Agriculture had exhibits showing the standard grades and also conducted a grading contest in which 183 farmers competed.

Orders for seven carloads of certified seed for next year were taken

Three Rivers held the record for attendance with 300, and was second in entries with 42. Hillsdale was first in entries with 49, and second in attendance with 260.

Premium money in each county was made possible by Banks, Farm Bureaus, Chambers of Commerce, Boards of Supervisors, and co-operative associations, as well as the State Department of Agriculture and the Potato Growers Exchange"

New Test Will Aid Dairymen of State

An improved method that has recently been perfected for the diagnosis of Bang's abortion disease in cattle may prove of great value to dairymen in M. S. C.

The old method for the determination of the disease required two days to complete the test of blood samples from suspected animals. The same test can be made by the improved method in two minutes.

The time saved in making the individual tests can now be utilized to make additional determinations, and the studies being made of the disease and means of control can now be expanded.

Since being perfected at M. S. C. the test has been adopted by Wisconsin and is now being used in the disease research work in that State.

Taxes are now due.

SEARS-ROEBUCK AGRICULTURAL FOUNDATION

THE golden apple of mythology may easily become a fact this winter, says the Sears-Roebuck Agricultural Foundation. Only once in the past twenty years has old Mother Nature provided fewer apples per person than have been produced this year. Even though the orchards of every farm contribute their entire harvest, the apples will supply only one-half the pie or dumpling or bright red apples to munch before the winter fire that the bountiful yield of 1926 permitted.

REDUCE AND STAY STRONG

THE complaint of many would-be reducers is not that they are tormented by hunger, but that a sense of weakness interferes with the activities which are an integral and important part of their regime. Though largely psychological, it is a phase to be avoided, if possible, and it can be avoided by a wise choice of foods.

The heart of the reducing problem is limiting the diet to a point where the excess body fat can be turned to supply necessary energy. During the period when this is happening, the body continues to need protein for building and repair, minerals and vitamins for maintenance, building and repair, and plenty of liquid to wash away waste products. A certain amount of carbohydrate, better known as starches and sugars, is also necessary to avoid acidosis, a condition which occurs when fat is the sole source of energy.

Lean meats and fish supply protein; skim milk supplies protein, calcium and other minerals and vitamins, fruits and vegetables supply minerals, vitamins and the necessary carbohydrate in a good form, bulk to satisfy hunger and a high percentage of water. Therefore it is well to make the diet from this group of foodstuffs. Should loss of weight greater than one-quarter pound a day occur, some concentrated carbohydrate should be added, such as bread or potatoes. Crisp, unbuttered toast may always be part of the morning meal, if limited in quantity.

Fruits a Boon

Fruits are a boon to those trying to reduce because they are palatable, supply only such elements as should be included in the diet, and are sufficiently bulky to give a sense of comfortable fullness. At the beginning of the day, the readily available fruit sugars give the immediate energy supply for starting work with a vim, and so aid in breaking down the fat cells of the body as a continued source of energy. Canned Hawaiian pineapple, because of its palatability, adaptability and richness in minerals, vitamins and fruit sugars holds a high place as a reducing food in the opinion of physicians and nutrition experts.

At breakfast, it may be served sliced or crushed, as a fruit dish, or as an accompaniment to a meat or egg dish. At luncheon, salads with mineral oil dressing, cocktails or compotes are always favorites, and this is also a good meal at which to serve the lamb chop-pineapple combination which has sometimes been recommended as a good reducing diet unvaried by other foods. At dinner, pineapple can find a place in any course, beginning with a fruit soup and ending with pineapple meringue. Therefore, if you are among those interested in shedding excess baggage, see that your fruit shelf is well stocked.

Why Sheetrock is a different wallboard

What it is: Sheetrock is gypsum plaster cast in thick, rigid sheets. It is fireproof, non-warping and permanent. It can be sawed and nailed like lumber. Takes any decoration—wall paper, paint, or Textone in the new stipple finishes.

What it does: Sheetrock makes solid, highly insulating walls and ceilings that keep rooms warm in winter and cool in summer. That means more comfort and lower fuel bills. Then, too, Sheetrock walls and ceilings make buildings dust-tight, sound-proof and vermin-proof.

Where it is used: Sheetrock is the economical wall and ceiling material for many types of new construction and for all remodeling and repairs. It is just the thing for attic rooms, furnace rooms, fruit cellars, garages, offices and stores.

Where to get it: Get your Sheetrock from us. We carry it in standard ceiling heights and widths. Our trucks make prompt deliveries.

A salary of $500 while he worked. An Income of $500 when he retired

We must all face the day when our earning powers decline, our zest for business activities diminish, and the problem of future income becomes acute.

EIGHTY-FIVE out of every 100 men, when they face this situation at 65, find themselves dependent upon the kindness of children, relatives or the charitable organizations.

You can be financially independent at 60 if you want to.

Take the case of a man of 35, who never earned more than $500 a month. He determined to be free from financial worries and able to enjoy life in his later years, and began accumulating a fund.

Upon his living expenses he spent a little more than two-thirds of his income. The rest he invested in safe securities that yielded him an average of 6% through the years. His interest and dividends were reinvested promptly.

At the age of sixty, he retired from business. He had a fortune of $112,000, of which $50,000 were actual savings and $62,000 EARNINGS FROM HIS SAVINGS and the reinvested interest and dividends. His annual income was about $6,700.

While he worked he earned $500 a month. When he retired his Income Fund paid him over $500 each month.

TESTS EXPECTED TO LENGTHEN LIFE

Possibility of adding twenty to fifty years to the average human life span is seen in experiments that have been going on in a Detroit laboratory.

Lowly water organisms, called paramecia, have been the subjects of the experiments. For some months Prof. R. A. Muttkowski, Ph D., and his assistants, Leo Buss Chester Jaworski have been subjecting many generations of paramecia to a certain kind of electro-magnetic radiation called the "intra-molecular ray", which was found to increase greatly their vitality and resistance.

Paramecia are one-celled animals that live in stagnant water. They are just large enough to be visible to sharp eyes.

When translated into human life values the paramecia results may mean, they think, that perhaps twenty to fifty years of life can be added to the present average life span of fifty three years.

Parallel experiments made in Detroit, Mt. Clemens and Italy, they claim, point to the possibility of reviving drowned or asphyxiated persons where the present methods are without avail. The chief value of the radiations is asserted to be that they make possible a system of preventive medicine, through which the human body may be made capable of resisting the invasion of many fatal diseases, as well as the diseases and impairment of old age.

Paramecia make good subjects for experiments because they propagate by division. One of these animalculae separates into two parts normally every sixteen and six tenths hours. Each part, after division, is a duplicate of the parent cell. Scientists like the animals as material to experiment on because they increase rapidly. They can be counted and the effects of different sorts of treatment, can be expressed in percentages and curves.

The intra molecular radiation to which the paramecia were subjected is ordinary electro-magnetic induction. The force is really the same as that which makes a compass needle turn northward. In the specially built Pasque apparatus which was used at the University of Detroit laboratory the magnetic flux is interrupted thirty times a minutes and modified at the point of decay, to give rapid oscillations. This "oscillatory decay" is thought to give the results thus far observed.

MANY DEER KILLED AND BROUGHT INTO STATE

Statitics complied from reports filed by gasoline station attendants, freight agents, game wardens and native guides indicate that just one hunter out of four returned home without his metal tag in his vest pocket.

Twenty-five per cent of the mighty horde invading northern Michigan are today tiring their family and friends with details of the materialization of their annual dream.

Deep snows topped with heavy, crust, provided alibis for seventy-five per cent of the hunters. In the snow belt which lies immediately south of Lake Superior, native woodsmen, using snow shoes, brought down many prizes.

Thousands of hunters alarmed by the ever threatening weather, broke camp pitched in favored, isolated sections, fearing abandonment of their automobile. This disappointment legion either returned home on the third day following the opening of the deer season, or again made camp along arterial highways. State highway plows kept these roads free of snow.

Many sportsmen are advocating an earlier season on deer in nineteen twenty-eight as a result of their hardships this Fall and last year. Ardent conservationists contend the present opening date is better than restriction legislation. That the state will continue to enjoy huge revenues from the sale of licenses and still witness the multiplication of deer, providing the date of opening the season is left, unchanged.

The old saying is "Silence gives consent,' so you better keep quiet.

Mr. O'Leary's Second Love

By CHARLES LEVER

"However Fanny was obstinate—whether she suspected anything or not I cannot say---but one thing seemed to turn her from her purpose; and although I pleaded a thousand things in delay, yet she grew each day more impatient, and at last I saw there was nothing for it but to submit.

"When I arrived at this last bold resolve, I could not help feeling that to possess a horse, and not be able to mount him, was only deferring the ridicule and as I had so often expressed the difficulty I felt in suiting myself as a cause of my delay, I could not possibly come forward with anything very objectionable, or I should be only the more laughed at. There was, then, but one course to take; a fortnight still intervened before the day which was to make her happy, and I accordingly resolved to take lessons in riding during the interval, and by every endeavor in my power become, if possible also to pass muster on the saddle before my bride.

"Poor old Lalouette understood but little of the urgency of the case, when I requested but little of the urgency each morning at six o'clock, for I dared not absent myself during the day without exciting suspicion; and never, I will venture to assert, did knight errant of old strive harder for the hand of his lady love than did I during that weary fortnight. if a hippogriff had been the animal I bestrode, instead of being, as it was, an old wall-eyed gray. I could not have felt more misgivings at my temerity, or more proud of my achievements. In the first three days the unaccustomed exercise proved so severe, that when I reached the deanery I could hardly move, and crosesd the floor pretty much as a pair of compasses might be supposed to do if performing that exploit. Nothing, however, could equal the kindness of my poor dear mother-in-law in embryo and even the dean too. Fanny indeed said nothing; but I rather think she was disposed to giggle a little; but my rheumatism as it was called, was daily inquired after, and I was compelled to take some infernal stuff in my port wine at dinner that nearly made me sick at the table.

"I am sure you walk too much,' said Fanny, with one of her knowing looks. 'Papa don't you think he ought to ride., it would be much better for him,'

"I do my dear,' said the dean. "But then you see he is so hard to be pleased in a horse. Your old hunting days have spoiled you; but you must forget Melton and Grantham and condescend to keep a hack."

"I must have looked confoundedly foolish here, for Fanny never took her eyes off me, and continued to laugh in her own wicked way

"It was now about that ninth or tenth day of my purgatorial performances; and certainly; if there be any merit in freshly mortifications, these religious exercises of mine should stand my part here after. A review had been announced in the Phoenix Park, which Fanny had expressed herself most desirous to witness. and as the dean would not permit her to go without a chaperon, I had no means of escape, and promised to escort her. No sooner had I made this rash pledge than I hastened to my confidential friend, Lalouette, and having imparted to him my entire secret, asked him in a solemn and imposing manner, "Can I do it". The old man shook his head dubiously, looked grave and muttered at length, 'Mosch depend on de horse.' I know it— I know it— I feel it' said I, eargerly—'then where are we to find an animal that will carry me peacefully thru this awful day. I care not for his price.'

'Votre affaire ne sera trop chere said he.

"Why how do you mean, said I.'

'He than proceeded to inform me that, by a singularly fortunate chance, there took place that day an auction of 'cast horses' as they are termed, which had been used in the horse police force; and that from long diring and trained to stand fire, nothing could be more suitable than one of these being both easy to ride and not given to start at noise.

"I could have almost hugged the old fellow for his happy suggestion, and waited with impatience for three o'clock to come, when we repaired together to Essexbridge at that time the place selected for these sales.

"I was at first a little shocked at the look of the animals drawn up; they were most miserably thin most of them swelled in the legs, few without sore backs, and not one eye on an average in every three; but still they were all high-steppers and carried a great tail. "There's your affaire', said the old Frenchman, as a long legged fiddle-headed beast was led out; turning out his forelegs so as to endanger the man who walked beside him.

"Yes, there's blood for you', said Charley Dycer, seeing my eye fixed on the wretched beast; equal to fifteen stone with any foxhounds; safe in all his paces, and warranted sound; except,' added he, in a whisper, 'a slight spavin in both hind legs, ring-bone, and a little touch in the wind'. Here the animal gave an approving cough. 'Will any gentleman say fifty pounds to begin.' But no gentlemen did. A coachman however said five, and the sale was opened. the beast trotting up and down nearly over the bidders at every moment, and plunging on so that it was impossible to know what was doing.

"Five ten—fifteen—six pounds—thank you, sir—guineas'—seven pounds', said I, bidding against myself, not perceiving that I had spoken last. 'Thank you, Mr. Moriarty,' said Dycer turning toward an invisible purchaser supposed to be in the crowd. 'Thank you, sir you'll not let a good one go that way.. Every one here turned to find out the very knowing gentleman; but he could nowhere be seen.

"Dycer resumed, 'Seven ten, for Mr. Moriarty. Going for seven ten—a cruel sacrifice—there's action for you—playful beast.' Here the devil had stumbled and nearly killed a basket-woman with two children.

"Eight,' said I, with a loud voice

"Eight pounds, quite absurb,' said Dycer, almost rudely; 'a charger like that for eight pounds—going for eight pounds—no reserve, gentlemen, you are aware of that. They are all, as it were, his Majesty's stud—no reserve whatever—last time, eight pounds—gone.'

"Amid a very hearty cheer from the mob, God knows why; but a Dublin mob, always cheer—I returned accompanied by a ragged fellow, leading my new purchase after me with a hay halter.

"What is the meaning of those letters". said I, pointing to a very conspicious G. R., with sundry other enigmatical signs, burned upon the animals' hind quarter.

"That's to show he was a po-lis', said the fellow with a grin; 'and when ye ride with ladies, ye must turn the decoy side.'

The auspicious morning at last arrived; and, strange to say, that the first walking thought was of the unlucky day that ushered in my yachting excursion four years before. Why this was so I cannot pretend to guess; there was but little analogy in the circumstances at least so far as anything had then gone. 'How is Marius', said I to my servant, as he opened my shutters. Here let me mention that a friend of the Kildare Street club had suggested this name from the remarkably classic character of my steed's countenance; his nose, he assured me, was perfectly Roman.

"Marius is doing finely, sir, barring his cough and the trifle that ails his hind legs.'

"He'll carry me quietly, Simon, eh.'

"Quietly, I'll warrant he'll carry you quietly, if that's all".

'Here was comfort, certainly, Simon had lived for many years as pantry boy with my mother and knew a great deal about horses. I dressed myself, therefore in high spirits, and if my pilot jacket and oil-skin cap in former days had half persuaded me that I was born for marine achievements, certainly my cords and tops, that morning, went far to convince me that I must have once been a very keen sportsman somewhere without knowing it. It was a delightful July day that I set out to join my friends, who having recruited a large party, were to rendezvous at the corner of Stephen's Green; thither I proceeded in a certain rambling trot, which I have often observed is a very favorite pace with timid horsemen and gentlemen of the medical profession. I was hailed with a most hearty welcome by a large party as I turned out of Grafton Street, among whom I preceived several friends of Miss Eversham, and some young dragoon officers not of my acquaintance, but appeared to know Fanny initmately, and were laughing heartily with her as I rode up.

EDITORIALS FROM NEIGHBORING PAPERS

NEED HAVE NO FEAR

The National Grange need not be alarmed as press despatches say at the passing of the country doctor. The country doctor, or the doctor who doctors in the country, has not and will not pass away. He has, however, ceased to live in the country. He is now located in the larger villages and cities where living is more convenient and comfortable but on this account the country and the farming population, has not been deprived of a doctor. As a matter of fact the farming sections are now better served by the all around physician than they were forty years ago. Then it took a good half day or more to get a doctor from a distance of from five to ten miles. It was first necessary for some member of the family to ride horseback or drive to the village or "four corners" to inform the doctor that he was wanted. If perchance he was at home it took the doctor equally as long to hitch up his horse and drive to his patient.. Those were the days before telephones in farm homes, good roads and automobiles.

In these days a farmer ten miles from town phones the doctor and in fifteen minutes he is at his patient's bedside. In other words one doctor today can care for more patients within a ten mile radius than five doctors could reach in the same territory before the days of telephones and autos.

No, the country doctor is not passing. He lives in the larger towns but he is a better doctor and serves the country quicker and better than did his predecessor of a generation ago.—Mt. Pleasant.

HABITUAL CRIMINALS

Greenville folks have been arguing about the habitual criminal law which provides automatic life sentence for a person convicted of a fourth felony. Particular attention has been called to the new Michigan law by the life sentence of a man when his fourth felony chanced to be possession of liquor.

Probably the impulse for passing such a law was given by the general feeling that courts cannot always be relied upon to do their duty. In Chicago the other day a gangster was freed although evidence placed on him guilt for a gun murder. In Montcalm county not many would believe an habitual criminal law is needed. It is no doubt a good thing for the state as a whole. Possibly there needs to be some limitation of those fourth felonies to the more serious ones.—Greenville Daily News.

USE THE PAPERS

From the Editor's Pen.

Fred E. Erickson a public utility man, declared in a speech delivered before a group of colleagues in Milwaukee recently;,

"Use more newspaper advertising. The newspapers are universal in their appeal. They are thoroughly read by everyone . The women particularly read the advertisements with as much interest as they read the news, for advertisements are shopping news, telling the housewife how to make her budget go farther.

You said a mouthfull, Mr. Erickson. Every editor knows that his woman readers are as interested in the achievements as in his own exciting news stories and editorials.

Much as we hate to make the admission, we do feel sometimes that our local merchants here provide the most interesting news that appears in the columns of any paper.

HOOVER'S RESIDENCE

Already the "whispering campaign" of undermining support of candidates for the presidency has started and Herbert Hoover is the one attacked. A clause in the federal constitution says that a person to be eligible to hold the office of president of the United States must have "attained the age of thirty-five years and have been fourteen years a resident within the United States."

Herbert Hoover spent Many years in other countries prior to the war, following his profession as an engineer. Although born and reared here and always maintaining his citizenship the whispering hope either to have the "fourteen year clarse" construed as a bar to his eligibility or that it will act as a sort of bogy man to scare away support from Hoover is the reason for its being "whispered".—Crystal Fall Damond Drill.

The money that talks the loudest is liable to be hush money.

VANDENBERG SPEAKS AT MT PLEASANT

The progress of journalism as a factor in social and historical development was discussed at a public dinner by A. H. Vandenberg, publisher of the Grand Rapids Herald.

Declaring that modern newspapers and the swift interchange of news are vital influences in the reactions of modern life, Vandenberg states.

"It took Columbus, eighty-nine days to cross the Atlantic while it took Lindy less than two, but still more startling is the fact that it took the news of Columbus achievement six months to get back home whereas Lindbergh's arrival was known here in six seconds and was on the streets in newspapers in a quarter of an hour.

"If these modern news speeds had been possible in 1815 General Andrew Jackson would not have fought and won the famous battle of New Orleans after the treaty of Ghent had been signed ending the last war with England.

"The swiftness with which news travels authentically is one of the miracles of this age. The University of Missouri experimented in May this year and sent a news flash eastward around the world. It was back from the west in exactly eight minutes.

"Such contracts foreshorten the distances of earth and make for an infinitely surer intelligence than any other era has known. Thus the daily newspaper becomes one of the major contributions to progress. It's place becomes vital in the modern scheme of life. But the greater these opportunities become the greater become journalistic responsibilities; the greater becomes the challenge of the fundamental philosophy that journalism is a public trust before it is a private business."

INDUSTRIES OF MICHIGAN REFLECT NEW OPTIMISM

Michigan has been swept by a wave of business optimism during the past month according to a survey recently completed by the United Press. Bankers and business men, after a period of depression and waiting, have concurred to bring about a healthy business atmosphere during the last few months. Christmas found the state reflecting this new born prosperity, a poll of twenty-two of the leading cities of Michigan showing a total of ten billion, six hundred and seventy thousand dollars to be distributed to two hundred thousand persons in the form of Christmas Savings funds.

Stock dividends and interest payments heaped up between fifty million and 100 million dollars more into the laps of the state's citizens and industries. Detroit reported more persons at work now than during the past two years. The city is experiencing an unprecedented and somewhat surprising early shopping season. Much of the showing for the city is credited to the beginning of production on the new Ford car.

Pontiac, Flint, Battle Creek, Muskegon, Kalamazoo, and Lansand and also reported an increased business activity. Two skyscrapers, each costing one million or more, are to be erected in Pontiac. The Chevrolet plant at Flint, after being closed for inventory, has reopened to complete the building of one million cars this year.

Continental Motors at Muskegon have gone back to a five day week schedule in place of its two day week. Kalamazoo's paper mills reported better business conditions. Reo Motor Company at Lansing, continues to work at top speed while the Oldsmobile is engaged upon the construction of a three million dollar addition.

The Pere Marquette Railroad is ready to spend four million dollars in building its main line through Pontiac while the Grand Trunk system will probably double this expenditure in changing its right of way along Woodward avenue and in other improvements between Detroit and Pontiac.

Why run for a street car. Another one will be along in a minute—labeled "Car Barns Only."

You can't have your cake and eat it—neither can you have a full dinner pail and loaf.

"Rooms are Larger at the Detroit-Leland"

There is no initiation into the great fraternity of those who travel. Yet it is legion—and it is one of the most exclusive in the world.

When a new contribution appears to add comfort and vivacity, you hear of it in the smoking rooms of crack trains, in the saloons of ocean greyhounds, or in the lounges of great hotels.

So, today, you hear—"Rooms are larger at the new Detroit-Leland—airier, more luxurious, and cuisine and service transcend perfection."

It is an endorsement that can not be bought, for the fraternity is jealous of its endorsements.

You who have envisaged the ideal hotel may safely follow those connoisseurs whose endorsements have brought international renown to the new Detroit-Leland.

The Association Opposed to All Prohibitions

We are organizing an association opposed to all prohibitions. We intend to be captains of our own souls. We are going to brook no interference in any of our personal habits from any body. We will violate all laws that interfere with our personal habits. We will demand the repeal of all such laws. We will incite everyone to violate these laws until they are repealed. We serve notice on the country and on individual states that such legislation must stop.

As we travel around to see everywhere signs forbidding spitting. We are forbidden to spit on platforms, in cars, on sidewalks. We intend to spit wherever we please. We ask everyone else to do the same. Let no power take away from us the privilege of spitting anywhere.

Sometimes we find signs forbidding smoking. They attempt to stop us from smoking in the subways. On the street cars we are told we can smoke in only certain seats. We are warned against smoking in factories. We are prohibited from smoking in the movies. There are hotel dining rooms that do not allow smoking. All this must be abolished. We claim the right to smoke whenever and wherever we please. We will do this regardless of any laws or regulations that may be passed.

We find everywhere certain laws interfering with our locomotion. Almost everywhere they have speed limits for travel. Frequently in cities we have one-way streets. Traffic is regulated by certain lights. We intend to spurn all these regulations. We will travel where, when, and how we please until all these laws are abolished.

Some states have passed laws against gambling. We regard such laws as an unwarranted interference with our divine rights. We will bet all we want to on every occasion that we feel like it. We demand that all regulations that try to interfere with gambling be abolished. Meantime we will strenuously violate them.

There are many prohibitory laws that have been passed that relate to immigration questions. On returning to the country from a trip abroad the law attempts to limit us to $100 only of imported goods except we pay a duty. We propose to bring in any amount we wish without paying any duty. We will lie and deceive to accomplish our purpose. We regard it as outrageous that a quota has been fixed governing the incoming of immigrants. We demand that these quotas be removed at once. If the law is not repealed we shall bootleg in all of our friends or relatives that we please regardless of the law. We also object to import duties on many things. We claim the right to bring in any amount of tobacco and liquor and narcotics that we please.

We demand the repeal of all laws governing the sale of narcotics. If we want the kick from opium or heroin or any other narcotic, it is our business. We should have the privilege of securing any amount of any narcotic that we want.

In some states there are laws prohibiting the carrying of revolvers or bowie knives. This is an unmitigated impertinence. If a gentleman or a lady wants to wear a revolver or a razor, it is no one's else business. We will carry all the weapons we please. We demand the repeal of the law that tries to interfere with onr personal habits.

There are many laws that try to regulate the acts of the community. These laws are originated by a set of meddling fanatics. We demand the immediate repeal of them all. The United States must repeal the Mann law. This is an unwarranted interferance with a person's personal liberty. There are many states that have passed laws against adultery. These are all unwarranted interference with our personal habits, and we will violate them and demand their repeal because they can never be enforced.

The statute books are filled with many prohibitions on minor matters. The sale of fireworks for the proper celebration of the Fourth of July is either restricted or abolished. We cannot parade in the interests of our ideals without a police permit. These and many other similar prohibitory regulatious are all wrong and must be speedily nullified.

All of these hrohibitory laws are incapable of enforcement. They lack the proper approval. This is shown by the many violations after the laws have long been on the statute books. Juries also frequently acquit those charged with violations of these laws.

All who will join us in this association opposed to all prohibitions please send in their names and addresses to the author at the publiation office of this paper.

(Signed) Ignace Johann Umberto and Patrick Fish.

Chestnut Timber Becoming Scarce

It is a source of much anxiety to many to know that chestnut timber of the country is practically gone and what little remains will soon be killed by the chestnut blight with which the trees are afflicted.

Tree surgeons and specialists in entomology all over the United States wherever chestnut grows, are trying with might and main to discover some remedy for the disease without avail, and fine stands of chestnut bid fair to be completely destroyed. In some eastern states people have planted these trees hoping to take care of disintegration. Chestnut timber is especially desirable for fence posts, telephone poles, mine and railroad timbers, etc., in fact wherever long exposure to weather conditions make ordinary hiokcrys oaks and elms go to ruin quickly.

Sheriff's Weekly Report for Week Ending December 25, 1927

On Monday Era Hutton confessed Montgomery Bootlegger was conducted to the Reformatory at Ionia for a six months sojourn, following the sentence in the Circuit court.

Bessie Manning runaway from the County farm, was apprehended on Monday at Prattville after a few days absence in Ohio and elsewhere Bessie was our guest all week while her case was being investigated and settled by the Probate Court. Her career as a County charge came to an abrupt end on Saturday when she was married by Judge Guernsey to Mr. Long of Prattville a friend of long standing.

On the same day, Mrs. Mary Thompson of Wheatland Twp., advised by phone that a neighbor had induced her husband Floyd, to store on their farm a few gallons of alleged moonshine and a still. Mrs. Thompson, knowing the danger of such a course, objected and as a final act "Called the Sheriff." Considerable time was unnecessarily lost in obtaining the search warrant so that when it was finally executed, much of the contraband goods had taken wings, or rather wheels. However enough was found to submit for an analysis and as a result our elusive friend, Mr. O. B. Laubaugh, familarily known as Sam, again found himself in the clutches of the Law. He immediately furnished the required bond of $1000 and was released, but his Buick car was not so fortunate as yet. Two stills, the largest ever taken in the county and the smallest were found the same day. We are grateful, as should all good citizens be, to those conscientious neighbors who so very materially aided in this "capture." Sam is still under bond for the Colored Water episode of last July and in the light of recent developments that episode should have a deeper signification.

Tuesday, A. C. Wilson, Wheatland Twp. was arrested by the Conservation Dept for illegal buying of furs (no license). Case was continued one week.

Victor Lacarzac, Federal Prisoner, was released per expiration of his sentence of 91 days.

Earl Foley wanted by Ohio for child desertion was surrendered to Sheriff Fleck of VanWert Co. on a Governer's warrant.

On Thursday, the Coroners Jury called to investigate the death of Mr. Alex Stone, who was instantly killed last week, found that Mr. Stone met his death due to an unavoidable accident. Case was before Coroner Aldrich.

Mr. Arch Branch, Somerset Twp had nine turkeys stolen on Wednesday night. Investigation by the Sheriff Dept is well under way.

On Saturday, Carll, a Federal prisoner was taken to Detroit before Commissioner Hurd, where the Paupers Oath was administered and the man released. Carl had been sentenced to pay a fine of $500.

Virgil Holmes, driving a Ford Coupe, was arrested on Vine St. Hillsdale, Saturday noon as he was in the act of delivering a quantity of moonshine at the Vine St. Grocery. His car, together with a gallon jug and 12 quarts bottles full of the beverage, were confiscated and Holmes lodged in jail, shortly afterwards, Ed Bloemker of Adams Twp. and Roy Householder, proprietor of the store, who had both on separate occasions, sold the stuff to Officers, were arrested. Householder was arraigned before Justice Fitzsimmons about 10 p. m. Saturday night, bond fixed at $1000 not yet furnished. All three at this time are still on the register.

Russell Talmadge was arrested Saturday evening by a Deputy near Maiderville who found Talmadge's car, a Ford Sedan, overturned in a ditch. It is charged that Talmadge was drunk, but he was not driving at the time of the accident Fortunately no serious injury resulted to any of the occupants of the car. Mr. Talmadge was later released to appear Tuesday to answer to the charge.

Wm McNally and Fred White both wanderers, were arrested in Jonesville Saturday night. Fred was drunk on canned heat or similar decoction and McNally will be charged with larceny of groceries from a parked car in Jonesville.

Total prisoners in jail 15.

THE HIDDEN KEY--AND OTHER FAKES

By W. R. MOREHOUSE

Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association

W. R. MOREHOUSE.

HAVE you ever gone hunting for the hidden key—a key hidden by real estate dealers in order that you among hundreds of others might be given the exercise of tearing up the surface of some new subdivision looking for it? Talk about wild turkeys tearing up the "terra firma," they haven't anything on man. A new subdivision is put on the market. Public interest in the tract is needed, so a key that will open a box in the tract office is hidden beneath the earth's surface somewhere in the tract. This hidden key will open the box in the office and inside the box the lucky finder of the hidden key will find a valuable prize. It may be anything from a diamond ring to an order for an automobile. A new automobile stands in front of the office and presumably it is the prize.

Picture in your own mind hundreds of eager searchers digging over the surface of a newly born boom subdivision, looking for the hidden key—the key to the big surprise box. About the time the diggers have been recruited to several hundred, the key shows up and the news of the discovery breaks. Soon the diggers gather around to see the mysterious box opened. Imagine the babble of joking remarks, some sarcastic and some expressing disappointment, as the grand prize is found to be a $100 certificate good as part payment on a lot, and not the new automobile. Day after day the hunt goes on, a new crop of diggers taking the places of those who have gone through the experience, with the same prize automobile serving as bait. The soil that was turned over the day before is turned back by the new crop of diggers today, and so it goes day after day. A lot of digging by a lot of people, a lot of soiled footwear, one key and one automobile, but an unlimited supply of $100 certificates. Just another scheme to catch a lot of "suckers."

SAVINGS DEPT.
PAYING TELLER
Investigate Before Drawing Your Money Out of the Bank.

Nearly every person possesses the gambling instinct to a more or less degree. The truth is, the average American is more or less inclined to take unnecessary risks. In the realm of money making many are ready to take a long-shot chance in order to strike it rich, if possible.

Knowing the inclination of the average American to gamble, irresponsible schemers lie awake nights plotting as to the best way of arousing the gambling instinct of the investor, and when this has been done they proceed to fleece him out of his cash. By using various "baits" these get-rich-quick promoters are usually successful, especially among persons who are inexperienced in making investments and who neglect to investigate before they invest.

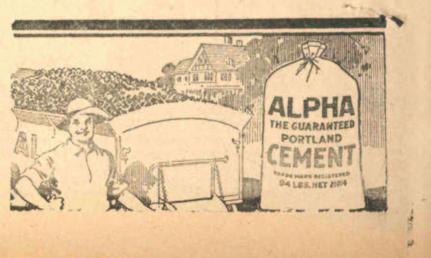
You can't get rich by dealing with promoters of the wild-cat type, but you can quickly lose what capital you have already saved. The road to the poorhouse is worn deep by the feet of persons who have dealt with irresponsible promoters and not by the feet of those who have a savings account or good bonds earning interest regularly and increasing in value day by day. The signing of your name on the dotted line of some trick contract, or the drawing of your check payable to some sharp real estate or other promoter, or the turning over of your cash, may spell financial ruin for you.

As a safeguard against losing your cash reserve, leave it in the bank until you have made a thorough investigation, which you can do without cost to you if you will consult your banker, or write to the National Better Business Bureau, New York.

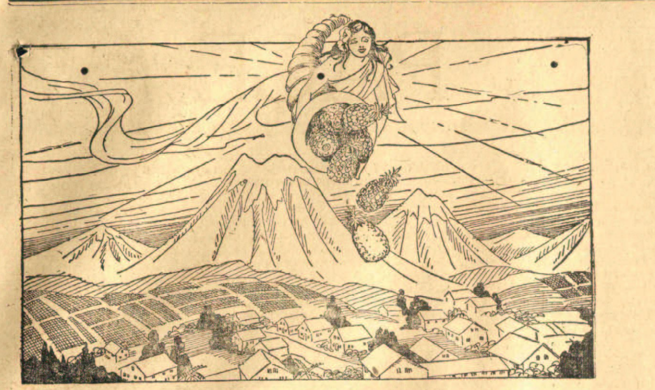
Each day discloses new victims of some crooked scheme. Old schemes having lost their effectiveness as a result of exposure have given way to new schemes to defraud. The new schemes are even more deceptive than the old forms. Fractional-share schemes, territorial-rights schemes and co-operative land ventures are reaping a harvest for present promoters. Because so many new schemes are being formulated is another reason why you should investigate before you invest.

WLS, the Sears Roebuck Station, will broadcast hockey games played in the Coliseum in Chicago all this season. The games will be those of the National Hockey League, of which the Chicago Blackhawks are a member.

The hockey season will continue until March 21, 1928. Last season was the first for professional hockey, in a successful way, in Chicago. From the start of the season WLS broadcast the contests. Bert Johnston, "word a second announcer," as he is called, handled the games for WLS last year and has been secured to handle the WLS microphone at the hockey rinkside this year.



ALPHA THE GUARANTEED PORTLAND CEMENT



PINEAPPLES PLENTIFUL

ALTHOUGH the peak pack of 78,693 cases, or 1,607,845 cans of pineapple put up on July 17th last year by the largest company in Hawaii was not equaled this year, word comes from the islands that there will be no shortage of this succulent fruit. In August last year this company packed 420,083 cases as compared with 661,547 cases this year, and the probabilities are that the final figures for September will show more pineapple packed during that month this year than last.

The biggest production month last year was July, and the night shift was started this year in the biggest fruit cannery in the world on June 28th. This cannery packed some 66,000 cases on that date, and for about a week it packed between 60,000 and 70,000 cases a day. After that the pack decreased to about 50,000 to 60,000 cases a day for the next ten days, and then, on account of some extremely wet weather, the pack dropped off, and the night shift was discontinued on July 20th.

How Such Records Are Made

The secret of good canned pineapple is speed. The quicker this juicy tropical fruit can be gotten out of its jacket and into the can, the better. This is because there is something more than food to be preserved. That something is its elusive flavor, and this is why the process of canning has been perfected in Hawaii until the total time between the removal in the cannery of the shell of the ripe fresh fruit and the finished product is 27 minutes, 58-3/5 seconds.

Here are the steps. Out from the Ginaca machine to the trimming table shoots the "pine" minus shell, core, and ends. A moving belt carries it on to the slicer and then to the packing table, where it is sorted into cans according to grade and color by women wearing rubber gloves. The time required for these processes is 91-1/5 seconds from fruit to can.

Then follows the vacuum process, syruping, exhaust and sealing. Time 8 minutes, 32-2/5 seconds. Finally comes the cooking, lacquering the can, drying the lacquer, and cooling the can. Time 17 minutes, 55 seconds. This, totals 27 minutes, 58-3/5 seconds, as stated above.

Is Pele Responsible?

The Hawaiian Islands are full of picturesque folk lore, and some of the natives think that Pele, Goddess of Plenty, is responsible for their abundant crops. Last July the Volcano of Kilauea, the stellar attraction of Hawaii's National Park, flared to the stars for the first time since 1920. Kilauea is a peak 4,000 feet high on the slopes of Mauna Loa which reaches a height of 13,875 feet.

The return of lava to this volcano caused a great celebration among the native Hawaiians. To them the fire in the pit means that their goddess, Pele, has returned, and that prosperity will come with her to stay. On the day the volcano erupted natives were making sacrifices all day long at the fire-pit by throwing many herbs and various tokens sacred to the fire goddess into the fire and fumes below.

Within a few minutes after the fire had been sighted by the watchman at the Volcano House, the whole country was lighted up by the brilliant glow. Four huge fountains, each spurting molten rock to a height of two hundred feet appeared. The fountains are an awesome spectacle. Thousands of fragments of red-hot rock are periodically flung out of the crater like giant skyrockets. Jagged cracks open up in the black mass of lava, exposing the red-hot molten rock below. The pattern of these cracks is constantly changing as Pele promises prosperity.

Where the Pineapples Go

The pineapples, the fruit of this prosperity, are exported from Hawaii to the mainland at the rate of about $35,000,000 worth a year. They have been flowing in a constantly increasing tide into the kitchens of American housewives ever since this industry was founded a little more than a quarter of a century ago.

From these kitchens they go into various dishes. They are served alone, in fruit cocktails and in salads, combined with meats and fish because they are a powerful aid to the digestion of protein, made into sauces and many desserts, and even cooked with vegetables, such as sweet potatoes and tomatoes, and breakfast cereals such as rice.

Boys Win Prizes At Potato Shows

Youth will be served in growing potatoes as well as in athletic contests, according to reports made by the boys and girls club department at M. S. C.

In competition with some of the best adult growers of potatoes in 10 southwestern Michigan counties, Robert Nothdurft, Dowagiac, a 14 year old club boy, won sweep stakes for the best exhibit of potatoes brought to the show conducted by the New York Central Railroad and M. S. C.

In the county contests from which the best samples were selected to compete for sweepstakes Francis Schell, Battle Creek, was second in Calhoun county; Edgar Till, South Haven, won first in VanBuren; and James Meeks, North Adams took first place in Hillsdale county.

These winners, with the exception of James Meeks, were club boys, and James was out of club work this year only because he is just past the age limit for club members.

Everyone who visited the potato train was invited to enter a grading contest in which the participants were required to separate a field-run sample of potatoes into the market grades specified by the grading laws.

Club boys won the first seven places in Kalamazoo county in grading. Francis Schell, Battle Creek, won first in Calhoun county and Robert Story, Lawton, rounded out the winnings for the youngsters with a third place in Van Buren county.

Mr. Coolidge has a lot of trouble ahead of him. The farmers are bitter towards him, many of the American Legion are put out with him, his foreign plans have run amuck, the majority of the Senate are in opposition to him, his party is developing a fundamental division on the tariff, and now that he is out of the running you can just bet your sweet life that Congress will be taking all kinds of jabs at him. With his present mental attitude and equipment, he will be a very unhappy man most of the time until he leaves office, a year from next March. Can he name his successor? If he would start in right now as Roosevelt did with Taft, he could have a powerful influence, because his office holders, every one of whom he can fire without a moment's notice, have a heap to do with the selecting and directing of the delegates to the national convention. But if he fools around very long about it he will cut mighty little figure. There's a pile of difference between the man coming in and the man going out of office. "The King is dead! Long live the king!"

That Road Question Again

We have never seen as fine roads in North Adams and round about as at this particular time and of course we must give the credit to our daily road scraper in all directions—east, west, north, south—and we are glad this is so. Especially after so fierce rain as we have been having it is remarkable the gravel is not punched through in many places—People who come here from a distance often remark upon the condition of our newly built gravel highways and we are glad for this also. Let the good words go on.

It is admittedly true the road up-keep tax is rather stiff and bound to be stiffer as time progresses and more of the gravel is put in which by the way will not be during 1928 as we understand Governor Green has vouchasafed there is not funds for any more new construction for the next year. We have only one regret and that is, the poor material which went into the road east of the village. Here we find the gravel simply "rotten" and the road so badly punctured in the early part of last spring as to practically ruin it. There seems to be in all road construction in this vicinity altogether too little attention given to the drainage. We have no bones to pick with contractors—it is likely they are building simply what they are paid to build, but we feel there has been a serious mistake made in the specifications of roadways in this and in adjoining townships. Why this shortsightedness on the part of highway commissioners we do not know. Of course a twenty-five foot road costs more than an eighteen foot road, but that is not the problem. The question is, which of these roadways is going to require the least expensive up-keep, since we all know it is not the first cost of a road but the care of it afterward which must be reckoned with. Sometimes it seems as if our road builders could well go back to the early Roman times of Julius Caesar for their instruction. There are numbers of instances where the roads built by these Romans are being used to-day and they are good. Judging from the number of automobiles and their increase, roads have a large bearing on the auto population, and it would not be amiss if the great manufacturers of these machines were called upon for a per car tax the proceeds to be used for establishing the road system without which they could not sell any machines.

The Joy of Giving

Another Christmas has passed; joys of giving and receiving have been lived over again as they have been from time immemorial. Little children taught from infancy to believe in Santa Claus have been gratified and comforted as in the days of Christ on earth when he said with pathos "suffer little children to come unto me for of such is the kingdom of heaven" and again "as ye have did it unto the least of these ye have did it unto me" and how true does this seem in this twentieth century when the cities are full of poverty and want and nakedness and suffering. Little cold feet and hands, little faces grimed and discolored from exposure and want of care.

We are glad that our own particular community looks after its financially short citizens. In Hillsdale each Christmas Day the Salvation Army and the various clubs and organizations all take an interest in outdoing each other. Baskets of good cheer and food are distributed with a lavish hand, and many a destitute family have reason to thank their lucky stars there is somebody who cares. The Christmas cheer becomes a thing of duty as the years swiftly pass by. When the most of us were kids we thought little of it, except to receive—now we think all of it is to give, and we feel the world is a vast field of good cheer a glorious rythm tuned to the harps on high. Nineteen hundred years ago in the Holy Land history tells us where dwelt the Immortal Man of Galilee and he went about teaching and preaching. He inspired the common herd with religious sentiment; he talked to them in parables couched in the simple language they could understand. Roman authority under the tyrant found in Him a thorn of discontent His teachings in their territory brought little to further their gainful practices. They crucified him between two baser criminals and congratulated themselves that justice was surely in the saddle and wrong under foot During the centuries that have slipped away since Christ walked and talked in Palestine the world has been growing wiser but wicked er. We have not however abandoned our age-old customs of celebrating the immaculate birth and the Star of the East looks just as bright to-day as it did 1900 years ago. Its rays seem to shoot downward bathing the elect of this world with a flood of light. Learned Professors have tried to tell us how that history and the Bible have overlapped each other, and while they claim some of the Bible is fiction they also have to admit that some history rings quite untrue. All their efforts to disqualify the birthday of the Savior have to date been rather fruitless. Christmas is with us in full force, and while we sometimes despair of being able to observe it properly because of so many other expenses which modern civilization has put upon our shoulders, yet there is a pleasant surge of thought coming over us that the Hallowed day will never pass away. Most of the common class in our midst are vulgar in the sense they are expecting something real expensive—or nothing at all for them. They estimate the value of Christmas giving by the price mark; this is downright brutal and uncivilized. There is no such thing as value in dollars and cents in a Christmas present and cursed be they who would claim such an impropriety. The heart and the good will of the giver are the only incentives and the only thermometer of values.

We repeat, the millenium has arrived inasmuch as all the needy are taken care of—and in such a way nobody is embarassed and nobody financially reduced. Let the Christmas spirit go on and on—let it be with us—yea, even to the end of the world.

WHAT RADIO MEANS TO THE AIRMAN

Ingenious New Transmitters and Receivers Helping to Remove Aviation From the Stunt Stage to the Practical Commercial Phase.

Whatever radio means to the navigator and his fares at sea, it must soon come to mean as much or more to the airman and his passengers when flying over the trackless ocean or across the black or foggy countryside—not as a spectacular feat but rather as a matter of routine. To the aerial navigator, radio offers a ready means of communication with those below. It affords a wonderful organization for gathering and collating meteorological facts, that the airman may know the weather that lies ahead of him over a given route, and plan accordingly. By means of the direction finder, radio provides the true guide posts of the skies defining the aerial highways. Indeed, commercial aviation, in passing from the stunt stage to the commercial stage, can progress only so fast as radio beacons shall dot the great air routes of tomorrow.

Aviation radio is something quite apart from marine, transoceanic or broadcasting radio. In fact, it introduces still another phase of radio communication. The mechanical requirements of aviation radio are peculiar unto itself for in no other application must weight and space be so assiduously conserved.

Yet there is a most attractive side to aviation radio despite the rigid handicaps of minimum weight and bulk. Aircraft radio transmitters are capable of remarkable range with little power, due to the unobstructed propagation of the waves from the loftily trailing antenna, so that what power might be lost in meeting weight and bulk requirements is perhaps more than made up in other ways.

Special Aircraft Equipment Developed

The engineers of the Radio Corporation of America and its associated companies, the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, and the General Electric Company, are giving considerable attention to the development of aircraft transmitters, receivers, and special equipment. [illegible] of the special equipment developed for airplanes may be mentioned the installation aboard the ill-fated "American Legion" of Commander Davis, which crashed prior to its proposed transatlantic flight. Weighing less than 65 pounds, without the accessories, and occupying an absolute minimum of space, this equipment included two transmitters and a receiver, with an effective working range of over a thousand miles! One transmitter was intended for shortwave operation on 45 meters, and included a crystal quartz oscillator so as to hold the signals rock steady for ready interception at the distant points. The other transmitter was intended for communication with ships and marine land stations, with a wavelength range of from 550 to [illegible] meters. Both transmitters em- [illegible] ployed three tubes, an oscillating detector of the UX-201-A type, and two stages of audio-frequency amplification with the same type of tubes. It weighed only 14 pounds. Both transmitter and receiver were mounted on strips of sponge rubber to minimize undesirable effects from the tremendous vibration present in an airplane.

Only Radio Assures Safety

So far as the technique of aircraft radio is concerned, the means for entirely satisfactory service are at hand. The recent transatlantic flight of Commander Byrd in particular, as typified by the constant bulletins from the "America" to the world at large during the passage, proves the value of radio communication to the airman. It is no stretch of the imagination or of enthusiasm to say that the carrying of radio by the transatlantic flyer spells the difference between some measure of safety and a complete gamble. At the cost of a few pounds, and perhaps two cubic feet of their valuable space and competent operation, the intrepid airmen who have been lost in the ocean wastes of the Atlantic and the Pacific, during the past few months, might still be counted among the living.

Calumet, Mich.—A new bell, 800 pounds in weight, was dedicated for St. John's Croatian church, by the Very Rev. A. J. Rezek, D. D. Assisting Father Rezek were several other Copper Country priests. The huge bell of St. John's church was destroyed by a fire which razed the church two years ago. Since the destruction of its former edifice, the parish has erected a model church on the ruins. Addition of the new bell will be one of the final steps towards completing the new church.

FARMER EFFICIENCY INCREASED STATES MR. JARDINE

The recent annual report of the Secretary of Agriculture lays considerable emphasis on the fact that the efficiency of the farmers in the United States is on the up grade. Secretary Jardine points out the fact that while the number of cows in the United States is less than in nineteen twenty, the production of milk is greater, showing that better cows and better methods are now used in producing milk. He furthers says; "In the nine years since the World War ended, our agriculture has undergone far reaching changes which have materially increased the output of both land and labor. Tractors have replaced many horses and mules, releasing land for other uses than the production of feed and forage. Improved harvesting machinery has come into wide use. The size of the average farm has increased. More productive crops have been planted. Livestock of increased productivity has become widely dispersed. Farm management has become more efficient, a better balance has been established among agricultural enterprises, and progress has been made in adjusting production to market requirements.'

HERDS VERSUS HOMES

Some farmers pay more attention to installing labor saving conveniences in their dairy barns than in their homes, according to a recent survey made in Wisconsin by the State Department of Agriculture. This survey showed that a higher percentage of Wisconsin farmers have running water in their barns than in their houses. The explanation for this of course, is the fact that running water available at all times in dairy barn stalls greatly increases milk production, as water is the chief "feed' for high producing dairy cows. Nevertheless, running water in the house would pay these same farmers good dividends in increasing the health and happiness of the housewife says the Research Department of the National Association of Farm Equipment Manufacturers as a good supply of running water in the kitchen is one of the greatest labor savers that a housewife can have.

Five year term marriages, with option of renewal are advocated by a California judge. Well, that insures the "married' vote for him.

"COMBINES" INVADE THE EAST

Eastern States were invaded by modern harvesting machinery and labor saving methods during the past year, comments the Research Department of the National Association of Farm Equipment Manufacturers after surveying the rapid increase in the number of combined harvester-threshers in use east of the Mississippi River. Originally introduced on the Pacific Coast, the combine came into Kansas, Texas, Oklahoma and other Great Plains States in great numbers during the past five years until Kansas used approximately twelve thousand in her nineteen twenty-seven harvest. It was originally believed that combines could not be used in the humid Eastern States but some progressive farmers bought them to harvest soy beans in Illinois.

OIL BOOM HITS MUSKEGON MICH.

Oil in paying quantities was discovered at Muskegon in the second test well of the Muskegon Oil corporation at a depth of one thousand, six hundred and fifty-eight feet.

Drillers have not yet pierced the limestone shell under which they expect to find the Saginaw oil bearing sand, but enough had seemed into the bottom of the hole since they stopped drilling to fill it for about one hundred feet.

R. F. Gerbson of the Chicago office of the Dixie Oil company, a subsidiary of the Standard Oil company of Indiana, estimated that they have between six and eight barrels of oil of a specific gravity of about forty-two. This is similar to the product of the Saginaw field, now selling at two dollars and nine cents a barrel.

The oil is accompanied by a heavy flow of natural gas, variously estimated at from three hundred thousand to one million cubic feet per day. The well will be capped today and drilling operations continued until the limestone cap has been pierced, when it will be possible to tell the extent of the oil.

BATTLE CREEK MAN IS RHODES NOMINEE

Former Rhodes scholars in the United States have proposed to the Rhodes trustees a change in the method of allotment, President Frank Aydelotte of Swarthmore college, announced tonight. Dr. Aydelotte, who is American secretary to the Rhodes trustees, made the announcement in connection with the naming of the winners of thirty-two appointments for scholarships to Oxford university, England, under the will of Cecil Rhodes.

The outstanding fact in the history of the scholarships since the war, said Dr. Aydelotze, has been the large increase in the competition and corresponding improvement.

"Encouraged by this improvement", he said, "the former Rhodes scholars have proposed that the United States be divided into eight districts of six states each, with a competition to be held in every state every year, instead of only two years out of three, as at present and that each state committee be allowed to nominate one or two scholars who would appear before the regional committee as candidates for the four appointments from that district. The regional committee would then appoint the four best without regard to state lines.

For the thirty-two Rhodes scholarships available in the United States this year, the four hundred and ninety seven candidates previously has been selected and approved by their respective colleges and universities.

DAIRYMEN "PAIL" COWS BY MACHINE

"Pailing' the cows, pet aversion of the country boy for generations has passed from the hand to the machine class, according to reports from a recent meeting of the Iowa cow testers. An average of more than eleven machines were used by members of each cow testing association represented at the meeting.

Dairymen are unanimous in declaring that they would not think of operating a modern dairy farm without a milking machine. Most of the machines where electricity is available are operated by electric motor, while the others are operated by small gas engines at a cost of approximately three cents per hour. Most dairymen agree that the cows should be stripped by hand, according to the cow testers.

Other Features in Preparation.

From time to time we will announce new features that will make this newspaper the welcome friend and trusted guide during the coming year.

DINNER READY IN FIVE MINUTES

Five minutes in which to prepare luncheon or supper. Is it possible. Sometimes it has to be done when some emergency suddenly arises and it really is possible to prepare an appetizing, sub stantial meal in a very short time.

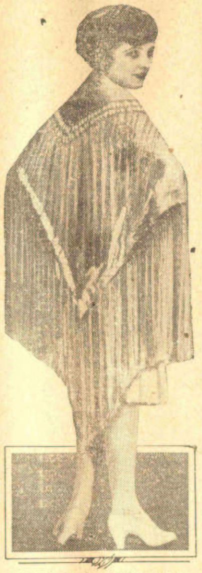
Ready cooked, ready prepared foods in packages and cans are, of course indispensible for "quick notice' meals. The slight labor they require in serving consumes only minutes where otherwise hours might be required.

Take pork and beans for example. One or two cans of pork and beans of a dependable brand can furnish the basis of a hearty meal for the whole family. And the beans will require only a few minutes of warming before serving. There you have a delicious food, wonderfully flavored, that contains an abundance of nutritive elements and satisfies the appetite.

And it only takes a few moments But those few moments do not indicate what long hours the pork and beans were in process of preparation in the great kitchens of the manufacturer, what care was used in securing the highest grade handpicked beans; the cleaning, the sorting; the soaking and parboiling; the baking, at a uniform temperature; the mixing and blending of pork and sauce. As you taste the beans on your plate sweet and tender, surfaces unbroken and wonderfully rich in flavor, do you ever think what work and worry it would require on your part to match this food, doing all the work yourself.

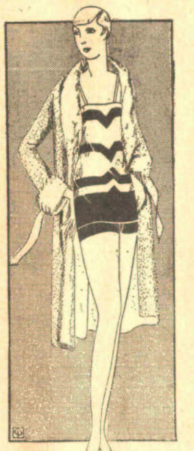
The convenience and labor saving that you find in serving park and beans are exemplified many times over in the variety of other prepared foods to be had at your grocer's. Serving these foods regularly isn't "work-dodging". They really permit you to exercise your cooking array to the utmost in wonderfufl array of appetizing dishes you can make from them.

Moonlight and Roses



The lovely shawl pictured might be said to be composed of moonlight and roses. It is made of silver lame with a brilliant design of red roses, and is edged with a two-foot white silk fringe.

Mid-Winter Vacation



The first snow flurry brings to many the thought of a mid-winter vacation in the sunny south. Lelong designs this bathing suit of two tones of blue knitted material, with coat of plain blue lined with tissue sponge.

Prepared foods are not only for emergencies; they can be used with complete satisfaction, every day of the week. Most homes now keep a good supply of these foods on the pantry shelf.

DETROIT GETS U. S. AIR SHOW

Detroit will be the scene of the National Aircraft Show in June 1928 and the startling and terminating point of the greatest National Air Tour ever undertaken, according to Ray Cooper, Detroit Board of Commerce secretary for aeronauties. Mr. Cooper returned recently from a five week's air tour in which he visited vitually all the aircraft manufacturers in the United States and more than 30 cities which seek the 1928 tour for the Edsel Ford Trophy.

The majority of the aircraft manufacturers are doing a very substantial business now, Mr. Cooper said, "and are ready to go into a joint indoor display of their craft and accessories. Virtually all of them look favorably on Detroit as the best test location for the show and we will make an effort to hold it here permanently in the future.

PUBLIC HEALTH FIGHT PUSHED

In Lansing the center of politics it is easy to lose sight of a group of white robed figures who occupy unostentatiously the two upper floors of the State Office Building.

Seldom do the visitors at the capitol buildings reach these floors. Usually they are content to take a peep at the Governor's office, glance wonderingly at the dome and gaze at the war relics on the first floor.

Few realize that these fitting figures, who occasionally are seen in the hallways with phials filled with "smelly" things, are working day and night in an effort to combat disease and provide safeguards for the public health. They might well be called the "unsung heroes" of Michigan.

Officially, the two upper floors of the State Office Building is known as the Michigan Department of Public Health. The scope of its work, the methods it pursues in educating the old and young into better understanding of health problems, the practical work it does in the laboratories and in the field of epidemics and communicable disease is understood by few people.

To carry on the Public Health work in the State, $813,000 will be spent in the next two years under the direction of Dr. Guy L. Keifer, commissioner. The personal of the department consists of 150 men and women. In this group are 66 persons technically trained. This includes eight physicians, six sanitary engineers 14 registered nurses, two public health lecturers, one dentist and 35 bacteriologists chemists and serologists.

The department is divided into eight bureaus. They are known as the Bureau of Engineering with Edward D. Rich, director; Bureau of Records and Statistics, Dr. W. J. V. Deacon, director; Bureau of Epidemiology, Dr. Don M. Griswold, director; Bureau of Laboratories, Dr. C. C. Young, director; Bureau of Child Hygiene, Dr. Lillian R. Smith, director. Bureau of Education, Marjorie Delavan, director; Bureau of Mouth Hygiene, Dr. Wililam R. Davis, director and Bureau of Embalming E. J. Pienta director.

There is also an unpaid advisory council consisting of Drs. C. C. Slemons, Grand Rapids; R. B. Harkness, Houghton; Chalmers J. Lyons, Ann Arbor and Louis J, Hirschman and Leo Dretzka, Detroit.

The Bureau of Laboratories is by far the largest and most expansive unit in the department and brings to the front more vividly the great strides in determinative preventative and diagnostic public health work. This bureau maintains a plant on state property 3 miles from Lansing where every known toxin and anti-toxin and every drug known to man that can be used in the prevention of communicable disease is manufactured under Federal supervision and supplied to all physicians in the state free of charge.

To produce the drugs, it is neces sary to raise and care for numerous horses, sheep, guinea pigs, rab bits, beeves, goats and other animals necessary, both in production of toxins and in ferreting out the existence of communicable dis eases through blood tests.

LAPEER MOTHERS TO STUDY YOUNG CHILD

The Michigan department of health has organized Lapeer county into a study club for mothers of preschool age children.

There will be six meetings under the leadership of a good leader, using the plans, organizations and literature sent out by the Bureau of Child Hygiene and Publis Health Nursing.

The county nurse Miss Johnson is supervising the work, in co-operation with the Lansing health workers.

FIVE WOLVERINES NAMED TO OFFICERS' RESERVE

Burba, Detroit, first lieutenant in the dental branch; Thomas Colladay of Flint, colonel of infantry, Willis M. Brewer of Pontiac, first lieutenant of infantry; Roy A, Panzer of Lansing, first lieutenant of field artillery.

SCISSORS, AX, 4 KNIVES FAIL TO END LIFE

After having used two jackknives, an ax, a butcher knife, a corn knife and a pair of scissors in an attempt to end his life, Andrew Brettan, age fifty-three, farm laborer, near Pontiac is in the St. Joeeph's Mercy Hospital with a good chance to recover.

Brettan was found by his employer, J. W. Oliver, who lives near Birmingham, in the Oliver garage His throat was cut and he had a six inch gash in his head inflicted by the ax. Officers investigating found the weapons used by Brettan in the yard.

SEES RADIO AS VITAL NEED IN CHURCH WORK

Priest Says Success of Religious Stations Is Assured

Radio, within the next decade, will become an absolute necessity in carrying on church work, in the opinion of the Rev. Fr. James M. Gillis, C.S.P., noted Paulist priest and editor.

Father Gillis, who recently conducted a series of lectures in Detroit, bases his prediction on results already obtained by Station WLWL, which has been operated by the Paulist Fathers in New York City for several years.

"The modern radio, reaching as it does hundreds of thousands of persons scattered over thousands of miles of territory, is by far the most effective instrument for the dissemination of information that the church can utilize," he said.

Increases Scope

"For years the Paulist Fathers have made a specialty of lecturing before non-Catholics in an attempt to bring to them correct information concerning the tenets of Catholicism and practices of Catholics.

"Much of the opposition manifested toward the Catholic church is not due to bigotry. It springs rather from a misunderstanding of what the church teaches and what Catholics believe.

"Use of the radio increases tremendously the scope of those who seek to supplant mis-information with correct information and falsehood with truth. It is readily evident that the speaker before the microphone of a powerful metropolitan station reaches more persons than could be reached even through the press of the country."

No Advertising

Father Gillis speaks regularly over Station WLWL on topics of the day, interpreting them in the light of Catholic belief. The Paulist station is one of the few large broadcasting agencies in the United States which has no advertising features, the program being confined strictly to educational and religious subjects.

"The famous Paulist Boys' Choir, under the direction of Father Finn, is one of the most popular features of our station," Father Gillis said. "Cardinal Hayes is also heard over WLWL regularly and on one occasion, at a memorial service for Cardinal Mercier of Belgium, the chief speakers were the Episcopalian Bishop Manning, Rabbi Stephen S. Wise and Bishop Dunn, auxiliary bishop of New York."

Few large broadcasting stations remain on Manhattan Island, Father Gillis said. They have found that the tall steel buildings there interfere seriously with their work and most of them have moved to Long Island, New Jersey and other places.

No Empty Churches

"Contrary to what might be expected, radio transmission of church services does not result in empty churches," Father Gillis said.

"Some persons undoubtedly prefer to stay at home and follow the services with their receiving sets, but we have found that the vacant pews left by these are immediately filled by those whose interest in the services has been aroused through the radio and who have determined to attend the services in person."

In addition to his work as a lecturer, Father Gillis also edits the "Catholic World," a widely-circulated monthly magazine.

The program was under the direction of the lady teachers: Miss Anson, Mrs. Randolph and Mrs. Smith.

H. Lane of this place who intended to commence using cigarettes with the beginning of the New Year, claims that he has had a change of mind upon the subject. The change of mind is due to the fact that he received a nice little bottle with a high priced nipple upon it at the Christmas exercises Friday evening. Lane now says that he expects to carry a bottle of sweetened water around with him rather than being burdened by the cigarettes and gives the following reasons for his position: In the first place, when a fellow smokes cigarettes in public, he is making use of his own personal liberty at the expense of the fresh air liberty of other people. In the second place, sweetened water is less expensive than cigarettes, besides a fellow looks more grown up sucking a bottle than he does sucking cigarettes. In the 3rd place, if all people who are now using tobacco would only carry bottles of water instead of carrying tobacco, fire departments might become useless for in event of fire enough water could be obtained from the people assembled to put out any ordinary blaze.

Beacons on Great Air Routes

Just as radio beacons are beginning to dot the various coasts as an infallible guide for seafarers, so must aviation radio beacons soon dot the great air routes. By means of the radio direction finder, the airman can aim his ship for a given point with accuracy. Fog and blackness of the night need hold no terrors for the airman working with radio beacons. An important point to remember is that the airman, unlike the ocean navigator, navigates in a three-dimensional medium—the horizontal directions are complicated by the addition of the vertical direction. One of the most serious factors in flying is this navigation in the vertical plane and many fatal accidents are due to lack of judgment as to the exact distance between airship and ground below, in a fog. With radio beacons, however, it is possible to guide the airman safely back to the ground, despite fog or blackness or other elements contriving to rob the airman of his sense of sight and direction.

Word was recently received here from Mrs. Sarah J. Nutten who has for several years resided at Pueblo, Colorado, that the latter is in very poor health and is confined to the bed under the care of a nurse.

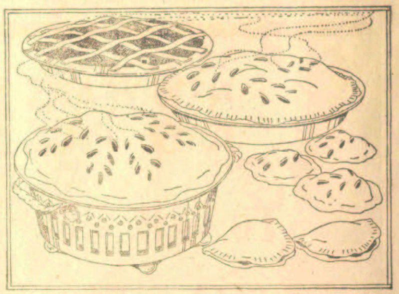
Last Saturday at high noon at the home of the bride's parents in Lansing occurred the marriage of Miss Mary Wooton to James Cretcher of Ithaca. The ceremony was performed by the father of the bride, Rev. I. R. Wooton. Mr. Cretcher is a teacher in the Ithaca schools and the bride, who is a niece of Mrs. A. J. Calhoun of this village, is teaching in Lansing.

The Christmas meeting of the Sorosis Club held at the home of Pauline Gray was an event to be long remembered. Miss Marian Johnson of Hillsdale who graduates next year from the Michigan University at Ann Arbor, very graciously and sweetly entertained the Club with musical selections, Moonlight Sonata Beethoven, and three preludes from Opera eleven by A. Icriabine. Members who missed the December meeting, also missed an unusual treat. A playlette on Womans Clubs was a fine addition to the program and added much fun Those taking part were Mesdames Franks, Cox, Pendell and Carney

Great Work Unfinished

Raphael's "Transfiguration" hangs in the Vatican gallery in Rome. It was left unfinished, at Raphael's death, which occurred in 1520.

Pies and Pies and Pies!



RASPBERRY, blueberry, strawberry and peach—and last, but by no means least—the universal favorite, apple pie! Old-fashioned pies, deep-dish pies, turnovers and tarts—there's a generous choice of form and flavor, whatever your preference may be.

Pie for breakfast? Well, and why not? Fruit, raw, cooked or canned, is the conventional introduction of most breakfast menus. Pastry, Danish or American "coffee cakes," often follows the cereal. Those astute folk who combine their fruit and pastry in a flakey, nourishing pie are to be commended for their wise devotion to a custom purely American, even though it be tradition in one locality and legend in another! But certainly pies for dessert recognize no boundaries and are deservedly popular. Imagine a Thanksgiving without pumpkin pie—Christmas minus the lavish mince!

All Favorites Available

Time was when housewives watched with eager eyes for the first sign of fruits to appear on vines, bushes or trees or in the market. Happily now all the favorite's—Father's, Son's and Daughter's—may be had any day of the year, thanks to modern science which preserves the finest of every season's yield in air-tight containers, ready to use with the turn of a can opener. The best of the red fruits are to be found in gold enamel lined cans. Peach pie is one of the most delicious of the many pies to be made from canned fruits. Here is an especially good recipe:

1 can sliced peaches
½ cup brown sugar

Drain juice off peaches. Put it in saucepan with sugar and boil to a thick syrup. Add peaches to syrup and cook for five minutes. Line a pie-dish with pastry. Fill it with the mixture and bake in hot oven (45 degrees Fahr). Let cool, top with whipped cream and serve cold.
